I closed the kitchen window with a bang, turned on the oven, and flattened my stomach against the pane, wondering what sort of day Sandra Keith was going to have for her debut. It was sunny and cold, a still coldness with no winds moving under the remnant blue purity of the sky. Across the white-brown stubble of lawn, ever-green's stood somber and firm. Beyond the evergreens, beyond the deserted tennis courts, beyond the empty blue cavern of the swimming pool, and still farther beyond the sloping rise of the hotel's terrace, I could see the wide flat roof of Pamela's limestone mansion. I could see even more that last: a florist's truck at the rear door. And I could also see the tall arched windows of the dining room, the door of the solarium which opened onto a patio and the unusually extensive grounds with its grove of pines and Ivy and . . . I could see too much from that kitchen window. Far too much, as I was to realize later when a great sharp-edged rock struck me with the shock of a bomb.

Dad was busy behind me in the kitchen, slick-slacking around in his scuffs and the night-shirt that was to play such an instantaneous role in the swiftly approaching mystery.

"If your palpitating females could get a load of you now, Mr. Randolph," I told him pertly, "I'm afraid your flutter days would be over. You'd take on a very low visibility—"

He cocked a blue eye at me. "think so?" he said. And then: "That reminds me, young lady. What possessed you to tell that gorgeous blond Sunday night I couldn't speak a word until I had popped my false teeth into my mouth. I practically broke a jawbone proving you were wrong."

"I told the red-head," I informed him blithely, "that you'd had your face lifted twice and, if you had it done again, we'd probably have to stand on a ladder to look you in the eye. Mother gave me a bonus for that one!"

"Hoity cow!" exclaimed Dad, pouring himself another cup of black coffee. "And how's your love life? he asked

"It isn't," I said. "Red, hair freckles and green eyes combined seems to prove a flop as man-bait. I'm widowed and a pet." It was the truth at that—then, for I hadn't met Steve Gibson. I'll get around to him soon.

After breakfast I listened to several radio commercial programs which climbed me with the fear of gruntes, flu, sore colds and a slow but complete physical disintegration. Feeling tranquil and neat, and wondering if I'd last the year out, I bathed and dressed and reached the office at 9:15, knowing that my day was going to be hectic as Eleanor's.

I was covering the luncheon at noon and a club meeting at two where Mother was going to instruct three hundred women in the handling of incendiary bombs. On schedule I was to cover three cocktail parties and four debuts—all four girls furnishing mere misfits in this bumper crop of 1944.

At five o'clock a copy boy had my story and I was driving in front of my flat in a cab, hurrying home. . . . Wanting to make Sandra Keith's debut reasonably early. In split second time I had bathed, and dressed with a lot less fuss for the formal—for Pamela had asked me to stay on for her small dinner following the debut. Then with a black velvet cape around my shoulders I was edging down the long, red-carpeted hotel corridor.

Japan Standing Like a Boxer Waiting Punch

BY STUART UNDERSHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Japan resigned to many a staggering Allied blow from recent months, sits like a boxer awaiting the next punch.

Where will it fall, and who will launch it? Not one opponent but many, circle Japan. Will British land and naval forces strike from the southeast, or are more Japanese defences in the Pacific to be assaulted?

The disaster that appears to be rushing on Germany underlines the mounting danger. Britain has given repeated assurances that additional manpower and naval strength will be diverted to the Pacific theatre once Germany has been defeated. Canadian officers are learning the technique of Pacific fighting with American units and the R.C.A.F. is studying flying requirements in that theatre. Australian army, navy and air force units already are in operation with the Americans in increasing strength.

Unpleasant things are doubtless brewing in the Southwest Pacific area, where Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten is Allied commander-in-chief, with headquarters in Ceylon. Admiral Mountbatten, noted for his audacity as a destroyer and then a commando force commander, is likely to hit with some savagery at the Japanese in his theatre.

A "ghost army" of Chinese jungle Raiders, made up of Indian troops who speak Burmese, harries the Japanese lines during the operations in which the Americans drive out of India's Manipur province, sounds like a typical Mountbatten innovation. The terrain of the country, killing hundreds of Japanese reinforcements in Burma.

The Japanese also are anticipating "Operation Zipper" against the area north of Australia, according to a recent Tokyo dispatch broadcast by the Japs. Dec. 26th, 1941, Japanese reports say, the Japanese Philippines and Formosa to meet the Allied invasion. Japan is believed to be bolstering defences in the Canton area against a feared landing on the China coast.

A recent Associated Press dispatch from Chungking said the feeling in the Chinese capital was that the Allies would attack through the Japanese island positions in the Pacific must likely because of the unexpected enemy weakness enabling a speedier execution of plans to defeat Japan by land, sea and air.

Lake Publish was about the only buoyant gold issue. It climbed to 2.35 for a net gain of 18 cents. San Antonio added 5 cents, and Rouyn Merger was up moderately. Last mentioned rose 10 cents and issue, down about 5 cents included Bralorite, Hargraves, Macassa, O'Brien, Bear West, Malartic, Pioneer and Central Patricia.

Steep Rock sold back 20 cents to 4.05 and Waite-Amulet lost 10 cents. Base metals were rather steady.

Utilities and steels were soft spots in industrials. Senior oils and papers were steady and the bank group was firm. The new 410-par value shares of the seven chartered banks that are listed on the Toronto Exchange will be called for trading on Sept. 1. The exchange of each old share into 10 new shares possibly explains the recent activity and strength of the bank group.

Secret Papers Find That Ridicule is Strong Weapon

By FRANK LOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London (CP) — They're reminiscent in appearance of high school newspapers. Canadian teen-agers put out this, in a sense, but with a hellish enthusiasm, these papers that spread the gospel of truth in occupied Europe, but the message of resistance and hope they carry makes up for the crudeness of their structure.

Now on display here, these samples of Europe's underground press represent the resistance movement in ten occupied countries. No two are alike—not only do they differ in language but their make-up and means of printing have no similarity. Hatred of Germany is the lone consistent note.

All are makeshift affairs. Put out under the constant threat of the Gestapo with death the reward of a by-line, they are mimeographed sheets, in most cases, printed on two pages of rough paper.

A few, though, are more pretentious. Those are the ones put out by men and women who have been fortunate enough to find a hand press and a couple of cases of type. Thus, in such cases the type isn't always uniform, with the result that in print a word will look like this: "Gfide ghould." But that doesn't matter.

Fooled the Germans

Most clever of all the samples—which come from Belgium, France, Poland, Greece, Luxembourg, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia—is a faked copy of the German-controlled Le Soir from Belgium. So cleverly did the underground copy the official product their resistance paper was delivered by the unsuspecting Germans themselves.

Strongest weapon of these papers is ridicule. Hitler, Goebbels, Goering are held up in crude caricatures and in stinging articles as the colossal frauds they are. This ridicule is, for the most part, not bitter—as surprising as that may be how the people responsible for the papers have suffered.

In fact, the only underground paper consistently tough in its outlook is the Yugoslav weekly. There ridicule is replaced by grim exhortations to kill the invader and fighting ardor is heated with atrocity stories.

One paper, De Frie Danske, claims to have a foreign correspondent in Berlin from whom he gets his sobering accounts of the Nazi capital under the heading "Letter from Berlin." Publication of this secret paper is said to be 100,000. Typical Danish underground papers would be glad to claim. Other clandestine papers with large circulation figures that range from 192,000 of Czechoslovakia's Rude Pravo to 2,000 for the average pamphlet type.

U.S. Sculptor Has Many Gifts

By CHARLOTTE FITZ HENRY
(Associated Press Writer)

Chicago (CP) — Maude Phelps Hutchins, sculptor, painter, housewife and mother, is bringing the art world to a boil again—this time with her life-size bronze study of a 17-year-old boy.

The boy, lean, taut, knowing and a little angry—all these things in bright blue metal decked with gold lead—is the centre of a five-piece show by Mrs. Hutchins now on display in Chicago's Roullier Galleries.

One Chicago critic looked at "The Boy" and wrote, "It is more than just another statue. It is a timely psychological document. Mrs. Hutchins' bronze youth may help break through the lethargy that has settled over the art world since the lights in Europe went out."

Two years ago this tall brunette sculptress, wife of President Robert Maynard Hutchins of the University of Chicago, created a similar stir with a similarly realistic bronze nude. "Young Mother." Both bronzes have a lively, graceful beauty and a sharpness unsoftened by any feminine touch.

Since then magazines have published about a dozen of her poems and frequent exhibits of her oils, water colors and sketches have appeared throughout the United States.

This combination of several muses is the same woman who can say apologetically, "I'm sorry I couldn't answer your phone call yesterday during the storm. I had to take pets of the children."

Has Three Children

She has an 18-year-old daughter and two younger ones, takes seriously her job as the wife of the president of one of the largest universities in the nation—and manages to look 25 years old.

Maude Hutchins insists she has been an artist all her life, yet she didn't get any training until after her marriage in 1921, and her first work was produced later than that. Her grandfather, with whom she spent much of her girlhood didn't think it was proper for girls to go to New York to study.

"But I felt I was an artist all the time," she said. "I really was quite annoyed once when I was a little girl and somebody asked me what I wanted to be when I grew up. I thought it was obvious."

At Yale University's School of Fine Arts, where she completed a five-year course in half that time, she learned to make her own armatures, metal pipe and wire skeletons which serve as foundations for a piece of sculpture, to bake terra cotta, and to mix whatever materials her work required.

Maude Hutchins is superstitious about discussing her work before she begins it. She never makes a sketch or a model before she plunges into the final work. She has her model pose when she bends the pipe into shape for the armature, then never changes it by so much as moving a John.

Mrs. Hutchins rotates between sculpture, her sketches and water colors, prefers to "do people", and constantly uses her husband or one of her three daughters as models.

She works in old slacks and a blouse in her garage studio which is strictly a business establishment. No tea, no visitors, just a dirty little place."

Mrs. Hutchins says she writes all the time, but she won't admit she's a writer—"as yet" — despite the fact she's had numerous poems published and one play accepted for publication.

'Mark Down Your Boche Not Enough To Go Round Say Handbills in Paris

New York, Aug. 22 (CP)—The BBC said today that hand bills had appeared in Paris, as the underground prepared for the day of liberation, which carried the message: "Mark down your Boche. There will not be enough to go around."

The broadcast, recorded by the office of War Information, said that the Germans, fearful of the Parisians, were camping in the Place De La Concorde. Strong-points have been established in the big hotels, which overlook the esplanade, and the Crillon, it was said, and the Gestapo have fortified their main office, while tanks and artillery have been reinforced by the German army.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Bomber Group, (CP) — Promotions have been announced from flight Leader O. F. Arbuckle, Toronto (930 Queen St. East). Ont., since he became a pilot officer at Moncton, N.B., in February, 1943. He's a squadron leader and flight commander with the Bison squadron today at the age of 23, and has 14 operational trips behind him including raids on Berlin, Frankfurt, Leipzig, Ludwigshafen and Kassel.

The tall young Torontonian, known as the squadron's best dressed man, joined the RCAF from high school in September, 1941, trained first at Victoriaville and Windsor Mills, Que., was a flying officer by November, 1942, a flight lieutenant by February, 1944, and got his 3½ ribbon this July. He flies Halifaxes.

A Porcupine squadron Halifax and a Goose squadron Lancaster, notching a Halifax of the Bison squadron limping back to Britain after a recent attack on an enemy target in Europe, gave it close escort all the way home.

The "Wally," badly crippled by flak, was en route to blast a flying bomb emplacement, one of its gasoline tanks was holed by flak, and when only a few minutes from the target more flak caught the aircraft. The compass was knocked from its position and a large chunk whisked past the wireless operator, Warrant Officer F. A. Mc-Neffs, Toronto, (300 Withrow Ave.). The starboard inner engine ceased functioning, but the port outer, although hit, carried on. Three gas tanks were punctured and 35 various sized holes torn in the aircraft's fuselage.

The escorting pilots were Sqdn. Leader Jack McNeill, D.F.C., Calgary, Alta., and F/O. Austin Quinlan, Toronto (71 Hampton Ave.)

The "W-Debs", RCAF's latest show to reach Britain to entertain Air Force personnel will soon be touring Bomber Group stations, the all-girl show has proven a knock-out wherever it has appeared.

Maybe Bomber Group has an entry in the Irving Berlin or Rudolph Friml in its midst. But whether or not this is so, F/O. L. "Jock" Bennett, native of Flower Station, Ont., and with Windsor, Ont. (2337 Howard Ave.) as his present home, has had his biggest thrill yet. His song "Oh Canada, Yours," for which he wrote both words and music, has been placed over the B.B.C. by a London band, and has been sung by Helen Raymond, noted B.B.C. artist on shortwave to North America.

Spencer, who is with the Bluenose squadron, played with Windsor bands before joining the RCAF. Pilot Officer Spencer will soon be flying over Berlin, Munich and Nuremburg—in theory, at least. Now touring Bomber Group stations, the all-girl show has proven a knock-out wherever it has appeared.

COSTA RICA TURTLES BREAK BEEF PRICES

San Jose, Costa Rica (CP) — Gigantic tropical turtles are helping Costa Ricans solve the problem of high living costs.

Three months ago two railway refrigerator cars unloaded at the port of Limon saw gigantic turtles, weighing 300 to 400 pounds, as abundant as bananas. They got a small loan and began shipping turtles from Limon. Turtle meat began to be sold in meat markets and soon became an acceptable substitute for beef—at nine cents per pound. Turtle meat sales also have brought down the prices of eggs and beef nearly 25 per cent.

ROMANS BATTLE NAZIS

Begin March On Hungary Following Unconditional Surrender on Allied Terms

Sudden Exit From War Threatens Whole Nazi Position in Balkans

By WADE WERNER, AP STAFF WRITER

London, Aug. 24.—(AP)— Romania began marching against Hungary today after her sudden exit from the war against the Allies in an about-face which direly threatened the whole German position in the Balkans.

Bucharest broadcasts said Romania in fact had turned co-belligerent and there were reports of spreading fighting in the rich oil and wheat kingdom between Romanian and German troops.

Bulgaria, already outflanked in the south by Turkey's severance of relations with Germany, was perilled from the north as well and in an entirely untenable position.

Yugoslavia and Greece, where pro-Soviet armed bands have waged long and bitter guerilla war against the Nazi yoke, were in positions for quick liberation.

Russian armies driving swiftly toward the heart of Romania already had cut the punch which finally blew down the house of cards which deposed Premier-Marshal Antonescu had built in Romania.

Capitulation Imminent

The Germans announced that Romania's capitulation had been foreseen. The Berlin correspondent of Aftonbladet of Stockholm cabled that "German counter measures can be expected." This dispatch said Berlin circles blamed Romania's move on the Russian offensive, Turkey's break with Germany, Bulgaria's peace overtures and the sustained Allied bombings of the Ploesti oil installations.

In mid-afternoon, Berlin broadcast an official D.N.B. dispatch giving the Germans their first news on the Romanian situation, indicating that King Michael's new government actually was a "Communist regime". The broadcast said rioting had broken out in Romania.

The Germans were plainly in panic as the Balkan cracksup seemed to be repeating the history of 1918 when the collapse of Bulgaria shocked the Kaiser's generals into a quick plea for peace.

Finnish Minister To Sweden Leaves For Helsinki

Stockholm, Aug. 24 (AP) — The Finnish minister to Sweden, Juho Kirjokonpi, suddenly departed by air today for Helsinki in a journey obviously connected with the subject Finland out of the war.

Reliable sources said, however, that "as far as we know, the Finnish government had made no attempt directly to contact Moscow up to Thursday morning."

It was Kirjokonpi's second trip to Helsinki in two weeks.

Optimism here was that Romania's exit from the war might hasten action by Baron Mannerheim, president and chief of Finland.

Finnish sources said the old leader had "cleared the desk for an armistice." Reactionaries, Germany and the Finnish premier-minister to the United States Hjalmar Procope were reported taking advantage of inactivity by pushing a "go slow" propaganda campaign regarding peace.

A foreign office spokesman was quoted as saying that if the report were confirmed "then naturally it must influence Finland's position."

Helvudislandsbladet, the only newspaper commenting, said "Romania changes the whole situation and the road is now open to the Danube. The Finnish people now look to the government and Finland's first man."

Gen. Alexander Asks Italians To Render Aid

New York, Aug. 24. (AP) — The United Nations radio at Algiers said today that Gen. Alexander, Allied commander in Italy, had called upon patriot forces operating in northern Italy to halt or destroy the "considerable number" of German troops attempting to flee from southern France.

The broadcast, reported by United States government Monitors, quoted Sir Harold as saying air cramped the Italian border.

"Your orders are—they must not pass", the general declared. "Attack the enemy wherever you can, wherever you can. Get hold of him. Pursue him and set on whatever the Germans are fleeing".

The Allied command urged the Italians "join hands with the French patriots".

'Nomad Squadron' Wipes Out Company Nazi Infantry, 20 Tanks

With the R.C.A.F. in France, Aug. 24 (CP) — The RCAF reported today that the "Nomad" squadron of an RCAF Typhoon fighter-bomber wing wiped out one company of German infantry and destroyed 20 tanks in an attack southeast of Villers Bocage.

The attack was led by Flt. Lt. Kenneth Fort, of Dunnville, Ont., who later reported: "We think we clobbered it all right. But it was hard to get to and from the target."

The wreckage of 30 tanks was found in the woods by army men and the airmen claimed-two others.

Typhoons carry two 1,000-pound bombs each and the pilots have the velocity finder still in dive-bombing targets indicated by forward troops.

YANKS TAKE SALON ON RHONE ROUTE TO INNER FRANCE

American Forces Are Reported to Have Reached Swiss Frontier

POILUS ACTIVE

By (GEORGE TUCKER)

(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, Aug. 24. (AP)—U.S. forces striking 25 miles northwest of Marseille toward the Rhone river route to interior France have captured Salon, headquarters announced today, and French Poilus who captured their own home town are driving westward into the lower Rhone valley".

An direct Associated Press dispatch from Geneva declared American troops had reached the Swiss frontier, presumably in an advance from Lyons, 75 miles below Geneva. Earlier the Swiss radio had placed U.S. troops at Annecy, 18 miles northeast of Grenoble, and within 15 miles of Lyons. The latter town, 240 miles southeast of Paris, was reported in Patriot hands.

(Algiers radio declared American in the Southwestern corner of France had fallen. So Allied troops and the French. These reports thus picture-ed a pincers to chop off southern France.

Near Natural Gateway into France

Salon, 25 miles below Marseille and 20 miles from Arles at the south end of the Rhone, a natural gateway into France.

Headquarters gave no details of the French drive westward from Marseille toward the lower Rhone. The French units, it declared, were mopping up German pockets in the general line pointed to the east.

There was no official word, on U.S. mobile columns that seized Grenoble, 140 miles north of Marseille and within 240 miles of a junction with the armies in western France.

Collaborating with the fast-stepping Allied columns were artillery bombers which attacked two bridges ahead of the German pioneer civilians, headed apparently for the Riviera beaches. Other reconnaissance flights at rail centres in south France and found a good target at Montelimar, 60 miles north of Paris, where German troops were reported massed.

There was no report yet of how many Germans had been done to Marseille, normally a busy industrial city.

Seen at Marseilles.

As long ago as Wednesday noon the French and Americans had joined hands in the city's outskirts, after overwhelming the suburbs of Mont de Fos and Gardanne and Bois Des Ceaux.

Paul Ghali, Associated Press Correspondent, said he and four other correspondents, breakfasted at the extreme front line of the battle for Marseille, saw the attack unfold step by step.

"The Germans fired 37-millimetre guns virtually point-blank into a column of their own soldiers who were taken prisoner by the French and were being marched along the street," Ghali said. "Behind the French soldiers, hit in this barrage, was thrown a couple of hundred men and died before he dropped".

Now is Time To Muster Strength And Unity for Final Blows—Stimson

Washington, Aug. 24. (CP)—War Secretary Stimson said today Allied military victories coupled with the liberation of French forces have shattered German hopes of making a prolonged stand even in northern France.

The Secretary of War told a news conference:

"This has been an historic week the climax of the battle of northern France, the forward surge of the Allies in southern France, and now Romania's abandonment of the Axis.

"On every side Germany weakens. Now is the time for us to muster all our strength and unity for the final blows. . . .

In the midst of success, he reminded, it still is necessary to remember that a substantial number of the German and German 19th Army in the Calais area were not yet in combat. Stanford units on the Seine River he said, they undoubtedly will seek to reorganize each 7th Army units as manage to escape from Normandy and increase their strength.

"Allied air and ground forces, with tremendous and mounting power," Mr. Stimson said, "are in the midst of effectively destroying the enemy and crush the ability of the Germans to make a prolonged stand in Northern France.

RUSSIANS SWEEP TOWARD HEART OF OIL, WHEAT BELT

Drive Deeper Into Romania To Expel Germans From That Country

75 MILES FROM SILESIA

Moscow, Aug. 24. (AP) — Captures reported hostilities spreading between the troops of Germany and Romania today while two great Russian army groups swept toward the heart of the oil and wheat kingdom in drives apparently aimed at trapping any Nazis in their path.

Companion offensives in south and north Poland continued apace.

Troops which seized Debica were declared overrunning hundreds of German war factories, 150 of them in Debica alone. Red Star said the Lwow-Krakow railroad bristled with German war plants of all kinds. The advance moved within 75 miles of Tarnow. Farther north, Russian columns were within 35 miles of Krakow and 78 of German Silesia itself.

Northeast of Warsaw, the Red Army drove within five miles of the important communications city of Lomza, 30 miles south of the East Prussian frontier, in an offensive gradually pressing German armies defending that Reich province and Warsaw.

Nazis Train Guns on Romanians

Captured Romanians said the Germans had trained their guns on them, seeking to blot their treason with some blood. Many Romanian units were reported raked by machine-gun fire.

FRENCHMEN SEIZE LYON REGION AND PERPIGNAN CITY

French 2nd Armored Division and Some U. S. Units Enter Paris

3RD FRANCE LIBERATED

London, Aug. 24 (CP)—The French 2nd armored division and some United States units were reported to have entered liberated Paris today, while Berlin admitted elsewhere inspired by the news that their beloved capital had been freed, were said to have seized the entire Lyon region and the city of Perpignan from the hated Nazis.

Advices from Paris said a French soldier of legendary fame, Brig.-Gen. Jacques Le Clerc, headed the forces in the capital. Perpignan is the city on orders from Lt.-Gen. Bradley, 12th army group commander.

Charles Collingwood, CBS correspondent, radioed from the front near Paris that Gen. Bradley decided for a time when Germans negotiated by the Germans with the French forces in the interior expired Wednesday. It was disclosed here that Gen. Bradley had ordered certain U.S. units to enter the city with the French armor.

Gen. Le Clerc.

Gen. Le Clerc, a dashing cavalry officer who escaped from the Germans after the fall of France to fight in the African campaign, is known as Gen. De Gaulle's "right arm." Le Clerc is not his real name, but a nom de guerre assumed to protect his family in France.

The Germans were reported using their armistice with the F. F. I. to withdraw their forces which had been battling with and south of Paris, and the order to occupy the city was issued.

French Call For Help In Paris

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Aug. 24 (CP-Reuters)—Paris has not been liberated and the French have called for Allied help because the Germans have made an Armistice with French forces of the city, disarmed the police and threatened to destroy everything, it was stated here today.

The request has been being furnished.

It was emphasized, however, liberation of Paris is not in itself a major objective, for Allies' main aim is annihilation of the German armies.

Headquarters said that while French resistance groups hold Paris the city could not properly be considered liberated and that Allied troops were fighting into the capital.

The Supreme Command said that French underground leaders after four days of heavy fighting with the enemy signed an Armistice in which the Germans agreed to evacuate the city but the agreement was repudiated the agreement and continued fighting. The Germans have had called on Allied troops for help.

The Allies were not meeting on the city but up to a late hour today no word had been received at Allied headquarters that they had actually entered it.

WANT NO FALSE CELEBRATION

Flotilla Bombed Eight Hours.

An American armor slashed 28 miles down the Seine, the harried Germans put out a big fleet of light service seaplanes and other vessels from the threatened port on the Seine estuary.

For eight solid hours, R. A. F. coastal command planes in relays bombarded the flotilla, sinking and damaging an undetermined number of ships. Five were set afire.

The air forces announced late today that 50 German planes were destroyed in operations from British and French bases yesterday and that in the first 70 days of the invasion, 1,641 German planes had been destroyed in the air and on the ground. In the same period 1,256 Allied craft were lost. The figures included strategic bombing and tactical warfare.

Swift R. A. F. Mosquito bombers made a "concentrated" attack on Berlin last night.

Light fighters and bombers roared over the battle area during the morning.

Mosquito bombers raised the 24-hour bag of German tanks, barges and vehicles destroyed or damaged in the battle area. An Allied air offensive knocked out two of the last remaining enemy points over the Seine near Elbeuf.

Johnson's Score 37 Huns Downed, His Canadians Down 32 in Day

London, Aug. 24 (CP). — Wing Cmdr. J. E. (Johnny) Johnson's score of enemy planes downed in air combat stood at 37 today after his squadron destroyed two German planes yesterday, but it was all a mistake that he was identified as a group captain.

A check today revealed that the English-born leader of an R.C.A.F. fighter wing was identified as a group captain through an error in transmission of a story from the Normandy battle front by a group commander.

Canadian fighter squadrons under Johnson ran into 80 enemy fighters yesterday north of Paris—FW190's and ME109's—and downed 23 of them. The wing leader from Notre Dame, Wellington, Ont., himself shot down a tally of 37 planes him well in front of all Allied airmen in this war with the exception of the Russians.

Maj. Alexander Pokryshkin, a Russian flier is the leading ace, with a score of 59.

Other leading airmen are Group Capt. A. G. (Sailor) Malan, a South African, whose score now is 32, and Wing Cmdr. Colin Gray, Saskatoon, Sask., Verdun, Que., with a total of 31.

Malan now is not on operations but Gray and Beurling have retired from the R.C.A.F. at his own request, Beurling's retirement, however, he had been for some months an instructor at Canada.

The late Flt. Lt. Brendan (Paddy) Finucane of the R.A.F. had an unofficial total of 33 at the time he was killed in action in the Channel "it is best," he said, "the error won't help us with Johnson, who is a little ace on the press since somebody wrote a story about him getting particularly for Manitoba."

Mannion was the name of the celebrated German ace supposed to be flying defence in the Caen sector of the Normandy front and while Johnson and his Canadians would like Mannion for a victim, nobody is sure that he is on operations and that they are out to get the Luftwaffe ace.

It was that point which nettled Johnson.

NAZI 'DUNKERQUE' ATTEMPT FROM LE HAVRE STRAFED

Vast Armada of 2,300 American Planes Hits Targets in Germany And on Czech Border

FACTORIES DEMOLISHED

London, Aug. 24 —(AP)— A vast armada of 2,300 American planes smashed a dozen targets in Germany and on the Czech border today, while the R. A. F. bombed and strafed a Nazi "Dunkerque" attempt from the great port of Le Havre at the mouth of the Seine, only a few miles beyond advancing Allied lines.

The attacks in Germany by 1,300 heavy bombers and 1,000 fighters constituted one of the greatest assaults ever mounted by United States air forces.

Targets included synthetic oil plants at Merseburg, Misburg and Ruhland in Germany and Brux on the Czecho-Slovak border. Also bombed were an oil refinery at Fretial near Dresden; two airplane plants at Brunswick, German Air Force stations at Kolleda near Merseberg and Langenhagen near Hannover, a radio factory at Celle, Fleet dispatches said the Germans, now denied ferry crossings in the Rouen area, had started to others, still more difficult, nearer the Seine itself.

The supreme command still had no news of any Allied troops in Paris, but said they were moving on the capital, liberated by French patriot forces. It reported also that a French armored division was given the honor of entering Paris first.

Drive Toward Reich Border

Southeast of Paris, the Americans thrust two more apartheard bridgeheads across the Seine in the vicinity of Fontainebleau. There was also further news of an American armored column which last was reported 15 miles beyond Sens, 65 miles southeast of Paris, in a drive aimed toward the borders of Germany.

An Algiers radio broadcast said that Gen. Eisenhower's important French port on the Garonne River near Bay of Biscay, has been captured by Allied forces and French patriots.

Bordeaux is approximately 170 miles south of the last officially reported position of American forces ten miles south of Nantes. Unofficial reports, however, indicate that this force has been striking swiftly southward.

The German air force reacted fiercely toward the latest drive by Americans in the Seine River area, both northwest and southeast of Paris.

The Allied air forces shot down 37 German planes, with the R.C.A.F. squadrons led by Wing Cmdr. J. E. (Johnny) Johnson, an Englishman, downing 23 in battles north of Paris. Four of the R.C.A.F. planes were lost.

Weather Clearing

Lifting clouds yesterday and today indicated the Allied air forces would throw a blockade over the stretch of the Seine River between its mouth and Elbeuf still available as an escape route for the Germans, until ground forces moved in to pin the enemy down.

Fighting in the Falaise-Argentan end of the new trap swung sharply in the Falaise area, reached Le Neubourg, 11 miles south and slightly east of Elbeuf.

Forces of the 1st Canadian Army pressed forward against heavy German resistance along the river, extending southeastward from the Pont Audemer area at a point to Deauville.

Elements northeast from Orbec reached the suburbs of Thiboutere and another push northeast of Pont-Audemer, both wide river in the north.

The most stubborn German resistance was in the area between Pont Audemer and Lisieux, with the Germans resisting further crossings of the Touques River with heavy mortar fire.

Have Only Three Roads Left

The German forces now have only about three roads leading to the Seine and those may be cut at any moment.

The result of the rapid Allied drive was that the Germans across west and south of the Seine have been compressed into an area about half as large as they had occupied.

Elbeuf was one of the main German escape areas across the river between Rouen and Lisieux, with the Germans resisting further crossings of the Touques River with heavy mortar fire.

The American column which occupied Elbeuf also seized Louviers, nine miles southeast, on the Eure River.

While there was no immediate confirmation at Allied headquarters of the capture of Bordeaux or of any new landings in the Bay of Biscay area, all areas south of Paris to the Spanish border now are considered by Allied leaders as only a question of time until the German garrisons holding out in Atlantic ports and cities are liquidated.

Armored Columns Capture Elbeuf In Swift Advance

Bordeaux Near Bay of Biscay Falls to Allies and French

By WES GALLAGHER, AP WAR CORRESPONDENT

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Aug. 24 —(AP)— American armored columns streaked down the Seine valley towards the sea today, capturing Elbeuf, 30 miles from the river's broad mouth, as Allied forces rapidly enveloped another huge force of German troops in Northern France.

Elements of the 1st Canadian and British 2nd Armies drove deep indentations into the western fringes of this new trap for the remainder of Field Marshal Von Kluge's German 7th Army still remaining west of the Seine river.

The Canadian and British forces, however, met some determined resistance, particularly east of captured Lisieux and along the line of the Touques river.

Destroy 100 Vehicles

A new lightning American advance of 25 miles from Lisieux to the position of German Elbeuf, south of the river, and drove the Germans from positions where in the last few days they have been hurriedly ferrying out their fleeing troops. It was area Allied airmen destroyed 500 German vehicles yesterday.

At Elbeuf the Allies stood within 30 miles' airline miles of Rouen, old capital of Normandy and a city of more than 100,000 which straddle a bend in the river to the north.

Fleet dispatches said the Germans, now denied ferry crossings in the Rouen area, had started to

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

FIND TACKS IN TIRES

Two district farmers are on the lookout for the pranksters who, it is believed scattered thumb-tacks wily nilly along Front Road near the Canadian Department Stores property. Mr. Reg. Meadowcroft harried extracted three of the tacks from a front tire, while another found nest in a rear tire of his buggy. Both state they had driven along Front Street yesterday morning.

THURSDAY MARKET

Produce prices on the city market showed little or no change from Tuesday levels today. Melons noted a further slight decline with good quality, small canteloupe selling from three for a quarter upwards. Watermelons were not plentiful, but were popular, at from twenty cents up.

Tomatoes held at one dollar the bushel and potatoes at $2 for a like quantity. Peck-lots were offered at 50c. Corn was available at from 35 to 30 cents the dozen ears. Blueberries and blackberries were offered at 35 cents the basket with early peace selling at 20 cents per same quantity. Apples, cooking and eating variety priced at 35 cents the basket. Cucumbers were to be had at any price, and bunched vegetables sold at prevailing levels.

Graduate Nurses Urgently Needed In Hospitals

An urgent appeal to return to nursing in hospitals is being made to all graduate nurses at present working in other occupations, according to instructions recently issued by Selective Service headquarters.

Nurses willing to return to hospitals will be entitled, as soon as the present emergency is over, to reinstatement in their present employment. Supplementary allowances in the form of living expenses for living expenses, uniforms will be granted under the latest plan.

Provision is being made for the transportation to the place of employment and return transportation, if the nurse remains with the hospital as long as she is required without cost to the nurse.

A separate allowance will be granted if the nurse is required to live separately from persons who are dependent on her for support while some extra compensation will be given if the nurse suffers a loss in earnings by rejoining her profession.

Canning Factories In P. E. Require Considerable Help

With the harvest labor situation apparently well in hand on farms of the district, this condition does not apply to many canning factories which now have, or will soon, reach the peak of processing activities.

A city factory states that it has sufficient help for its immediate needs, but the picture in Prince Edward County is vastly different. An Ontario Department of Agriculture official who recently surveyed conditions in the sister county, stated that all canning factory employees are urgently needed, in that part of this district.

So urgent is the need that some factory owners have arranged for canning in their own immediate locations on the locale of their plants.

Howard Weese, Redneresville has transformed his "Carnation Inn" into a camp for his employees. Here are beds and board for thirty-six employees who pay $4.50 weekly for the privileges. Shower baths have been installed and the camp is operated under the standards of the Y. W. C. A.

Mr. John Weese, who operates factories at Shannonville and Big Island, has arranged similar facilities for his Big Island employees in surrounding farmhouses. Wellington, Greer Brothers have made similar arrangements in the vicinity of their village plant.

Receive No Reply From Tomato Growers On Help Needed

Farmers and tomato growers of the district are apparently not crying aloud for help in harvesting the tomato crop. If inquiries sent out by the committee appointed to assist the farmers in obtaining help to garner this vital crop can be judged a guide, the growers are able to harvest the yield with little or no outside help.

Three hundred specially prepared questionnaires, arranged by officials of the Hastings County Tomato Growers' Association and Agricultural Representative Lynn Fair, Stirling, were mailed to growers of this district with respect to their needs for harvest help, To date not one has been filled out and returned to the committee headquarters at the Belleville Chamber of Commerce offices.

On the other side of the picture, some hundred potential tomato pickers reported for harvest duty, with no farmer "takers." Manager J. O. Herity, of the Chamber of Commerce, stated that five hundred here, from all walks of life and including high school and other students are available if the need arises.

Dry weather, it is claimed, has had some effect on tomato crops, while in some instances, blight has taken a mild toll.

Taxi Driver Has Jitters After Babe Born in Cab

Once upon a time there was a taxi driver. He was a strong person, with a bright outlook on life. Business was good. His cab was kept in A1 condition.

Today he is nearly a nervous wreck. For he has a problem on his hands. He can't between going out of business or adding certain equipment for the comfort of the travelling public.

Last night he had a call. Putting on his best "meeting the public" face he picked up his fare. The destination was the hospital. The fare, a lady, was in a hurry to get there.

Arriving at the hospital he heard strange noises. He cocked his ears like a spaniel scenting a bird. Grown-ups just didn't make noises like that. Cold chills began to chase one another up and down the jehu's spine. He had heard of such things occurring in the movies, but it just couldn't happen to him.

From the rear of the cab came a whimpering. He turned, glared. It wasn't true, or was it? It was. Starting with a single face, he arrived at the hospital with two, and he didn't stop on the way.

A few minutes later a naturally worried father paced "Agony Lane" in the hospital. Alongside was a head-scratching taxi driver. The father swayed at a courage-oozing smile. The taxi driver couldn't see anything funny. She was in the hospital.

What to do was the question. Should he quit? Or should he not two? There was nothing in the fare calendar to direct extra income for special deliveries. A doubt and he'd stop on the way.

Advances on Both Sides of Arno R. Made by 8th Army

Rome, Aug. 24 (CP) — British and Indian troops of the 8th Army have made a considerable advance on both sides of the upper Arno River in Italy, in the face of lessening enemy resistance, and have captured a number of important points including Monte Foresto, headquarters announced today.

Minor gains were reported in the Adriatic sector, where Polish and Italian troops established themselves firmly on the banks of the Metauro River about 12 miles from the coast. Allied forces are in contact with strong enemy positions on the north bank, the bulletin said.

Considerable enemy patrol activity was noted around Florence, in which the Reds were said to have suffered casualties.

Allied headquarters disclosed that "indiscriminately aimed enemy shells fell in most of the central and southern portions" of Florence yesterday. "The extent of damage and casualties was not announced.

German losses in a brisk battle for Metauro on the Adriatic front were high, with 80 dead found in front of a single Polish regiment. The Poles in this sector have taken nearly 800 prisoners in ten days.

"DEAD" BABY LIVES

Happy in her bed at the Norwegian hospital is Mrs. Edwin Apman, wife of a navy man now overseas. For her baby that was born "dead" is alive and well. Born at the Norwegian hospital at 2 a.m. the baby did not begin to live and breathe until 5.30 a.m., and then only after nurses and doctors had used every trick in the medical book in the fight for life. Metrazole, most powerful respiratory stimulant, injected into the infant's shoulder is credited with winning the battle.

30 More Persons May Be Buried In Wrecked School

Freckleton, England, Aug. 24 (CP) —With 54 bodies removed already, fear was expressed today that 30 more persons might be buried in the wreckage of a school and nearby shack but destroyed yesterday when an American four-engined bomber crashed in this Lancashire gardening village.

Known dead included 35 children—all but six of the village's 41 youngsters between four and six years of age. The other victims included nine American servicemen, two R.A.F. men and eight civilians.

The tragedy occurred when the aircraft was caught in a sudden storm on a local flight.

American troops stationed nearby rushed to the scene and helped move women and children out of danger from a 100-foot wall of flames which enveloped the school and nearby houses.

MARMORA

Constable's Wife Fond of Knitting For War Effort

Marmora, Aug. 24—Mrs. Albert Bartlett, wife of Marmora's night constable has been making good use of her ability to knit which she says she has inherited from her mother, Mrs. James Vineff, since 1941 she has been spending many hours a week knitting for the Marmora Red Cross Unit and by the record of her work until this year. To date, this year she has knitted twenty-nine sweaters and five pairs of socks.

In 1941 she knit about eighty pairs of gloves and sixteen helmets. In the case of the gloves fifty-one sweaters were knitted by her in that period. A great incentive to her war effort is the fact that she has thirteen nephews in the service, eight of whom are overseas at the present time.

British Insist On Early Decision On Security Plan

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP)—Evidence from Romania that Hitler's Europe is beginning to collapse on political as well as military fronts gave new emphasis today to British insistence at the Dumbarton Oaks Conferences for early decisions on postwar world security organization.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, Chief of the, British delegation, has taken the lead in urging that at least a part of the security organization should be set up soon to span the gap between the end of the European war—which he says may come sooner than expected—and the formal creation of a new international body by peace treaty.

The British view, it was learned, is in line with the feeling in some quarters of the American delegation that the British-Russian-American-Chinese pledge made at Moscow to co-operate in the enforcement of peace after the war now should be given some specific and organized form.

This has raised speculation in diplomatic circles here that the spade work of the Dumbarton Oaks talks might be followed relatively quickly by a meeting of President oosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin to confer and reset in-action three-power co-operation in the European area in the immediate post-war period.

Comrades in Arms Sending Parcels To War Prisoners

Ottawa, Aug. 24 (CP)—Canada's armed services at home are getting ready to with a "Merry Christmas" to their brothers-in-arms who will spend their Yuletide in Nazi prisoner-of-war camps.

Defence headquarters announced today that Canadians can send parcels, now coming off assembly lines in an ordnance depot here, will leave the capital shortly for Canadian prisoners in Germany as the gift of the three armed forces. The parcels also will go to merchant seamen held prisoner in the camps.

Details Released.

Details of the shipment were released by the committee for the protection and welfare of Canadian prisoners of war in enemy hands.

The individual parcels will include underwear, socks, sweaters and dish clothes, soap, shaving stick, tooth brush and powder, and a Christmas gift of canned chicken, maple butter and plum pudding.

The gifts were selected by Lieut. Eva Cousman of Montreal, secretary of the Welfare Committee, who said that "cheerful colors" were chosen for the dishes, plate, cup and saucer and bowl "for psychological reasons."

Christmas Cards Sent.

"The dishes and cutlery not only brighten meals for the Canadians but in many cases replace utensils they have had to improvise due to shortages in Germany," she said. "The tin of maple butter was chosen for its Canadian atmosphere."

A Christmas card bearing the signature of Prime Minister Mackenzie King will accompany the parcels. Its message reads: "Canadians everywhere join me in sending you heartiest Christmas greetings and the best wishes for the New Year.

It will be the second year that Canada's armed services have sent Christmas parcels to captives in Germany, augmenting those of the Red Cross, the Y.M.C.A. and other sources. Cost of the project is shared by the services and the transport department, in proportion to the number of servicement and merchant seamen in each prison camp.

Order Coal Now Or Do Without Says Mr. Howe

Ottawa, Aug. 24 (CP)—A warning that a householder who fails to order immediately "may find himself without coal when the severe weather sets in" was issued, by Munitions Minister Howe in disclosing there will be a reduction in shipments of Welsh coal and American anthracite this winter.

Mr. Howe said declaration of the coal situation will make it doubly necessary for the householder to place his order at once, to accept his coal whenever a dealer is able to deliver it and to take whatever suitable fuel a dealer may be able to supply.

He emphasized that the shortage of blower coal was "particularly serious".

As the Allied armies advance farther into France the demands on Britain to supply liberated areas rise sharply and shipments of Welsh coal to Canada have been greatly reduced.

At the same time Harold Ickes, United States Fuel Administrator, has said that America faces a six million-ton shortage of anthracite, and shipments to Canada will have to be reduced.

Severe Complacency.

"I am convinced that in spite of repeated government warnings there are still many householders who are complacent about the coal situation," said Mr. Howe. "Last year the co-operation was splendid and the deliveries were spread over the summer, fall and winter. Thus hardship was averted.

"This year there will not be as much hard coal available. Delivery then and there is much scarcer than in 1943. Full co-operation has not been forthcoming. And it is possible that the winter will be more severe. The results may be very serious, unless every householder recognizes, at once, that it is in his own best interest, to take delivery of his fuel just as soon as the dealer is able to supply it."

Canadian consumption of coal has risen rapidly since the outbreak of war. In 1938-39 a slightly underaverage total of 38 million short tons was used. Two years later the total was 41 million and for the last coal year it was approximately 44 million.

French Canada Holds Celebration

(By The Canadian Press)

French Canada, with a monster demonstration in the capital of what once was called New France, led Canadians in celebration of the liberation of Paris and there were indications today that further ceremonies across the Dominion soon would mark the occasion.

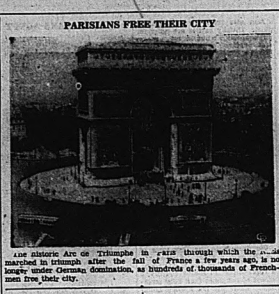
First official government comment of the freeing of the French capital came last night from Prime Minister Mackenzie King, who said upon his return to Ottawa from a trip to Quebec that he was particularly pleased that Paris had been liberated by the French people themselves.

He said he felt this fact would give the French people a great sense of satisfaction and have a "liberalizing effect all over Europe."

Automatic Radio Compass Now Used on Great Lakes

Cleveland, Aug. 24 (AP)—The automatic radio compass, originally designed to keep aircraft "on the beam," now is being used to help protect Great Lakes waterborne cargoes.

W. P. Hillard, General Manager of Bendix Aviation Corporation's Radio Division, yesterday reported a radio compass was installed on a Pere Marquette ferry operating between Michigan and Wisconsin ports, and "is the first use of the standard aircraft navigation aid on scheduled ship operations."



Hillard said the system, tuned to a broadcasting station on shore, provides a continuous bearing on the direction being followed by the ship.

BOARD ACTS TO STOP CROWING

Chicago, Aug. 24 (AP)—The village board of suburban Kenilworth can't stop roosters from crowing or hens from cackling. But it has acted to stop their making noises near residences. To quiet the complaints of residents the board ruled roosters must step back 300 feet from the nearest house before they can crow. But hens can cackle within 200 feet of residences.

PARISIANS FREE THEIR CITY

PARIS LIBERATED—BORDEAUX INVASION!

Paris, the capital of France, has risen up and freed itself of Nazi domination, and a report from Spain says that a new invasion front has been opened near Bordeaux, on the Atlantic coast. As arrow (1) indicates, a force from that region could greatly affect the invasion picture, should it move northward. The Riviera is the scene of the drive on the south coast (2) from the Allied beachheads established by French Forces of the Interior, currently active in southwestern France, are reported holding Toulouse. In the north (3) the drives moving on Paris are gaining momentum toward the liberated city.

The Japs are making this determined drive in an attempt to knock out American air bases in southeastern China.

ON WAY TO PARIS?

Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander-in-chief of the French Forces of the Interior, and newly appointed military governor of Paris, has announced that his Parisian forces have liberated the French capital. He is said to be on his way to Paris.

U.S. Election Results May Not Be Known Till Dec.

(Copyright 1944 by The Associated Press)

New York, Aug. 24.—(AP)—Because 11 states will not count their soldier votes on election day, Nov. 7, it is possible that the outcome of the presidential election will remain in doubt for several weeks after the polls close.

Should the election be unusually close, the winner might not be known until as late as Dec. 7 when canvass of Nebraska's absentee vote could determine whether the state's seven electoral votes would be cast for President Roosevelt or Governor Thomas E. Dewey respectively, Democratic and republican nominees.

These possibilities grow out of an Associated Press survey which indicates that more than 3,000,000 men and women in the Armed Forces have applied for absentee ballots and that, by the most conservative estimate of state election officials, approximately twice that number will vote in November.

The soldier vote is likely to be decisive in most of the 11 states which do not immediately tabulate it, and the 11—including Pennsylvania with 36, California with 22 and Missouri with 15—have a combined electoral vote of 116. President Wilson's electoral margin over Charles Evans Hughes in 1916 was only 22.

Of the states which will defer their soldier vote count, eight gave President Roosevelt a total of 99 electoral votes in 1940. The other three gave 17 to Wendell L. Willkie, the republican candidate that year.

New Flying Suit Has Built-in Tourniquets

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP) — A flying suit containing "built in tourniquets" has been designed by two navy doctors as a possible aid in the control of bleeding among wounded pilots during combat.

"Combat pilots often return to their carriers or land bases with wounds that are bleeding freely," declared Lt. Cmdr. Russell G. Wiley and Lieut. William F. Leach in the Navy Medical Bulletin.

"Many of them do not have the strength, means or time to control hemorrhage while flying the planes."

To meet such emergencies, the doctors said they had designed a flying suit bearing four adjustable tourniquets, one on each arm and leg. Any flying suit, they said could easily be converted into the type described.

POLICE COURT

Edna Flagg, Toronto truck driver, was convicted of an unusual charge when arraigned before Magistrate H. L. Lloyd in County Police Court here today. Flagg was charged with unlawfully and knowingly making a false statement to police authorities thus causing them undue efforts, contrary to the Common Law of England. He was found guilty and given a year's suspended sentence upon the payment of costs, amounting to $29.50, which included compensation to police authorities.

Provincial Constable Mackey told the court that Flagg had come to the O.P.P. office and related a story about having his transport "hijacked" near Colborne one night recently. Provincial Constable Goshbirge added to the later learned Flagg's story had been fabricated. The accused man said he had been stopped by two men in a sedan and was late on his run so reported the incident so he would not be penalized by his employers.

Loomis Reeves, Madoc, was sentenced to three months in the county jail upon being in default of $100 and costs, after he had imposed by the court after he had been convicted on a liquor charge. The charge read accused Reeves of consuming for beverage purposes alcohol containing methyl hydrate, commonly known as anti-freeze. "Why I read in the papers about people dying from drinking that stuff. Do you think I'd drink it?" stated Reeves.

"Yes, I do, replied Crown Attorney Denman before the conviction was registered. Provincial Constables J. J. Hatch of Madoc preferred the charge and produced a goodly collection of empty anti-freeze cans and empty bottles that bore rubbing alcohol labels, as evidence.

"There is no work in Montreal," pleaded Robbo Barlash, of that city, when he appeared on a charge of vagrancy and pleaded guilty. They want to be in the munitions factories around the district, take jobs down to the Selective Service office and they'll put him to work," he ordered His Worship. Police carried out the instructions.

Gerald Howland, Kingston, and John Sheridan, Stirling, pleaded guilty to charges of careless driving and paid the conventional "five and costs," while Harvey Lewren and Morley Brant, both of the Tyendinaga Reserve, paid $23.75 each after being convicted of failing to report a motor accident. "These two men were passengers in a vehicle involved in a serious accident last month. The driver of the vehicle, one B. Brant, has fled the reserve after being charged with Constable Harry Caldwell, who preferred the charges after an extensive investigation, revealed.

Jack McMillan, Belleville, paid a speeding charge amounting to "ten and costs."

A Kingston Juvenile was sentenced to the Guelph Reformatory after being convicted of stealing from summer cottages in the Vanalstine area in Lennox County. Inspector T. D. Huston, of the Children's Aid Society, suggested the term, while Provincial Constable Stan Palmateer preferred the charges.

NAZI 'DUNKERQUE'

Rome, Aug. 24 (CP) — The United States 15th. Air Force chewed off another hunk of the Luftwaffe's fast-dwindling power in Central Europe yesterday, destroying 45 enemy planes in the course of sweeping raids which included a heavy attack upon the Vienna area.

The battle of attrition over Central Europe thus has cost the Nazis at least 102 planes in the last two days, in addition to 106 reported destroyed recently in raids on airdromes in Hungary and Yugoslavia.

Allied air losses likewise have been heavy. Twenty-nine aircraft were lost yesterday and three during the preceding night.

Rockets Used

Enemy fighters attacked formations of heavy bombers over Vienna with rocket and cannon fire yesterday, some diving in to within 100 yards of the big bombers.

Targets of the Allied planes included the Markersdorf airdrome west of Vienna, with the grounded planes, personnel and installations were strafed, and the Moosbierbaum oil refinery six miles south of Vienna and unspecified military targets in the Vienna industrial district.

The Allied force numbered some 500 planes.

Hotel Operator Held for Murder

Puppet Regime Of Hungary In Bad Plight

London, Aug. 24 —(AP)— The Nazi-controlled puppet regime in Hungary ordered today the dissolution of all political parties, apparently fearing intrigue to take Hungary out of the war.

The cabinet order was published in the official gazette and as reported by D.N.B., official German news agency, decreed that every political party "irrespective of its political outlook," must dissolve at once.

Property belonging to former party organizations was frozen pending further disposition, severe penalties were provided for violations.

Drew Critical Of Restricted Sale of Spirits

Toronto, Aug. 24. (CP)—Premier Drew announced today he has made another request to the federal government to rescind the Order-in-Council which restricts sale of spirits to 70 per cent of the amount in the year ended Oct. 31, 1942.

"I have pointed out to the Dominion government on more than one occasion the need of similar action, but added weight has been given to my arguments by a request just received from a member of the Dominion government that the Ontario authorities increase the ration to one of the large headquarter's messes", said a statement from the Premier's office.

"This request from the Dominion government explains that the ration now available is inadequate".

The statement said that conditions in Ontario have "become increasingly serious" as the result of the restrictions. He referred to seizures by police of liquor "bootlegged into this province from the province of Quebec" and deaths in other provinces from the drinking of alcohol substitutes described by the statement as "blockbusters, torpedo juice' and other similar descriptive names".

In the United States the government acted on a recommendation of the Senate that increased supplies of, liquor be made available "for the use, purpose of maintaining law enforcement and avoiding further extension of the growing evils of arbitrary restriction."

The restrictions are no hardship the statement said "because of the very large production of commercial alcohol for war purposes, they are making substantial profits without selling beverage alcohol at all."

The statement said also that there is more beverage alcohol in bond in Canadian warehouses than there was at the end of the first year of war.

On March 31 this year, there were 36,392,170 gallons of beverage alcohol in the warehouses of Canadian Distillers. The total Canadian consumption for the last fiscal year was 2,520,296 gallons."

The statement concluded: "There is no reason of any kind for the continuance of these restrictions. They are creating much suffering, vice and a disrespect for law. The distillers alone benefit from these restrictions. It is to be hoped that the Prime Minister of Canada will recognize the need for immediate action and accede to our request."

The Liberation of Paris

One of the greatest hours in the war has struck, Paris has been liberated from the German occupation after more than four years under the Nazi yoke. Armed and unarmed sons of France have thrown off the shackles of the Hitler armies. The rise of the sons of France was admirably timed. With the smashing forward of the Allied armies in the west, sweeping away the carnage of German armies, the time came for the Free French and the underground to rise. It was a scene with which France has before been familiar, it meant a repetition of that in the days of the French revolution but this time it was the detested Hun, the aggressive neighbor from the east who was being battered and smashed. The perfect organization of the French Forces of the Interior was set in motion with 50,000 armed men striking when France's great hour struck and to aid them were hundreds of thousands of others with whatever arms they could get and many unarmed. Once again the people of France have smashed tyranny, the worst tyranny.

France possesses one of the greatest marching hymns in the world, the Marseillaise, and it is fitting that at this very time the city of Marseilles, where the song was first sung in 1792 by officers of the garrison of Strassbourg, should also be feeling the power of French freedom. Throughout the French capital and throughout France the music of liberty is ringing out of freedom was heard, "That day of glory has arrived." Paris is free and it means France will soon all be free. The despicable tyrant is in retreat and Frenchmen in underground and in armed organizations are sweeping forward to the sweetest revenge they ever enjoyed as they punish the invader armies.

Some potent facts are revealed by this rising of the people of the capital city and of the forces which have been trained and held in leash for this momentous time. It is the amazing power of Frenchmen to defeat the tyrannous oppression of the Hun. France has shown that she is strong. Prime Minister Winston Churchill saw that four years ago when France collapsed. Remember Churchill's great words of prophecy in a radio address of appeal to the French nation on October 22nd, 1940, a few months after the Hun occupation of the northern half. Then Mr. Churchill said:

"Frenchmen! Rearm your spirits before it is too late. Remember how Napoleon said before one of his battles—these same immortal words are so beautiful today—three to one at Jena and six to one at Montmirail—'Never will I believe that the soul of France is dead; never will I believe that her place among the greatest nations of the world has been lost forever.'"

Mr. Churchill said, "Have hope and faith for all will come right.

"Remember we shall never stop, never weary and never lie in any our whole people and Empire have bowed themselves to the task of cleansing Europe from the Nazi pestilence and saving the world from the new Dark Age that would follow it. The German-controlled wireless tells you, that we English seek to take your ships and colonies. We seek to beat the life and soul out of Hitler and Hitlerism—that alone, that all the time, that to the end.

"We do not covet anything from any nation, except their respect."

And he closed with these words to France: "Good night, then. Seek to gather strength for the morning, for the morning will come. Brightly will it shine on the brave and the true; kindly upon all who suffer for the cause; glorious on the tombs of heroes—thus will shine the dawn.

"Vive la France! Long live, also, the forward march of the common people in all the lands toward their just and true inheritance and toward the broader and fuller age."

France has arisen, Paris has risen and thrown out the Hun. What satisfaction must the British Premier have in this great proof of his faith in France and what must be the pride of General de Gaulle who has always held faith in the revival of France, his native land! The labors he has put into the cause of the Free French organization and the living spirit of the French underground are reaping their great reward, the restoration and revival of France as a living nation, to carry on her great mission of liberty, equality, fraternity.

The great day has dawned. Paris liberation is a fact and a symbol. It speaks to the rest of France where the enemy has a weakening hold, it speaks to the other overrun but never-conquered nations of Europe. The people of France show what vitality there is in the patriot spirit to inspire a nation and a continent to endure. In turn perhaps with the swiftness of a tempest the thunder of others to rise and smite the Hun will come.

It is no wonder that Frenchmen are stalwart and proud at this great time when world history is being made. The hour when France shall be wholly free from the enemy is nearer and the great company of nations against whom Hitler and Germany have banded so terribly will come into repossession of their precious liberty. In Mr. Churchill's words spoken in other days—"The morning will come."

Mobile Churches

Heads of the Church of England and the Methodist Church have stated that the men and women who are bringing about Hitler's defeat are performing a divine service, says The Canadian Baptist.

The Archbishop of Canterbury expressed this view at a ceremony dedicating two mobile churches near London; while at the fifth Methodist Conference to be held in wartime, which took place recently at Leeds, the new president, Dr. W. F. Howard, said in his presidential address:

"No wonder that some of us feel that war, with the degradation it brings, is so terrible that nothing can justify it. Yet the overwhelming majority in the church as well as in the nation, clearly recognizes that, in this conflict forced upon the world by ruthless diabolism, there was but one course to be made. Only by war we can do no other. So help us God! For the sake of the ultimate decencies of life, this conflict must be carried through with unrelenting purpose until that victory without which there can be no peace."

The mobile churches dedicated by the Archbishop of Canterbury, which will soon be on their way to Normandy, if they have not already arrived, are fitted as places of worship. The altars have blue and red satin and velvet cloths and hangings—the colors of the 21st Army Group. When the congregation is large the screens can be moved to open trucks, so that, with the aid of the public address system which each unit carries, a big open-air service can be held. The trucks are also equipped with gramophone discs of bell peals and organ music which can be amplified.

So that chaplains can tour the battlefields, living with the men for weeks together, the inside of the vans' poles and canvas to form penthouse extensions when camp is pitched.

Churchill and Lloyd George

(Ottawa Daily Free)

Mr. Churchill paused and dropped his voice. "I have also to announce to the House . . . ." So, in the conversational tone which accords so well with the feeling and manner of the House of Commons, the news was told. The whistle of astonishment at the size of the armada was almost one. So was the shout of delight when Mr. Churchill spoke of the advices he had had that everything had been going to plan. His speech over, he went across to Mr. Lloyd George, who was walking out on the arm of Mr. Clement Davies. At first Mr. Lloyd George did not notice who was taking his other arm. When he did, his handshake was as good to see as it must have been to Mr. Visitors who heard the statement included General Montgomery's brother, Captain the Rev. C. R. Montgomery, formerly rector of St. Andrew's, Ottawa, who had come to lunch with an M.P. and just happened to have hit on D-Day.

Pet Cats Become Fur

Cats may have nine lives, but not in London. The cat is disappearing in droves, particularly after air raids. Inquiry by E. Keith Robinson, secretary of Our Dumb Friends' League, led him to advance the theory that the cats are being killed specially for the fur trade. He pointed out that cat-skin coats are on sale in shops, and asked just where the skins come from. Fur trade members convened on the mystery and announced the cats come to the trade from recognized slaughterers. They added that they had noted "a large increase in the number of cat skins available during periods of air raids."

PEACE-TIME QUARREL

I want to get on to the peaceful days
When the world of our problems are:
Can we sit through a couple of picture plays,
And who is to have the car?

I want to get back to the old home-life
And the usual family jar;
Who cut wire with the carving knife?
And: "Pa, may I have the car?"

I have hated war and I always will;
Forever its crimes I'd bar,
I long once more for this family thrill:
"You said I could take the car!"

And also from the inhuman quiet. Usually battles are noisy for miles around. Then it is known as fast warfare a battle sometimes leaves a complete vacuum behind it. The Germans with sand and tight-lit out until they see there is no hope. Then some get up, and run, rest pull and run for miles. Shooting stops. Our fighting moves on after the enemy, and those who do fight the battle, the finish of the battles, will not catch up for hours.

There is nothing left behind but the remains of the fireless debris, the smashing and the flowers, and silent silence.

An amateur who wanders in this vacuum at the rear of a battle has a terrible time. He is loneliness. Everything is dead —he sees the machines, the animals—and you alone are left alive.

One afternoon we drove in our jeep into a corner. In the town, two little rural villages of gray stone were demolished, heartbreaking heaps of still smoking rubble.

We drove into the tiny town of La Delliniere, and there were flags at the "T" of two gravel roads, a rural village in rolling country, a village of not more than fifty buildings. There was not a whole building left.

Rubble and broken wire still littered the streets. Blackish gray-stone walls with no roofs still smoldered. Shattered trees still lay in the street, helmets and broken rifles, sabers scattered them. There was not a soul nor a sound in town; the town was lifeless.

We stopped and pondered our way, and with trepidation we drove on out of town. We drove for a quarter of a mile or so. The ditches were full of dead men. Still lying around one without a head or arms or legs. We could not—couldn't say anything about it to each other. We asked the way, and went on slowly, for there was an uncertainty in all the silence. There was no human sign of movement anywhere.

Seeing no one, hearing nothing, I became fearful of going on into the unknown. So I suggested: Just a few feet ahead of us was a bricked American tank, still smoking, with the turret blown off.

Near it was a German horse-drawn ammunition cart, rolled down. In the road beside them was a shell crater.

To our left lay two smashed artillery pieces, splinters of wood. Most of them was more than 30 yards from the road. The hedge was broken, but we could see over. They were both British fighter planes. One lay right side up, the other on its back.

We were just ready to turn around and go back, when I spied a lone soldier at the far side of the field. He was standing there looking across the field at us like an Indian in a movie. He was not a dead.

And we stood there talking in the lonely field a soldier in coveralls, with a rifle slung over his shoulder and a British helmet on his head, shouted:

"Hey, there's a man alive in one of those planes across the road! He's been pinned there for days!"

We stopped right in the middle of a sentence and began to run. We hopped the ditch, ducked our head under the wing of the upside-down plane. And there, in the best hour, came the climax to what certainly was one of the really great demonstrations of courage in this war.

The Silence Which Follows Recent Battle Arouses Sense of Loneliness

(By ERNIE PYLE)

On the Western Front.—(By Wireless.)—Now, you're wandering around our very far-flung front lines—the line that the press correspondent rapid war are known as "fluid"—you can always tell how recently the battle has swept on ahead of you.

You can sense it from the little things even more than the big things—

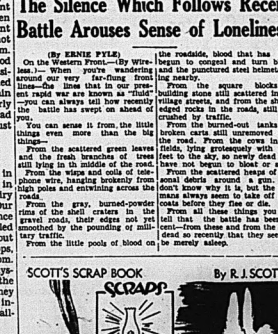
From the scattered green leaves and the brush branches of trees still lying in th middle of the road.

From the wisps and coils of telephone wire, hanging brokenly from high poles and entwining across the roads.

From the gray, burned-powder rims of the shell craters in the gravel roads, their edges not yet smoothed by the pounding of military traffic.

From the little pools of blood on the roadside, blood that has only begun to congeal and turn black, and the punctured steel helmets lying nearby.

From the square blocks of building stone still scattered in the village streets, and from the sharp-edged rocks in the roads, still unbattered by traffic.



From the burned-out tanks and broken carts still unremoved from the fields. From the trees in the fields, lying grotesquely with their tops to the sky, as newly dead they have not begun to bloat or smell.

From the scattered heaps of personal debris around a gun. I don't know why it is, but the German soldier seem to take off their coats before they flee or die.

From all these things you can tell that the battle has been recent—from these and from the inert dead so recently that they seem to be merely asleep.

HOW'S YOUR TUBING?

Entire families sometimes show this tendency to an early attack of sclerosis, wrote the famous Dr. Osler, some fifty-odd years ago. A sclerosis which cannot be explained in any other way than that in the make-up of the machine but material was used for the tubing.

I suspect that few people felt a little uneasy about that bald assertion himself, for he added this significant remark: More commonly the arterio-sclerosis results from the bad use of good vessels.

Arterio-sclerosis, lest any acquaintance, parent or good friend of college graduates be alarmed about it, is a gradual loss of the elasticity of the walls of the arteries from the placement of the cells of the muscle coats with inelastic fibrous tissue which makes the vessel walls harder and less resilient—hardening of the arteries is an accompaniment of old age which everybody who lives long enough must have sooner or later. It is not to be confused with high blood pressure, real or imaginary, and it has nothing to do with the chimney or thickness of the blood nor with the amount of blood, that is, whether the individual is plethoric, normal in blood, or anaemic or pellid.

By the best of good vessels Dr. Osler meant overeating, indulgence in alcohol, overwork of the muscle and the stress and strain of modern life, high-pressure life. It is clear enough what he had in his two mean. But just what Osler had in his mind when he mentioned overwork of the muscles and the stress and strain of high-pressure life he did not explain.

So far as I can learn there is no real evidence that intellectual work, or do the hardest kind of muscular or physical work are more likely to give arteriosclerosis than are individuals who do only light work.

Concerning the stress and strain of modern life" or "high-pressure life" I confess I'm just too dumb to say anything. To my crude way of thinking it is just a lot of malarkey—a silly way to flatter the conceited bigshot if you are eager to keep him as a client.

Dr. Osler spoke of the onset of physiological arteriosclerosis as an accompaniment of old age, depending on the quality of the arterial tissue (vital rubber) the individual had inherited and as an inevitable process, the expression of the natural wear and tear to which the tubes are subjected.

After all, hardening of the arteries should occasion no more concern or worry than loss of teeth, baldness, sprinkled gray, dulling of vision, decline in general elasticity and activity and the numerous other changes that must come with the years.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Blood and Skin

Please state the differences that distinguish Negro blood from White blood and Negro skin from White skin. (M. J.)

Answer—There is no difference between the blood of a white person and the blood of a member of any other race. There is more pigment in the skin of a Negro that in the skin of the averages White. But here again, there is no difference between the skin of a light colored Negro or part Negro from the skin of a very dark (brunet) White or part White. Segregation of blood of White does not exist.

Can the blood of Negro donors be used in the practice of which the country

Eye Gymnastics

Some people think that if you exercise your eyes properly you can avoid glasses. Is this possible? (Mr. H.)

Answer—Anything is possible sir—in a clear sense. But in the real Best exercise for the eyes is looking at distant things, scenery etc. No particular eye gymnastics can do more than that does for the rest.

No Heavy

Isn't it about time you explained exactly what is your objection to heavy? (D. J.)

Answer—I have no objection to it. Honey is good food if you like it—just as good as any other sugar or sweet but in no way superior in nutrition. I'm sorry I just don't like watermelon, mashed potato, cucumber, honey or caraway. If you don't mind I'd prefer canteloupe, French fried, shoestring or hashed brown potato, a kind of pickle, maple syrup or old-fashioned molasses (no sulfur distilled) and I detest caraway.

NUMBER OF THREAD

Few people probably understand how the number of sewing thread is numbered.

It is numbered according to the size of the single strands or cords composing the thread. A single strand 840 yards long is taken as the unit. The number is computed from the number of such hanks in one pound of the thread.

For instance, suppose a pound of thread contains one hank of 840 yards. It is No. 1 thread. If it contains 60 hanks, it is No. 60, and so on.

Thus the number increases as the size decreases.

Sewing machines began to come into general use about the time of the Civil War. Their introduction made it desirable for thread manufacturers to produce a thread that would be suitable for machine as well as for hand sewing. Early cotton sewing thread was composed of three strands of No. 40 single yarn, and so on. Domestic sewing machines made it necessary to develop smoother and stronger thread than was possible with three strands.

In 1862 the Clark Thread Company developed a six-cord thread and marketed it as "Our New Thread."

Since the size and number of thread was well established it was easy for manufacturers to make the new six-cord thread the same size in diameter as the prevailing size of the three-cord thread. For that reason the six-cord thread, composed of six strands of No. 60 single thread, which makes the diameter of No. 30 the same as the original No. 30 thread of three strands.

Two years later George A. Clark added to the confusion by calling "Our New Thread" to "O.N.T." with a view of arousing curiosity as to its meaning. The thread was then advertised as Clark's O.N.T. Spool Cotton, and "O.N.T." simply the initials of "Our New Thread." became one of the most popular trade-marks in the U.S.

"O.N.T." was first used in constructing six-cord thread and was not applied to three-cord threads until many years afterwards and then to threads produced only for manufacturing purposes.

The full-skirted gowns had sweetheart necklines, and were worn with white picture hats and accessories. The bridal attendants carried bouquets of Talisman roses.

The groomsman was Corporal Gordon Bannerman, R.C.A.F., of Mountain View, and Corporal William Miller and Corporal Ralph Waters, R.C.A.F., Mountain View, acted as ushers. Wedding music during the ceremony and the signing of the register was played by Professor E. Wheatley, Mus. Bac., A.R.C.O.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, the mother of the bride receiving in a two-piece brown crepe dress with beaded sequin trim, with green and brown accessories and corsage of Johanna Hill roses.

After the reception, the couple left by motor for the Kawartha Lakes, the bride travelling in a bottle-green suit-dress of English wool, with brown hat and accessories.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. R. Myers and Mrs. Charles Shelly of St. Catharines; Miss Mary Fanning of Kingston; Mrs. Gordon Bannerman and daughter, Sandra of Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Oomkes of Oshawa.

BOSS—DINGWALL

A pretty wedding of interest took place recently at the home of the bride's parents in Castleton, when Frances Evelyn Dingwall, became the bride of Edwin Charles Boss, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Boss of Brighton. Rev. F. Darnell officiated at the ceremony, conducted under an arch of evergreens banked with Summer flowers. The wedding music was played by Miss Grace Boss of Toronto, sister of the groom.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in floor-length white sheer with lace insets, a shoulder-length veil of white net fell from a matching halo and she carried an American Beauty rose. Miss Lenora Welton, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid in floor-length blue sheer, with matching veil. She carried Talisman roses. Mr. Russel Baker was best man.

Following the ceremony, the bride's mother received the guests at the reception. She was gowned in blue and white printed crepe, and corsage of pink roses. The groom's mother, also receiving, wore navy sheer, and corsage of yellow roses.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Ronald Massey, Mrs. Russel Baker, and Misses Gladys Welton, Ruth Dunn, Marjorie Carr and Beatrice Bird.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Complexions Need Lubrication

We must remember that skin makes up in just the frosting on the beauty cake. Soap comes first on the cosmetic list, then cold cream. Atmospheric dirt, grime, even all pretty faces, has to be combated with lather. Exposure to sunlight and strong winds will raise the dickens; our best ammunition against the destructive elements is oil, in one form or another.

The facial skin is subject to all manner of disturbing influences. The skin of body surfaces, protected by clothing, does not develop blackheads, enlarged pores, discolorations. It requires no attention other than a daily scouring with warm water and soap. In addition except in cases of old age or ailments emaciation, it does not take on wrinkles.

Neglected, the complexion is bound to deteriorate, especially if the candles are crowded on the birthday cake. It isn't an easy life, responds to and is grateful for faithful, daily attention. Unless the sebaceous glands are ricking, it needs oil, plenty of it. The best way to supply this is to use cold cream or heavier emollients lavishly, with finger tips to encourage the blood streams to hustle about their business.

Something has to be done to make room for the general wear and tear wrought by time and the elements.

The practice of using oil on the skin is as old as the hills. But as oil is not convenient to handle, solids in wax-like form were added to compound a product that would offer resistance to the fingers, and provide the benefits of massage. There are fragrant oils that can be used for a speedy clean-up treatment. They go on and off quickly, but are not as effective as massage. Mention of mors' substance.)) Semi-solids, compounded of the mineral jellies of some women, but you can't tell them that when they look so well. You must have a bit of tutti-fri towelling at hand.

Thin creams are for daytime use; heavy ones for the five minute work out at bedtime. Use soap and water freely, remove the suds with warm water, dry with gentle pats, working from the chin upward. Then on with the beauty food, keeping facial tissues relaxed, smoothing and tapping.

Complexions need lubricating all the year round. In cold weather it is flayed with chapping winds; in summer it is burned and ravaged by the sun.

Make-up should be removed with oil instead of soap and water. If the skin is dry cream should be applied in the morning after the flesh is freshened with cold water.

Swimmers should use an oil before going into the water and after exposure to strong sunlight.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BRECKMAN

A REAL WAR WEDDING

Miss Breckman:

Will you please help a mother whose daughter is to be married soon? My daughter is an officer in the CWAC and she is marrying a lieutenant (14) in the Navy.

The wedding is to be in the afternoon.

1. On this occasion my daughter can go 'out of uniform,' and she wishes to have a reception at home. Do only the one attendant, the bridegroom's mother, and I wear long dresses, although it is proper for the bridesmaid and myself to wear both to wear street-length dresses? Or this summer wedding would you or your daughter prefer the CWAC uniform? I have white linen suits, or white flannel trousers and dark-blue coats? With the bride's white dress, and the bridegroom's uniform, this type of attire would be effective and appropriate, adding a suitable impression of semi-formality. Particularly if you and the groom's mother wear long dresses).

2. As I read all of your questions I wonder if you might like to consider the idea of having the invitations engraved, leaving the date line blank, to be hand-written in when the date is known ... this is often done now. Reception cards would then be enclosed, to send to those to be included in the reception invitation. As a special bow (much more personal than an announcement) these also could be sent to far-away relatives and friends.

However, it is just as proper for you to telephone or write notes. (I'd really suggest all notes, since you must make it especially clear whether you are inviting the guest to the ceremony or to both ceremony and reception.)

3. Yes you, as hostess of the wedding, should write the notes to the relatives and friends of the bride groom's or his mother's list.

4. It is not correct to write R.S.V.P. on an informal note, this is correct for only third-person invitations. Instead include a sentence in your notes asking for a reply ... "Please tell me that we may expect you," or "We are all looking forward to having you say 'Yes'."

5. If you decide not to have engraved invitations enough to send to the entire list of relatives and friends of both families, I do suggest you send formal announcements. These would be sent to all relatives and friends of both families, near and far-away; that is, to those who were not invited to either the ceremony or the reception. (Do not send them to those who were invited only to the ceremony.)

JERRIES KNOW WHEN TO WAVE WHITE FLAG

With the R.C.A.F. in France—(CP)—The latest story in the front line is about two captured Germans who told their interrogator they were minding their own business in their own particular slit trench when they heard a Lancaster flying at tree-top height and coming in their direction.

The two scared Jerries climbed out of their holes.

"Achtung," said one Jerry. "It is now time for us to use 'F 5'."

"And what is Funkey in V 5?"

"V 5," answered his comrade, "is a long pole with a big white flag tied to it."

"Brother I was!" Lt. Bishop wrote home. "I was down about four feet and still going strong."

Katan Wins Over McCready With Same Hold Reversed But Gets Help From Referee

McCready Wins Middle Fall at Bout With Reverse Press

HALL WINS, DRAWS

"I was the victim of a long count. I had Katan well beaten, the fans will tell you that," exclaimed Earl McCready, after Referee Bert Maxwell tolled the terrible count of three over the popular Aurora farmer in the final round of the main bout at the Rume Arena before over 1,100 agreeable fans Wednesday night, as John Katan, Thal village (Palermo) farmer, leaped from the ring and with the attitude of a champion accepted victory.

Frankly McCready tossed and flung Katan hither and thither with gusto and abandon, but it was of little concern to Katan, who smiled and the grunting and groaning was about even. However, after all this was all over "Palermo John" crawled out of a powerless position and gained for himself one of those "crab" holds and it was curtains for the popular Aurora farmer, Mc-Cready, in the first round.

10 Minutes Even Match

Maybe McCready was slowing up, because it took him fully 10 minutes to even matters, during which time Referee Bert Maxwell entered into the mad picture as the third man, arbiter was all but disrobed. Occasionally the gladiators appeared to be in agony, but the final grunting was about even, although it must be admitted Katan groaned the loudest. Why? (You answer that one.) After all McCready did even matters with something of a reverse hold.

It all came about with Katan trying a "he-man" physical effort, which unfortunately being done in the best of behemoth circles these days. Why? Well Katan tried to prove his muscular strength by hurling McCready against the ring posts. "Quiet Earl" merely reversed matters and dropped the patrons' hate in mid-air with an easy reverse press. Now don't go away with the idea, Katan accepted defeat that easy, after all he always has a chance, but Referee Maxwell shook his noggin in favor of McCready and then bedlam broke. Never Left Ring.

Frankly, who and why won the main show is still in the hands of "Arbiter" Maxwell. Both head-locks were applied and Frankly never left the ring prior to the final round, which is best unorthodox in the wrestling rules (save you read best half-nelson). Finally Katan managed to get behind Frankly (230 pounds remember) until the Aurora farmer by clamping whatever he had milked the last Jersey cow or not. While in that position "Big Earl" suddenly recalled he was in the wrestling business and promptly reversed the matters (quick like a bunny) and had Mister Katan at a disadvantage. Here's where Katan's magician came into the picture — while lying on the mat "Palermo John" leaned backwards, Referee Maxwell counted three over McCready and before you know why Katan was beat McCready—or do you? In the meantime Promoter Frank Hall, that villainous grappler from Hollywood who is foul balls, master of Lana Turner in concerned, tried an iron-man act and pretty nearly turned the trick single-handed. Then added to his careers by being the referee of the battling bean you read about!

LESSON NO. 462

By SAM GORDON
The Bridge Expert

All is not gold that glitters. There's many a slip between the cup and the lip. A player's plan may be shattered by some error of an opponent. Particularly, a lucky one.

See what happened in the deal:

NORTH

♥ T 7 5
♦ K 10 7
♣ K J 4 3

WEST
♠ J 8 4 3 2

SOUTH
♠ 9 7 6 5
♥ A K 8 4
♦ Q 8
♣ A 9 6 2

South opened with a bid of one no trump, showing five high cards. North responded with three no trump, showing the other four. And that ended the bidding.

West started out with an opening lead of the queen of spades, looking at dummy, declarer saw seven cold tricks, two spades, one in hearts and diamonds and clubs.

But by his other two needed tricks, he can go to work on spades. And if clubs split unexpectedly, he may get a third trick in clubs. Then we have nine to look for.

South's duck soon won the first trick. And he gave up looking for a third club when east did not follow suit, and told him to go after two tricks in spades or lose a beating.

If you have two higher cards in sequence when you must take a chance, first play one of the higher cards. Take the finesse on the second round. That is the general rule.

South hoped that west held the ace and king of spades, so that if east held the jack. Or the jack if east held the ace. So, he led a spade toward the dummy hand.

When west played small, dummy went with the queen. If east had taken that with the ace, south would later lead a spade and finesse the ten to get two spade tricks.

But east did not take the first spade trick with the ace. Instead, he nonchalantly dropped the six. And south had to take that and put the spade ace. Even as you and I, he did so.

So, south later led another spade and when east played small again, the dummy king went up. With some confidence, perhaps. And great was the joy for south when it takes it with the ace.

Then dummy took the contract by taking only one spade trick. They did it to him. It could happen to anybody. And often does.

AT THE BELLE

JARNICK, "The Purple Heart".

In the ordinary course of events, outstanding motion pictures cast their shadows before them. The public has read about them in the fan magazines, in the syndicated columns of Hollywood writers, has heard about them on radio programs, and in general, has a pretty fair idea of what the picture is all about. The longer the shadow, the more important is the picture likely to be.

That is why "The Purple Heart", which opens today at the Belle Theatre, looms as one of the outstanding motion pictures of the year. For during the past few weeks more space has been devoted to it in newspapers, magazines and columns, and more time on the air, than any screen production of recent history.

In a word, "The Purple Heart" is News—and news of such importance that it has overflowed the movie sections into the editorial pages—has burst from the fan magazines into the nationally-circulated picture—and news weeklies—has spread from radio's film commentators to the straight newscasters and analysts.

The reasons for such unprecedented coverage are readily apparent—"The Purple Heart" is a story that might have been torn from the headlines. It is the story of eight Yanks who bomb Tokyo, are captured by the Japs, and are brought to trial as murderers—not as prisoners of war.

How they defy the entire Jap sea-pire, and literally tie the Jap army, navy and air force into knots, is the astounding climax of the picture, which bristles with the vengeance that will be wreaked upon the island-empire.

Darryl F. Zanuck, who has given you many of your greatest screen thrills, produced "The Purple Heart", with Dana Andrews, Richard Conte, Farley Granger, Kevan O'Shea, Donald Woods, Tom Tyler, Sam Wanamaker and Lewis Leverne. Lewis Milestone directed the film.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Mr. Muggs Steps Out"
(Hard Side Kids)

Those lovable pranksters, the East Side kids, come to the Capitol Theatre tonight as the stars of their newest Monogram film, "Mr. Muggs Steps Out", a picture which provides plenty of laughs, suspense and action.

Lee Gorcey, Hunts Hall and Gabriel Dell, all of the stage and screen's original group of juvenile delight-ful-delinquents, are joined, beginning with this picture, by Ava Gardner, the blonde, unkempt-looking scamp, Billy Benedict. Other important roles are played by Joan Marsh, Noah Beery, Sr., Halliwell Hobbes, Stanley Brown, Nick Stuart, Betty Blythe and Emmet Vogan.

The story finds Gorcey, as Muggs McGinnis, paroled in the custody of a wealthy family for whom he serves as chauffeur. At his request, the rest of the gang is hired to serve tidbits at an elaborate party. At the swank affair the boys become mixed up in a stolen jewelry sequence, and there are many close moments before the real culprits are apprehended at the slightly rough hands of the boys.

"Carson City Cyclone"

The current western attraction at the Capitol Theatre, "Carson City Cyclone" cannot fail to add immeasurably to Don "Red" Barry's prestige as a rarin'-tearin' cowboy star. Republic grooned this lad for starring roles from the outset, and carefully developed his potentialities that they now have on their hands a top box office attraction whose films include not only westerns, but outdoor and mystery dramas as well.

"Carson City Cyclone" gives Don an admirable opportunity to display his versatility and his ability to portray more complex and subtle characterizations than the usual western stars undertakes.

Noah Beery, Sr., is excellent in the role of Judge Preston, and Bryant Washburn scores in a Dr. Lockard and Mr. Ryde type of villain character.

The film was ably directed by Howard Bretherton under Associate Producer Eddy White.

A color cartoon and the serial "Captain America" completes the big western show.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Jive Junction"

You won't see Frans Wald in "Jive Junction", new PRC musical now showing at the McCarthy Theatre here, but his masterful work is part of every scene in which Glenn Strange, 13-year-old sensation, sings a classic aria.

Wald, one of the few living pupils of the great Frans Lisst, came to this country when he was a boy and had given up his work five years ago—to coach Gerra for her film debut. "Gerra girl", says Wald "has a voice in a million, both in clarity and range".

Wald should know. He has coached Helen Gleason and Frederick Jagel of the Metropolitan Opera. He was, at 11, assistant to the Pope Leo XIII's Marchesi, one of the greatest voice teachers in the world. Wald's career began in Vienna where he taught liturgical music. From Vienna he went to Paris where his assistant Marchesi, later opening his own studio, and coming to this country, where he worked with the above opera stars and many others. He also conducted many musical aggregations and soloettes until his retirement.

Second feature "Love Affair" has Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer in the leading parts—a dramatic-romantic conflict of two people hopelessly in love.

The War Today—
Romania's Right-About-Face Material and Moral Blow to Huns

By DEWITT MacKENZIE
(A. P. War Analyst)

Romania's Russia backflop—surrender to the Allies and war against the Germans—will render the Balkan peninsula untenable for Hitler although he will hang on as long as he can as further measure to delay his own capitulation.

The Romanian turnabout represents another great military victory for the Allies, although slightly one has played its part.

The biggest of the Balkan countries has flown the white flag because she has been beaten in battle and was about to be overrun by the Red forces which were bearing down on her from the north. The importance of her surrender is fourfold:

1. Bulgaria, already wavering, may be expected to follow suit now that her next door neighbor has deserted the Nazi camp.

2. Hungary, also one time against Romania's border, now is vulnerable to direct attack—and Hungary is Germany's southern shield. The great Danubian basin, which is a gateway into the Reich, now will be open to the Allies.

3. Hitler will lose great supplies of which he is in desperate need.

4. The moral effect of the world around, especially in Germany and Japan, will be great. It's the end of the Fuehrer's myth of his genius and the Nazis are shaking the hearts of the Nazis and the Nipponese.

Romania has represented Hitler's greatest source of supplies in the Balkans. He expended heartily on the Ploesti oil to keep his war machine running. But Romania produces vast quantities of corn and other foodstuffs which have played their important part in keeping the people of Germany loyal to the Fuehrer. Much of his success in maintaining his home front has been due to the fact that he has kept the masses sufficiently well fed.

DUTTON DECLINES OFFER OF PRES. OF HOCKEY LOOP

Also Resigns as Managing Director of National Hockey League
WILL STAY OUT WEST

Montreal, Aug. 24. (CP)—Mervyn (Red) Dutton decided yesterday that trying to run a business in Western Canada, and heading the National Hockey League just wouldn't mix and consequently has he had declined the offer of the presidency of the hockey loop, as well as resigning as managing director of the league.

Dutton, who took over the job of managing director of the N.H.L. in 1943 and was offered the presidency as successor to Frank Calder at a league meeting last spring. He said he was definitely advised that the summer but yesterday he came up with the idea that since the league looking for a new president, he'd resign and let them get one. "I'd like to stay, but it would leave me too much out of touch with my business interests. I've a mighty tough decision for me to make after 20 years in the game, but that's the way it will have to be."

Several names are being mentioned to fill the post with three newspapermen considered as possibilities. Bunny Ferguson of the Montreal Herald; Sam O'Meara of the Montreal Star, and Robey Riveliere of the Toronto Telegram. Other names which have been suggested are Lorne Worsley of Midland, Ont., former president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and Hewitt of Toronto Maple Gardens; Tex Rickard, Montreal sports commissaire, and Frank Patrick, brother of Lester Patrick of the New York Rangers.

However, the matter of the new president will be left entirely to the board of governors.

Dutton's resignation as managing director of the league will be effective as soon as a successor can be appointed.

London, Aug. 24 —(CP)— The political future of William J. Stewart, 75-year-old M.P. for South Belfast, is in question as a result of a £1,000 fine levied against the Conservative member following his conviction in Belfast court on a charge of conspiring to defraud the War Office in connection with army contracts.

Mr. Stewart is governing director of Stewart and Partners, Limited, a firm which grew from a modest beginning to a position of country-wide importance. Another of its directors, J. M. Reilly, was convicted with Mr. Stewart and fined £500.

Lord Cort, in a farewell speech in the Belfast County Council on assuming his new position as High Commissioner to Canada, hinted that his successor may be Gen. Sir William Peddie, whom Lord Cort followed as Malta's governor and command-er-in-chief.

"I sincerely hope fate will make it possible for me to accept your invitation to attend your victory celebrations when Sir William Peddie, who shouldered such responsibilities, will be once again among you," Lord Cort said.

Jennie Lee, a former Labor member of parliament, is said to be planning a political comeback. With a view of America becoming world of the Labor Party, Miss Lee was defeated last year when she contested a Bristol seat as an Independent. Reports are that she has patched up differences she had with members of her old party and will be back in the fold soon as an official Labor candidate.

Three of Bradford's four M.P.'s plan to retire before the next general election, it was said. They are Sir Ernest Holdsworth, Liberal-National, William Leach, Labor, and Sir Percy Ramsden, Conservative . . .

Maj. F. Keeling (Com. Bury St. Edmunds) has been down-granded by a medical board and granted temporary release from active military service so as to devote full attention to parliamentary and constituency duties.

Post-War Utilization Of Aluminum May Be Quite Difficult

Washington, Aug. 24 (AP) — A government expert cautioned today that post-war utilization of the United States' stupendous aluminum production capacity may be far more difficult and take longer to solve than did the expansion of production from 327,000,000 pounds to 2,100,000,000 pounds in three short years.

Writing in the current issue of "America Speaks," published by the United States Commerce Department, Waldo B. Jonnson, chief of the department's metals and minerals unit, said:

"Obviously the industry cannot immediately utilize in peacetime this unprecedented capacity.

"Airplanes will doubtless yield to other products of the transportation industry, which has been the largest single consumer of the metal."

However, Jonnson said civilian suppliers, given the opportunity of obtaining aluminum at 15 cents per pound—the present price restrictions, may already have developed plans for stimulating surprising lasts tonnage."

CANADIAN FLIERS BASED IN ICELAND SINK TWO ENEMY SUBS IN THRILLING ACTION

Here is the crew of "T for Tommy" skippered by Flt.-Lieut. Robert E. MacBride of Waconda, N.B., which sighted their quarry from several miles away and sprayed the deck with machine-gun fire as they closed in. Later they sank some with depth charges. Left to right they are:

In ten days of action, prior to the air-sea battle in which the late Flt.-Lieut. D. C. Hornell of Minden, Ont., won the V.C., his comrades in the R.C.A.F. Canso squadron, based in Iceland, attacked three U-boats, sank two, probably a third, and sighted a fourth. The submarine pictured here at the "kill" is shown surrounded with horrific-looking depth charges dropped by F./O. Lawrence Sherman of Yarmouth, N.S., and Vancouver, B.C., and his crew. Thirty-five Germans were left struggling in the water. Sherman was awarded the D.F.C. On patrol two days later he sighted another sub, but never was heard from again.

PO. D. J. Dore-MacDonald of New Glasgow, N.S.; PO. Gordon McNulty of Toronto and Margo, Sask.; PO. J. E. (Johnny) Guttormson, co-pilot, of Winnipeg, Man.; PO. W. C. PO. David J. C. Waterbury of Wolfville, N.S., navigator of the Chapman crew, who accomplished the tremendous feat of swimming 150 yards in choppy water burdened with heavy flying clothes to reach the lifeboat dropped the crew. He then paddled the lengthy craft over to his exhausted comrades, thus saving their lives after their aircraft had been riddled with enemy fire.

Wing Cmdr. C. G. W. Chapman of Fredericton, N.B., who was awarded the D.S.O. for a gallant attack in which he made four "runs" over a sinking sub. Badly damaged, it still regrouped. The enemy finally shot him into the bay. Chapman's crew, after days of exposure before the crew survivors, including Chapman, were picked up, nine hours later.

Soon after Moscow's guns boomed out twin salutes to the Rumanian victories, foreign radio reports were heart, telling of Rumania's capitulation to the Allies, but there was no information available from Russian sources.

Will Shorten War

The exit of Rumania from the war has been regarded as inevitable here, however, in view of the final Army's crushing offensive through huge sections of Moldavia and Bessarabia in the last four days. The effect of Rumania's reported collapse in shortening the war could hardly be over-estimated.

The Russian communique declared the Rumanians, attempting to withdraw, were battling with Germans trying to bar them, and that large numbers of Rumanian officers and men had been slain by the Nazis.

Meanwhile, in the new offensive northeast of Warsaw, aimed at East Prussia, the Russians advanced to within eight miles of the German fortress of Lomza, 30 miles south of the Prussian border, and liberated another 80 towns, the bulletin said.

Nazi counter attacks from the suburb of Prage, just east of Warsaw, were driven off, with the Germans suffering sharp losses.

Reds Seize Debica

In still other successes, Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st Ukrainian Army, in a westward thrust along the rail route leading to Krakow and German Silesia, seized Debica, large aircraft industry centre 60 miles east of Krakow and 19 miles east of Tarnow, the next probable objective.

German counter attacks in Latvia, aimed at reaching Nazi Baltic troops, were beaten off and the Russians succeeded in improving their own positions, the communique declared.

Linked with the Rumanian land drive, whose latest successes were announced in Berlin in two orders of the day, were a series of air attacks on Rumanian Black Sea ports. The Russians sank eight ships—an auxiliary cruiser, transport, and six merchantmen, a Soviet is; a transport, two barges, and an other of Salina and a motor ship at Valkov.

BEGIN MARCH

Nazis Form Government

Berlin announced the formation of a "Rumanian national government" but it was not clear whether the regime of Ion Antonescu, dictator of Rumania, would continue. Bucharest, Nazi radio said, was in a state of siege, with a curfew from 8 p.m. to 5 a.m. and ordered all officials to report for duty. Street cars and train traffic were announced as cut off during those hours as well.

As in 1918, however, the dominant factor was military more than political. Two Soviet army groups driving toward Galati and Ploesti knocked out Rumania's defences.

Antonescu was reported to have fled to Germany. The new premier Konstantin Sanatescu, pledged a "democratic regime."

Moscow announced German troops on the south front were killing Rumanian forces seeking to break away from the two-faced Russian offensive driving through northeastern Rumania and Bessarabia to the Pruth river, a total of 170 miles away.

The German military broadcast heard in London said the Rumanian Air Army was fighting beside the Russians, but Nazi radio said other Rumanian troops had marched into Transylvania, ceded northern Rumania in 1940 by Hitler and Mussolini to Hungary.

Rumania's about-face, disclosed by young King Michael in a broadcast to his people, was the work of a new government headed by Gen. Constantin Sanatescu, known as a major prop from Hitler's Balkan ambitions.

Nazis Say Act of Traitors.

The Germans, frantically trying to stem the drive toward the Reich, capitulation the act of a "clique of traitors," and announced formation of a "National Government"—presumably a puppet regime—around which Berlin broadcasts asked the Roman people to rally.

"Rumanian officers and not those of the traitors," urged Berlin broadcasts, "must now take command."

The Federal Communications Commission said the Berlin broadcast was the form of the communique attributed to the new "National Government." The communique, rebroadcast at intervals, said that those men had formed a stituting the new government.

(The Rumanian domestic radio commander of Bucharest had ordered all of the city's cafes to close at 10 p.m. curfew in the city. All train and trolley traffic will be halted during those hours, said the broadcast, also reported by the P.C.C.)

The Swiss radio, relaying Bucharest dispatches, said Marshal Ion Antonescu, deposed Rumanian premier, had fled to Germany—a report indicating he may have been chosen to head the pro-German government.

Barred From Oil.

Apparently, one effect of the capitulation would be to bar Germany from Rumania's productive Ploesti oil regions, where Hitler once obtained one-third of the supply needed to operate his war machine. Allied bombing, however, has reduced this flow drastically.

Germany also gained large numbers of her forces in the midst of a hostile country with uncertain communications to the rear.

Politically, Hitler's Balkan edifice was cracking badly. Bulgaria has been edging toward peace for at least a week. After the Rumanian announcement, the cabinet of puppet Slovakia reported "important decisions" were made in an "urgent" Call on Germans to Surrender.

Without specific mention of Rumania's shift, the Moscow radio shortly after the Bucharest announcement called upon the German people to "surrender immediately" adding:

"This is the eve of victory for the Allied Nations."

In the First Great War, only 41 days elapsed between the time the first German satellite—Bulgaria—ceased fighting and the date of Germany's own signing of an armistice.

King Michael's proclamation said: "Romania has accepted armistice terms offered by the Soviet Union, Great Britain and the United States." There was no immediate official comment in any of the Allied capitals or any word as to what the armistice embraced.

It was widely assumed, however, that the capitulation was based on Russian terms offered early in the summer after communication with the British and United States governments.

Territorial Claims Laid Out.

Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, reaffirmed on the eve of the Russian entrance into northeastern Romania last spring Moscow's claims to Bessarabia and northern Bucovina, taken from Romania in 1940, but gave assurance Russia had no territorial claims.

The Bucharest announcements said the Allied governments had guaranteed Romania's independence, had promised non-interference with its internal affairs and had recognized "the injustice" of Germany's award of Transylvania to Hungary at a Vienna arbitration conference in 1940.

King Michael's proclamation summoned his armed forces to the side of Allied armies as a co-belligerent but by all indications Romania's main offensive intentions will be directed against Hungary to recover Transylvania.

Premier Broadcasts.

The new Premier Konstantin Sanatescu, in a broadcast to the Romanian people immediately following the King's announcement, proclaimed that the "national anarchy" had been "cast aside."

Sanatescu pledged a "democratic regime in which public freedom and rights of the citizens will be restored and respected." In his first decrees he closed concentration camps and turned loose virtually all political prisoners.

Included in Sanatescu's government, which embraces all political parties—National Liberal, National Peasant, Conservative and Social Democrat—is the famous old Peasant leader, Julio Maniu, long an opponent of Romania's position as a German satellite.

Romania joined the Axis in November 1940, and followed Germany into war against Russia on June 22, 1941. Six months later she declared war against Britain and the United States.

FRENCHMEN

Roughly one third of France, 212,000 square miles, has been liberated by the Allied armies and the F.F.I. and the last vestige of the Vichy government of Pierre Laval has disappeared as a political force.

French Commander Leader

Radio Paris at dawn reported the liberation of the Lyon region and said three Allied planes already had landed at Perpignan to establish contact with the F.F.I. Lyon is only 240 miles southwest of Paris, while Perpignan is at the east end of the Pyrenees that form the border between Spain and France.

An Associated Press dispatch from the French-Russian frontier said Brig. Gen. Pierre Koenig, hero of Bir-Hakeim, will command French forces, reinforced by troops from London and Africa, were reported by French authorities to be pushing steadily toward Bordeaux from both sides.

French military authorities at Hendaye, 110 miles south of Bordeaux, said 800 French Commandos were among Allied forces landed from a French destroyer south of Arcachon, southwest of the principal Atlantic port.

Frenchmen United

Edward Kennedy, Associated Press correspondent in Southern France, whose American and non-French troops have already capture, said Allied and the French now appear "united as they never were in peacetime." He said there was little on the surface to support oft-heard predictions that liberation of France would be followed by civil war.

The eGerman ambassador to Switzerland was reported by the secret German-language station radio Atlantik last night to have asked the Swiss government for asylum for Laval. There was no confirmation elsewhere of the broadcast report, heard by NBC. Laval, chief of government in the Vichy regime, was last reported to be virtually a prisoner of the Nazis in Belfort.

RUSSIANS SWEEP

The Russian advance continued unchecked in the area of Bessarabia's Basin and Galati Gap. At midnight, Berlin time, they swept within 167 miles of Bucharest and 140 of the Ploesti oil centre, and from than 50 from the mouth of the Danube—a principal transport artery for Hitler. Tighina, Cetatea Alba and Vaslui all fell in Bessarabia.

Papers Tell of Capitulation.

Moscow newspapers said of the new government formed in Rumania but printed nothing of King Michael's decision to bring his country to peace fighting. News of the liberation of Hitler's Balkan satellite's advances in France was printed and broadcast simultaneously.

Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Army group has captured 8,000 square miles of Rumanian territory in a push from Odessa and thunderous drive toward the Galati Gap. His troops were within 35 miles of those of Gen. Feder I. Tolbukhin driving southward from Iasi, and the armies appeared to be throwing a great noose around enemy forces clustered about the Bessarabian capital of Chisinau.

North of the Carpathians, Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st Ukrainian Army group was overrunning swiftly the area where thousands of Polish and Russian war prisoners were put to work by Hitler after the Red Army here was actually getting into vital German industries. Fighting upon which Hitler depended to keep Germany in the war.

Across Wistoka River.

Westward, the Soviets were across the Wistoka River. Konev's objective is Krakow, the mother city of Poland, the ancient capital and a great industrial centre of a quarter million people. Where Germans offered stiff resistance, Red Star said, behind well prepared steel and concrete forts. Konev's left flank was approaching the Oasch frontier, 11 to 21 miles away, in the Carpathians.

In the middle Baltic republics, the Russians maintained their pressure on Riga from the east and south.

No fresh reports came from the Leningrad and other Russian armies were besieging the city for the 382d day from immediately north and east. News also was lacking from the east Prussian front, the eastern boundary of which was reached last week.

Chief interest centred on Romania.

The historic Bessarabian towns of Tighina and Cetates—Alba on the west bank of the Dnestr, 167 miles from the Rumanian capital, and Vaslui, 140 miles northeast of Bucharest, were among more than 400 towns that fell yesterday all along the eastern front, a Soviet communique said.

CANADIANS MOUNT

The Canadians now are solidly across the Touques at Orbec and fresh Canadian war reporters said artillery fill the roads behind the bridgehead.

Tightening Lines

Meanwhile, the Allied armies west of Paris are tightening the line between the Seine and Touques Rivers and a new pocket bounded on the north by the Channel and the east by the Seine is forming around elements of the few German divisions this side of Rouen.

There is evidence that the enemy is becoming desperate at the threat of being caught in a second bag. Aircraft of the tactical air force which destroyed or damaged 13 tanks and 93 vehicles yesterday also damaged 11 barges and two tugs in strikes at the Channel ports and carried out evacuations of Nazi troops from the west bank of the Seine.

The Allied line southeast of Touques now stretched generally from Elbeuf through Rugles, where United States and British troops have joined hands, to Laigle. The new area from Rugles to Laigle to Orbec is manned by British forces and from Orbec to the Channel by the Canadian army.

No Relaxation of Canada's Draft Regulations Until Germany Collapses

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Aug. 24 (CP)—There will be no relaxation of Canada's draft regulations until Germany collapses in which time monthly intakes into the fighting will be revised to meet the seeming need for men in the Pacific, service officials, charged with the big job of planning demobilization of 280,000 surplus personnel, said today. The officials, who asked that their names not be used, repeated what Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Defence Minister Ralston recently told the Commons—that while the matter is under consideration, no definite plan has yet been evolved.

As a matter of fact, the recent return to Canada of Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, chief of staff at Canadian military headquarters, London, was chiefly for the purpose of discussing the knotty problem.

Any plan probably will hinge on the size and nature of Canada's part in the war against Japan and this hasn't yet been decided. She has already promised an all-out effort and army and air force missions are in the south-west Pacific ostensibly preparing for active participation of larger formations.

Newly Trophied Bisons

Meanwhile, navy doctors in Ottawa are studying tropical disease in preparation for the day when elements of the senior service move to that theatre.

One high official said it was his personal opinion he doubted if there no definite Pacific plans had yet been blueprinted—that at least part of Canada's overseas personnel might come back home "by way of Japan."

However, he added that he thought it was unlikely there will be overseas divisions, ancillary troops and army headquarters personnel would all see service in Asia.

"When we've been through with Germany," he said, "there will be a concentration of forces to shift against Japan that is now unthinkable even to use them all and I doubt if Canada contributes more than a corps or two or three divisions—if that many."

He said his opinion was borne out in some degree by a statement from Maj.-Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, United States National Director of Selective Service, that forecast Monday that between 1,000,000 and 1,500,000 men would be released from the American armed forces when Germany falls.

Won't Break Up Units,

Col. Ralston told the Commons Aug. 10 that it was the policy of British acquisition of a "first in, first out" plan which might contain a good principle there was the important factor of preventing the breaking of units to be considered.

He said most units had a tradition and they would want to return home as a unit and would want to be received as such by their hometownmen.

The plan of demobilization, when adopted, would be "as satisfactory as possible," but it could not be wholly satisfactory to all.

An officer, enlarging on this statement said in this way:

"Say you introduced a first in, first out system. This would result in, for instance, chaps who were over with the Royal 22nd Regiment in the 1939, leaving the units one month and straggling home while chaps who joined it in 1940 would come home another month and so on.

"This staggered system would result in a dangerous lowering of discipline and certainly would be unpalatable to the men who have a pride in their unit and want to march up their main streets with it when it gets home."

Point System Criticized

Air Minister Power, once introduced the idea of a point system of demobilization by which points were given for length of service, marital status and other factors, with the man with the most points to point total going home first and so on.

But, he added, this plan had been strongly criticized in Britain and elsewhere and while it had merit he could not see it unreserved commendation.

The breakup of units does not matter so much in the air force, but there were problems of distance with squadrons as widely separated as Britain and the Aleutians.

Meanwhile, the air force has suspended recruiting until Oct. 1. And its intake after that date may be on a reduced scale.

The navy, too, has a unit problem with each ship having a tradition, but with crewmen all having entered the service at different dates.

"Frankly the thing is a big headache," said one officer. "But you can say this that what our plan may eventually lack in technical perfection it certainly will make up in sincerity of purpose and sympathy for the needs of the veteran."

THIRSTY ELEPHANT

Ontario Priests Tell Of Schools Under Fascists

By BILL BOSS
(CP War Correspondent)

Pescara, Italy, Aug. 24. (CP)—About 13 miles here Canadian troops held a miserable, muddy front line for a long time. They cleared the Germans out of Ortona, driven them a short distance back along the Arielano east and then dug in to re-organize. Winter forced them to halt.

Meanwhile, on the other side of No Man's Land, near this town, two other Canadians, hiding in the hills, watched and waited, hoped one day by day that their compatriots would sweep up along the coast road to the Adriatic.

They used to think of what they'd do when they got back to Canada. Padre Pietro, Rev. Felix J. Eilert, Kitchener, and Wilfrid Lin, said Rev. Edward J. Ceglowicz, Trenton, Ont., didn't have a chance to think about Canada, so far advance resumed. They were liberated indeed, yes. Canadians all but—by the Poles!

A complete reorganization of the Allied armies in Italy had been carried out, involving the transfer of the Canadians from the Adriatic to the Cassino and Rapido River sectors. The old Canadian lines had been successively taken over by Indian and then Polish formations.

Hails Boys' School

"Padre Pietro", as Father Eilert is known, is rector of the Polish national school on the outskirts of this town. "Padre Mzourkevicz" (Father Ceglowicz is his name) as the seven teachers is an Italian priest, Don Lesle Cesare, who for seven years was priest in charge of the Italian parish of Saint Mary of the Angel, Toronto.

The priests belong to the Resurrectionist Order, the next big station in Canada located in London, Ontario, Kingsmill, north by east of Waterloo, and keeps 150 priests busy teaching.

Teaching in Fascist Italy requires not some getting used to, said Padre Pietro, who's been head of Collegio Alterno since coming to it in 1931. In academic matters the school interfered only slightly, but where it did it was adamant in insisting on the Fascist emphasis. If teachers wished to continue at their jobs they had to comply. But the bulk of Fascist education of the youth was done on weekends.

"Professors knew it was useless giving home studies over Saturday and Sunday", said Padre Pietro. "As soon as school emptied Saturday noon the boys became the property of the various youth organizations. Saturday afternoon and every Sunday they had military training, while Sundays were devoted to drills and "free exercises".

Bigwig would call on the rector during examination time if their sons or their friends were getting too confident or sulpess. Padre Pietro would be told "he'd be sorry" if the boy weren't promoted. To such appeals and threats the rector invariably replied that the only person who determined whether a student failed or passed was the student himself. In most cases, he failed.

After the Italian armistice last September the school was requisitioned and the college closed. The priests were obliged to burn certain false identity and ration cards and during the intervening months were constantly in danger.

Want to Get Back.

A captain was seen by the priests were soldiers of a Canadian Graves Registration Unit working on the new Canadian Military Cemetery near Cassino. They overheard the price Canada had paid to win that battle.

Padre Pietro thought in their minds now is "when do we get back to Canada?" "Yes, I was there before I do," says the rector, "before the war, in 1939. Last I had the last one, in 1938". Last word they had from Canada was in 1940 when the Red Cross from a mutual friend, Miss Elsie Hall of Toronto, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. G. Hall, Preston, Ont.

After graduating from St. Louis University in Missouri, Father Pietro went to study theology in Rome, then returned to the United States in 1926 to become rector of St. Mary's College, Kentucky. After seven years at St. Mary's, he returned to Italy in 1930, was sent to Pescara, and has been rector here ever since. Padre Edoardo, whose brother, Padre Frank Ceglowicz, Latin professor at St. Mary's, returned to Canada in 1936 after completing his studies and ordination four years taught at Scollard Hall North Bay, ordained to the priesthood in 1934. He was language master until 1939 in the Resurrectionist Bursar. Most Rev. Joseph Ryan, Roman Catholic Bishop of Hamilton, is a classmate of Padre Pietro's.

Normandy Fields Are Packed With Impedimenta of War

By ALAN RANDAL
(CP Staff Writer)

Somewhere in Normandy, France (CP)—The French people may have thought they were occupied when the Germans held the North, but they've got another think coming. The Allied armies with their vast numbers and supplies have moved in and the Normans really know what occupation is.

There probably never have been so many men in the area the Allied forces hold. Every field, no matter how tiny, has its quota of helmeted Allied soldiers and its quota of Allied supplies.

The whole area is like a dusty, gigantic ship store with each pasture a counter. The fields are piled high with everything imaginable. One field will be filled with boxes of rations piled five and six feet high. The next, behind its hedges, holds millions of rounds of carbine ammunition; the next has countless drums of gasoline and the next may be the assembly point for huge airfield hangars which come in sections like a toy erector set and merely have to be bolted together and hoisted into place.

On the roads the military traffic is unending. Bumper to bumper the transport and supply vehicles move over the dust-covered miles, billowing more dust into the countryside until everything is yellow and thick with it.

For the men a chance to wash is an act of absolute joy but it does little good. In two minutes you are dusty all over again.

In the Norman villages, some of them badly battered, some of them showing no signs of war at all, a few villagers stand on the sidewalk and wave occasionally to the passing troops. Mostly they just patch passively, completely used, by now, to this tremendous new occupation.

Regulations Start.

Up in the forward lines, they say, the fighting men look more at their selves a good deal but back here regulations are strict and what animals the Germans have left the Norman farmers are safe from molestation from the troops.

In some villages the only damage to be seen is the rubble and debris of the shattered steeple of the church. Soldiers explain church steeples were favorite targets for the artillery.

But the country will never again be the same as before the Germans came. They didn't do much to it except take away the men and whatever else they were after was the way of livestock. The troops see plenty of country, building new roads, widening old ones and laying out air strips, some of which will in all probability be permanent after the war.

A farmer told the commander of an engineering unit: "The Germans came and took away all my livestock. Now you come, and say you are the liberators. And now look at my farm."

We looked at it from the farm standpoint there wasn't much left. He had his house and a little garden in front and a little garden behind and that was all. The rest of it was all built into an airport because it was the best ground available.

Canadian Girl Charms Tommies Over Air Waves

By MARGARET ECKER
(CP Staff Writer)

London (CP)—A shy, young red-haired CWAC lieutenant from Montreal has become the pin-up girl of troops in Normandy.

She is Charmian Sansom, daughter of Lt.-Gen. and Mrs. Sansom. Charmian blinks wide blue eyes through her horn-rimmed glasses and looks very bewildered by it all. For this pretty officer, who looks as if it were her 17th and not 23rd birthday she will be celebrating soon, is something quite new in the way of pin-up girls.

The boys in the fo'w'le of a navel ship that piles between England and Normandy have voted her the girl they would most like to have say good morning to them.

And the British Broadcasting Corporation who said they were writing "from a hot hole in the corner of a field in France," pleaded for her picture because "we want you to be our very own pin-up girl."

It's all because Charmian has become the voice of the girl they left behind them for the Allied invasion. Every night at 10 o'clock summers sweet nothings and bright stories in a soft, pleasant voice on a radio program beamed to Normandy.

"Over whose unit ask 'when is Charmian announcing?' another query is 'does your face and figure match your voice?'"

The Radio Times made her its cover girl one weekend, but the boys on the other side of the Channel were not satisfied and every mail bag is crammed with requests for autographed photos.

Voice Gets Them.

"They're fresh girlish voice that gets them," sighed a lieutenant who listens to her on this side of the Channel.

The strangest thing of all is that Charmian has talked herself into the leathery heart of the British Tommy. So far all her fan mail has come from British soldiers, not Canadians or Americans.

She is being a general's daughter, Charmian served as a private nine months in the months ago when she was commissioned in England and took her officer's training at C.W.A.C. school.

She was attached to Army Public Relations, before radio discovered the allure of her voice and drafted her for good accommodation. She also announces dance bands, broadcasting to the troops but it's "Rise and Shine" that sets the boys' hearts fluttering in tanks, pillboxes and ships at sea.

"It's sheer delight to find the A.E.F. had your voice to brighten the start of the day," a British captain of the transport corps wrote.

To quench her thirst, Ruth, one of 50 elephants appearing with Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus, starts in on a line-up of water buckets provided by innumerable boys.

Movie Dog Gets Elaborate Care

Victoria —(CP)— Twelve large bottles of drinking water have arrived here, part of the luggage of Hollywood's most popular movie celebrity now visiting on Vancouver Island. And the star? None other than Lassie, the 55-pound four-year-old collie that played the lead in "Lassie Comes Home". Lassie now is starred in "Son of Lassie," parts of which will be filmed in British Columbia, and Alberta.

The change of drinking water is death to any well-bred dog, said Rudd Weatherwax, owner and trainer of Lassie, explaining why the collie's pampered drinking water had been brought along.

Lassie, a male dog, although he played a female role in his big picture, is kept on a strict diet. He eats approximately a pound and a half of round steak a day, depending on how hard he is working, and in the United States where meat is rationed that pound of steak is sometimes hard to get. "We eat fish, Lassie gets the meat," Weatherwax said.

Because Lassie is a movie dog he will live longer than most dogs, Weatherwax added. "Picture dog's live four times as long as the average dog because of the care they get."

One of the most perfectly-trained dogs Hollywood has ever seen, Lassie is under a five-year contract to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"This was too much," reported F/O. Gorman, "so I put pressure on my camp cot and wash-basin and walked out".

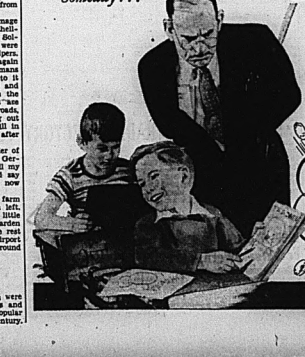
"COLONEL BLIMP" ON WARS TO COME

Glasgow —(CP)— Roger Livesey, British film star and producer who portrayed Colonel Blimp in the movie of the same name, made this prediction about the next war in a speech at an army equipment exhibition:

"The next war," he said, "will be last about 20 minutes. On the outbreak of war someone will press a button one side and send over a continent bunker, Canadian county someone on the other side sends over a button and release a continent buster.

"At the same time planes will get over and would see that beautiful white pagoda then came a cloud of smoke, a flash and a terrific crash. The smoke cleared and there stood a bright blue-faced pagoda.

"The bombs had shattered the outer white crust, leaving the inner blue. Then a voice from the blue pagoda silhouette but with a complexion of color."



The story was told by air sources in London.

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER 2

At the end of Jr.-ing, there is a door which leads onto a broad concrete walk. This walk leads to the tennis courts, the swimming pool in the rear of the hotel, and to ten shallow steps down, each terrace with a final outlet on Lawn Ave. enue. Just left of those steps at the bottom of the terrace there is a break in the borwood hedge that surrounds the estate, and often one that small hedge opening, dash across the lawn, and enter the Keith house either by the front door or the solarium door off the patio. This is the route I took to Sandra's debut. But I should have taken a taxi for it! I had arrived in some degree of style, I would never have crossed the street, hedged-in spot where such a grim business was to take place between ten and ten-thirty that night. I wouldn't have turned my heel on a pebble, nor would I have stumbled and left a piece of my black net dress on the sharp corner of a dwarf spruce. In short, I wouldn't have become a ungainly—Cinder-ella!

But I did walk to Pamela's, and that's what happened!

When I entered the east corner of that vast mansion, I found Lavin Arrowsmith, Reginald's valet, Tadzian, limousines, arrested pedestrians, police whistles, the dramatics of fast on concrete. Washington society, canapes, champagne and free food—and really moving on its stomach, like Napoleon!

One enters Pamela's house between marble walls, through an Italian marble columned, checked by cape, packed straight right in with the mob and all but rubbed noses with ambassadors, cabinet ministers, debutants and what-have-you. Finally I reached the receiving line in the drawing room and my hand was in Pamela's.

Pamela looked lovely. White satin, and yards and yards of her shoulder diamonds flashing. She said, "So glad you could make it, dear," and dismissed me with a strange reason a little chill went up my spine. There was Pam look-ing straight at me, smiling, but not really smiling. Not enough of it! And she looked frightened. There were no two ways about that. What I'd thought—and what I'd come on to Sandra. And there I got knocked sheer.

Sandra Keith didn't look frightened, but she looked mad clear through. Usually Sandra is lovely and languid and effervescent. In tennis clothes she's a great deal of a tomboy, a hoydenish queen, and in a bathing suit she's enough to wreck any male's metabolism. But today her small polished face was white, her eyes a blazing blue, and her height set mouth was compressed and grim. She said a few pleasant words to me, touching her blond hair, however, and then two things happened, almost simultaneously.

Pamela said something to Sandra, and Sandra's mouth shut tighter than ever—and she glanced quickly at Pamela. When she looked away, her furious young eyes met Victor Corliss's and young Corliss's. He was just behind me in the receiving line, and you could almost see the rage burning through her veins.

I didn't get it. For in all the litters of puppy love Sandra Keith has had—Victor Corliss is the undisputed No. 1 Pet. I glanced at Vic. He looked darkly smiling, and his lower lip was caught between his strong even teeth. He's a handsome young rascal, in a dark Tyrone Power sort of way, but he didn't look handsome then. He looked mad and frightened, and rather desperate. It started to be something to Sandra, then obviously. Thought better of it.

YOU WOMEN WHO SUFFER FROM HOT FLASHES
If you suffer from hot flashes, dizzy spells, "jumpy" nerves, are "high-strung" nervous—due to the "middle-age" period in life—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It's one of the best known medicines for this purpose! Famous for 60 years! Worth trying! Made in Canada.

When Vic and I were both out of the receiving line, I continued to watch him. He stood apart from the dancing set, and after shaking hands with Pamela and Sandra, and he didn't look at Sandra. He was smoking a cigarette and looking bored-lay absently, looking at Pamela, who was beyond him, and I'd like to bring her next! I thought I under-stood that. Al least part of it—

Pamela was evidently hanging the gate on Vic; she was more ambitious for Sandra: her daughter's marriage to a poor young college professor, and that's what they had. Sandra turned on Vic! Had Pamela, then, been playing matchmaker and-gauda? I shrugged my shoulder. It was beyond me, and I tried not to think about it as I moved into the crowded dining room.

I walked right up to the lavishly laden table, looking around for Reginald. Pamela's butler, I wanted to ask him just exactly how many guests Mrs. Keith was expecting and if later he would check his list with the announcer's copy.

Pamela had apparently decided back with her from London when she'd been there, but he was busy and for a while, so far as I was concerned, Reginald was just another butler. Then one night, after one of Pamela's interminable bridges I'd found myself last in that basement of lockers, kitchen, stone-floored with the shocking maids on the wall.

Actually curious (curiosity will be my death yet and was—almost-ing for the days that followed Pamela's debut!) I went over to Reginald's table and picked up an unlocked album.

Judging from Reginald's post-collection, he must have spent considerable time and money on Paris' streets. I dropped the album in disgust and fled.

Reginald came into the dining room presently. Six feet tall, dark, repulsive as a typical Gestapo leader. I started to run—or walk. He stopped short, my mouth open. For Reginald was gone, and in his place was Newcomb — Richard Keith's long-suffering valet. He looked at me in a sour way! I didn't pay terribly much attention to that incident then. I acknowledged it was all in a execrable taste but, knowing about Reginald's "collection," I figured that Gladys Newcomb's pale, gold-haired, black-hatred woman had hit Reginald hard so he'd gone home the side of Hell for a moment. I didn't even pay much attention to the way Gladys Newcomb looked that night—that grey eyed wide, her mouth parted, and her fingers at her throat as if she were having a difficult time getting her breath.

Then, all at once, I wasn't thinking about anyone or anything but myself, for I was beginning to live for the first time, For Countess Pamela Castigena was bearing down on me with the handsomest host this side of Hell!

The Countess is a great whale of a dark-eyed black-hatred woman rippling with fat and turned a flowered print, as she was, she looked like Spring Comes Over the Mountain! She presented this young man—Peter Gilbert—then she waddled on to snatch a batch of sandwiches. I have yet to see Countess Pamela Castigena when she wasn't eating or wanting to.

"Countess Pamela's a lovely party, isn't it?"

"Yes," breathed I, wishing—I could trade my face for a new one; wishing I had a Petty figure or was Hedy LaMarr or something. I know I was gawking and I don't remember what we talked about those first few minutes. That guy was handsome in a hungry sort of ropes. But presently I began to come to, and I heard what he was saying.

"I crashed this party, Miss Randolph," he crashed it as easily as Grey-Eyed Connolly slips past the doorman at the Stork.

My heart sank. This town simply reeks with twirps who are out to marry dough, and they get along by crashing debuts, renting tails, and put on special secretaries's lists for ten bucks, and growing alike like an alligator's.

I must have aired my thoughts aloud for suddenly I heard Peter Gilbert say, "My stars, do I look like one of those mealy-mouthed gigolos? Look here, I crashed this party, all right, and my reason is a sound one, but it's really none of your business."

"Well, frankly," I said, "I'm not the slightest interested why you're here!"

"I am though. I was simply bursting to know!"

Peter Gilbert had folded his arms across his chest and was glaring at me like a psychiatrist. I saw him then in his dark evening clothes and flowers that were making a whirling dervish of my head and the color ran down from my hair to my throat. "You're nothing to know why I'm here," he said, and he laughed. It was a swell laugh. The kind of laugh that you only hear when you're being let in on a swell secret. "I crashed this party, all right, but my reason is a—"

Gas and Stomach Disorders Made Her Nervous, Rundown

"Often Got So Bad I felt Like Screaming," Says This Woman. Always Tired; Could Not Sleep. Says Syntone Helped Her.

MRS. BELLA EASTMAN

"For several years I suffered from awful spells of nervous indigestion, with gas and pains after my meals," said Mrs. Belle Eastman, 67 Price Street, London, Ontario.

"I could feel the terrible distress every time I ate. Sour food would rise in my throat, and I'd belch and belch. Then the gas would form terrible pains in my stomach. I'd get so nervous I often felt like screaming. I was always tired, but when I went to bed at night, sleep would not come. I'd toss and turn, fussy condition, and I'd get up in the morning with a headache and pains in my back and joints. I was always tired, but when I lay down I could not rest. I'd toss and turn. I couldn't sleep. My appetite was poor and I was losing weight. I was in a miserable condition. So many things without getting relief. So many day after day I was thinking of trying another remedy, or I got more and more discouraged. Then a friend told me how good Syntone was for stomach disorders. I got a bottle from this druggist and after the first dose I felt relief coming. Now I am free from this distressing condition, and I can eat anything I want. Syntone has done wonders for me. I am grateful to Syntone that I finally found relief. I am glad to tell others."

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking along with Puds Simkins and Lucky Leroy Shooster, when he got a idea called "Pun" meaning the Young Patriots, and we made up the day's password, being Bazooka, and Puds said, I'm boy I spy a spy.

Meaning one man holding a satchel in one hand and looking in a open notebook and I said, Hum, O rocalem that notebook is full of the names of other spies, and he's looking him up so he can give them secret weapons to use when the time comes.

Sure, that's what's in that satchel, secret weapons, Lucky Leroy said, There he goes now, let's follow him and see what house he goes to next, he said.

And we followed him for 2 blocks and then he went in a store but Lucky Leroy's, and he rang the doorbell and waited and Puds and I, Oh boy what do you know about that, it's Lucky's house, and I said, I bet you that's his father he's got home from overseas.

Lucky go on, I never saw him before, Lucky said, and Puds said, That's what you say, Hay Benny, that's what you say, and Leroy said, No I'm not, and Puds said, I'm not either, he said.

And the man kept waiting with his satchel, and Leroy said, Hay, O, nobody's home, I'm going to ask him what he wants.

And he went and told the man it was his house and nobody was in and then the man said, Well, I guess you'll do. I've got certain instructions to carry out. I'm supposed to leave a free bar of Miracle All Purpose Chockfit, with a postpaid card to fill out and send in and tell how she liked it. Now be sure and don't let your mother use it.

And he gave Lucky a bar of chockfit and the address and we went on going, and Lucky said, I'll give my mother half, because that's how much I appreciate this gift.

And he broke off half and handed

Heavy Navy Gunfire Reported in Strait

Dover, England, Aug. 24 (CP)—Resident artillery in the southeast coast reported heavy naval gunfire in Dover Strait during the night and daylight explosions along the French shore, possibly caused by Allied attacks on flying bomb launching sites.

The activity continued most of the night, with the most violent explosions coming from the Calais area. Windows on the British coast rattled with the sound of the blasts.

10th U.S. Air Force In Action Over Salween R. Front

Chungking, Aug. 24 (AP)—Aircraft of the 10th U.S. air force based in India have been in action for the first time over the Salween river front, flying 60 sorties over besieged Tengchung in western Yunnan Province, the Chinese high command announced today.

The planes dropped incendiary bombs. The city lies 40 miles by road east to ruined Lungling, and the fires were unable to set it afire but had the "demoralizing and humiliating effect on Japanese within range of the bursts," said the high command.

All of the old section of the Burma Road town of Lungling was destroyed by fire during two days ago, the Chinese war bulletin said. Four defence positions outside the town proper also were taken.

Germans Report Small Allied Landing South of Biarritz

London Aug. 24 (AP)—The German radio reported today that Allied troops had carried out a "small landing operation" south of Biarritz."

The broadcast did not make clear whether this was the same landing as that in the Gulf of Lion, announced yesterday by Berlin radio after the operation was initiated by the Allied command from the Spanish frontier. St. Jean De Luz is approximately 10 miles south of Biarritz on the southeastern coast of France.

Enemy aims after their small landing south of Biarritz remain to be seen, a broadcast said. "It is possible that these forces have been landed in the hinterland to force from the main fighting sectors. Stronger forces would have to be landed if the Allies' aim was to break through along the Pyrenees to the Mediterranean coast."

French forces of the interior previously claimed the capture of the Spanish frontier territory mentioned as Allied aid of a possible break-through attempt.

Allied Supreme Headquarters still maintained silence in reports of a third amphibious operation against the French coast.

Casualty Proportion In Recent Period

With the 1st Canadian Army in France, Aug. 24.—(CP cable)— The proportion of officer casualties among the Canadian army forces in the capture of Falaise, Trun and Chambois was higher than that among other ranks, it was revealed today.

Between Aug. 7 and Aug. 20 the proportion of casualties among officers of the rank of lieutenant-colonel and above was 17.67 per cent, and among all officers 12.67 per cent.

These figures compare with casualties at the proportion of 10.38 per cent among other ranks during the same period.

CITY OF LYON REPORTED LIBERATED BY FRENCH
London, Aug. 24. (CP)—A Reuter dispatch from the Swiss frontier today said French forces of the Interior had completely liberated the city of Lyon on the Rhone River.

TORONTO STOCKS
Toronto, Aug. 24 (CP)—The gold issues posted an index gain of .31 per cent in today's mixed trading and other groups showed little net change. Volume was small at 206,000 shares for the first three hours.

In the industrial section the base metal issues were stronger and the senior oils and golds were firm. Banks were weaker.

The gold group had gains for Lake Shore, Amur, Noranda, Malartic, Negus and Conwest and losses for Kerr-Addison, Prokalsko, Malartic Gold Field and Lake Dufault. Base metals held about steady.

In western oils Ajax gained 7 cents to 1.52.

WALL STREET
New York, Aug. 24.—(AP)— A few stocks with a peace rating managed to keep their feet on the financial district's nearly hot many leaders stumbled under mild selling jolts.

Further switching and adjustment of accounts to prepare for a Labor Day holiday in the financial district recuperation served as a brake on the recovery. Selling, running to a point predominated near each fourth hour for steels, rails and motors.

Briggs Mfg., recently hitting 1944 peaks, dipped 3.

On the offside were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Du Pont, Gen. Motors, Texas Co., Goodrich, Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward. Bendix registered a top for the year.

Canadian issues were in little demand and showed little change.

BRITISH BRIDES OF CANADIANS GIVEN WELCOME

Hundreds of Servicemen, Nursing Sisters and Others Arrive in Canada
FAMILY GROUPS
Passed by Censor.
(By The Canadian Press)
British war brides, fatherless and a little timid at their first sight of Canada, were greeted in the Dominion after crossing the Atlantic on a former luxury liner. Hundreds of Canadian servicemen, army, navy and air force—were aboard the ship, too, as well as nursing sisters, women of the R.C.A.F. and men of the merchant navy.

Most of the young English brides had been preceded home by their Canadian husbands who are now in the fighting fronts; others will wait until their men come back from overseas "after the duration."

A few baby mascots were together on the voyage, envy of the rest, and the husbands of some will greet return, the Battleford of Europe. None of them had ever seen Canada before, and they were a little awed at the immensity of their new home.

They were all delighted with the voyage, with the fine and varied food on board, and with the prospect of seeing cities aglow with lights at night. After the five-years black-out of wartime England.

Domestic problems? Some were many other new Canadians aboard too, most of them between 20 and 30 remarked they added a touch of domesticity to the atmosphere of the ship troopship.

A happy family group were Wing Comdr. H. C. Godfrey, his wife and baby daughter, ready to leave for Toronto. Wing Cmdr. Godfrey met his wife in Montreal and Sar for his work with Canada's famous Wolf Squadron. He met his blonde Scottish wife when they were both stationed in southern England, he with the R.C.A.F. and she an officer of the British Women's Auxiliary Air Force.

Another group of servicemen among the war couples were Major and Mrs. R. R. Laird, whose story, until like a novel. Major Laird, youthful R.C.A.M.C. officer of Victoria, B.C., met his wife during a blitz on Jan. 14, 1941. Born Frances Babbitt, a British film star who had appeared in pictures made by Sir Alexander Korda, Pat, British, and other British film companies, she was also a pioneer star in the wonderful British television industry. "She was the first girl I met in England," Major Laird said.

A few days before the day set for their marriage, Laird was in Dieppe, where he lost his right leg. Captured, he spent 18 months in German prison camps.

Finally released Laird was repatriated in the first group of men to return to England. There he married Frances. There, too, he learned of the modern miracles being performed by allied surgeons with artificial limbs.

"As a doctor," he stated, "I can say without fear of contradiction that he brighter and brighter with the developments which will take place in the next few years in that work."

HONFLEUR CAPTURED BY CANADIAN FORCES REDS WITHIN 35 MILES GALATI GAP DEFENCES

German Pocket Shrinks Rapidly On Lower Seine

Algiers Radio Says Germans Evacuating Port of Le Havre

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Aug. 26 — Canadian troops advancing up the English Channel coast today occupied Honfleur at the mouth of the Seine opposite Le Havre, second largest French port.

The German pocket on the lower Seine shrank to a depth of less than 15 miles early in the day, and there were strong indications that it might disappear altogether within 24 hours. The pocket is 30 miles long. Only sporadic rear-guard action was encountered by British, American and Canadian forces.

Retreating to Somme Line.

Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt, Chancellor Von Kluge has reported swinging his beaten German armies back to the line of the Somme and the Aisne and Marne in a headlong retreat which would abandon much of the English channel coast and the vicinity of Paris.

The battle in the pocket south of the Seine, swiftly whittled to an area of only 15 miles deep and 30 miles deep, appeared likely to be ended in another 24 hours as British, Canadians and other Allied troops pressed in from all sides. The Canadians, attacking along the coast, captured Honfleur, five miles across the Seine estuary from Le Havre.

The Germans said they were engaged in a "disastrous movement" below the Seine, and R. A. F. intelligence officers said the German retreat initiated Von Kluge's army was in danger of being cut across the Seine toward the Somme and the Marne.

Wholesale Slaughter.

The wholesale slaughter of the cream of Von Kluge's armor may never be repeated again in this war," a Senior R. A. F. officer said in France.

"We just can't hit armor the enemy hasn't got," he explained.

Dispatches said abandoned in the Seine pocket were lined for miles with the burned hulks of German armored tanks and military vehicles, enemy dead piled in the ditches and under trees or draped over burned and smouldering equipment.

Even if any elements stand is made on the Somme-Marne line, the R. A. F. officer said, it is hardly doubtful if the enemy has enough armor to make the stand he did in Normandy after the Allied breakthrough. Only the Germans would relish the German border.

Dispatches from elsewhere on the front said great lines of Allied armor and infantry were swinging down toward the Seine from the north to keep the enemy on the run.

The mauling the German dispatch said, with Allied officers optimistically hailing the trend in the battle.

The swing of Von Kluge's line to Somme and Marne would bring the battle to the hard-fought fields of the First Great War, the scene of the German drive to the English Channel at Abbeville in 1940 and the short-lived battle for Paris in the same year when General Maxime Weygand briefly attempted to stem Paris by a stand along the Somme.

It would not surrender the Channel coast around Calais-Gris-Nez, but front line dispatches said an end might be put to the buzz-bomb terror for England soon.

There was a blackout of news on operations of the American 3rd Army outside of Paris. No official report had been made on the progress of this spearhead nearest the enemy since announcement of movement of an advance 15 miles east of Sens.

The Germans said the Americans were driving into the elbow of the Seine between Troyes and Romilly, and dispatches from that sector said a drive of miles could be made without seeing a single German soldier who was not a prisoner, and spoke of the complete disorganization of the German army.

Bomb Revel.

Almost forgotten, except by military men, was the siege of the great naval base of Brest by the British and it was brought back into the news with disclosure that a nine-wave attack by Allied bombers, sent 300 planes over its fortifications this afternoon.

As an inlet for supplies direct from North America and Britain, Brest would be of greater importance to the Allies than even Paris.

1,100 U. S. Heavy Bombers Escorted by Fighters Smash 10 Objectives

DESTROYERS DAMAGED

London, Aug. 25 (AP) — More than 1,100 American heavy bombers escorted by strong forces of fighters and fighter bombers smashed today at ten North German objectives including the Pomeranian coastal port of Stettin and the Berlin area, where flying and rocket bombs are developed.

The raids followed night attacks on objectives in France and Belgium by R. A. F. Mosquitoes. Last night also British and Canadian pilots seriously damaged two 1,200 ton German destroyers fleeing Bordeaux.

Targets of today's American raiders included four aircraft factories, the Berlin area, which is a research centre, a synthetic oil plant and the rail junction at Stettin.

Simultaneously, nine waves of light and medium bombers attacked the fortifications of the besieged Brittany port of Brest for almost a solid hour starting at 2 p.m. About 300 planes participated. Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters said 10 elements of three German divisions have been locked in the Brest forts for several weeks.

Penemunde lies on the Baltic, 110 miles from Berlin, and has been a frequent Allied target. Recent aerial photos said the Germans were developing their "V-2" weapon there, variously described as a 50 to 100-ton rocket bomb or about a ten-ton explosive warhead.

Heavy bombers took advantage of their second successive day of clear weather to hit the Berlin area, many and bomb such targets as Genshagen.

Wismar, a bomber assembly plant and a bomber parts plant.

Lubeck, a bomber components plant.

Paris Helped To Liberate Herself, French Armor, Yanks Drive Hun Out

By MERRILL MUELLER
(NBC Correspondent)

With American Troops in France, Aug. 25 (AP) — With the liberation of Paris by French armored troops now finally a fact, the destruction of the 16 German divisions encircled south of the city continued at an increased tempo today as Allied troops pressed over the Seine at Melun, south of Paris, and continued to make excellent progress.

Mopping up operations are going on along the western outskirts of the city.

Undoubtedly the world is asking: "What happened to the liberation of Paris following General Eisenhower's announcement on Wednesday? Today I can supply some of the answers which I was prevented from releasing Wednesday morning.

I was with Lt.-Gen. Bradley for the final meeting with the group that came out of Paris under cover of a white flag to announce the surrender of the city. This group consisted of a Spanish diplomat, acting as a neutral protecting authority for the German units; a Belgian consul; two members of the F.F.I. from Paris and a British officer. They had come through our lines in the Fontainebleau area, reported to him and were sent back to Lt.-Gen. Bradley for a decision. None of their stories agreed. In fact, the one British officer had to act as moderator of the meeting to keep their reports in strict facts.

The Swedish diplomat told Lt.-Gen. Bradley the German high command felt itself unable to control the German troops in Paris and would henceforth not take responsibility of policing it. Then he itemized the German units in Paris, and gave their strength. This was a bold-faced German effort to get the Allies to accept as the world that while actually it was used as a carte blanche to carry out reprisals against the Partisans wherever and whenever the opportunity presented itself.

One Frenchman said the Paris Maquis controlled all the city. The other claimed the underground forces could only control those parts of the city that the Germans acting as a neutral protecting authority for the German units; a Belgian consul; two members of the

ROMANIA REPORT DECLARES WAR ON GERMANY

New York, Aug. 25, (AP)—The Odyssey radio said today that Romania had declared war on Germany and that German planes "heavily bombed" Bucharest. The Federal Communications Commission reported the Broadcast ,which was without confirmation elsewhere.

Earlier, the German radio has commented bitterly:

"Russian troops have scored easy victories because of the attitude of Romanian troops. These Romanian divisions which a few days ago fought side by side with their German comrades defending Romanian soil against the Bolsheviks, now have turned against their former comrades. The King's Party was necessary headquarters for their peace activities before the Russian offensive started."

NAVY MINISTRY, HOTEL CRILLON ABLAZE

By JAMES P. KING, AP Staff Writer.

London, Aug. 25 —(AP)— Paris appeared to be in Allied hands tonight with the French 2nd Armored Division operating in the city. Fighting, however, still was going on in and around the French capital.

Gen. Eisenhower's Supreme Command declared that Brig.-Gen. Jacques Leclerc's armor was operating in the capital and a broadcast from Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters spoke of the liberation of Paris as "a fact."

As fighting continued, the French Forces of the Interior appealed by radio for Parisians to come to the barricades.

Broadcasts from the City of Light said the joyous citizenry already were celebrating their freedom. Other radio dispatches said American troops had entered the city in support of the French.

Main Building Captured.

Lt. Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, commander of the French forces of the interior, announced was 8:09 p.m. that Le Clerc's tanks were operating in the very heart of Paris and that the Patriots were holding all the main official buildings and most of the highways.

Gen. Koenig said the Germans had barricaded themselves for a stand-off fight in several places. He declared that first French armored patrols reached F. F. I. headquarters in the hotel De Ville (city hall) just off the Rue De Rivoli at 10 p.m. last night and that the bulk of the French armored division entered Paris this morning.

Both F. F. I. and German broadcasts said heavy fighting was raging inside the city and that, as American tank column had driven into the Paris outskirts from Versailles in the west and along the Paris-Etampe road leading south.

The Germans said the heaviest clashes with tanks and Patriots were near the Arc De Triomphe and the Palais Luxembourg.

Gen. Leclerc Enters.

Brig.-Gen. Jacques Leclerc entered the Orleans gate at 9:43 a.m. broadcasts from Paris said.

The bulk of the French general's second armored divisions—30,000 strong—was massed in the Foret de Sevres, sector in southwest Paris and already had begun to march in, said one Allied transmitted broadcasting from Paris.

Gen. Leclerc, who was said to be at Bagneux, a southwestern suburb only miles from the centre of Paris waiting to be conducted into the capital where the carillons of Notre Dame and church bells throughout the city already heralded the entry of one spearhead.

In the courtyard of the Seine police prefecture the Israelitiske Nieuwsblad reported, the Germans set a time and soon the anthem was taken up throughout the neighborhood streets. Shots of the capital were draped with Allied flags.

The F.F.I. were ordered to hold positions "at any price" until relief arrived in strength.

"A great part of the capital has been liberated," a Col. Rol-Tanguy, called as an F.F.I. commander, broadcast.

The patriots were in control of several bridges and all barricades were declared manned.

American forces stationed South in Reims and Bagneux started moving into the city at 8:15 a.m.

Other tanks and vehicles of Leclerc's command entered by the Chatillon gate at 7:15 a.m. and travelled the Boulevard Brune.

The arrival of a detachment in the centre of the city was reported by an American correspondent in a broadcast.

The correspondent said he was speaking from the Hotel de Ville—the Paris city hall. His words came over the radio of the French Forces of the Interior in Paris.

Get Delirious Welcome.

The broadcast said Gen. Leclerc's first patrols — several Sherman tanks, two infantry sections and a section of engineers—entered the capital just before midnight, passing through the Porte D'Italie.

"From the Port D'Italie to Ile de la Cite (The island in the centre of the city which the underground army originally asked as a stronghold in its uprising last Saturday) Leclerc's units have had a delirious welcome. Men, women and children literally rushed the tanks, embracing the men in the French armored division."

ROMANIA MUST EARN ARMISTICE WITH THE ALLIES

London, Washington Reported Considering Bulgarian Armistice Move

NAZIS IN PANIC

By WADE WERNER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—Germany announced officially today that Soviet Russian troops had stopped fighting and Moscow dispatches told of widespread local disagreement between Nazi rear-guards and King Michael's army thrown to the Allied side by the Balkan kingdom's abrupt capitulation and armistice.

While Russian armies drove swiftly through the oil and wheat empire in within 35 miles of the strategic Galati gap between the Carpathians and the Danube Delta, the Soviet high command declared she could earn an Armistice only by ordering her troops to fight "hand in hand with the Red army," a move ordered in King Michael's startling proclamation Wednesday night.

Dispersions were swift.

Outlanded Bulgaria intensified its search for peace and London speculated that a capitulation from the Bulgarian Kingdom whereby Hungary's boundaries were bared to the advancing Russians and, according to Moscow dispatches, to the Romanians too. The liberation of adjoining Yugoslavia and Greece were brought infinitely closer, Even Finland, far to the north, reported planning new peace overtures.

Germans Disorganize.

The German communique told of the powerful military and political blow which was Romania's abolition in these words:

"On the Romanian sector of the eastern front, our troops are disengaging themselves to the west of the Prut and Siret rivers. After parts of Romanian troops had ceased to fight, many enemy tanks were destroyed."

Moscow reported that Romanians, who previously had deserted, told the Russians that they had left Germans machine-gunned them for retreating and that the Romanians in turn, killed their Nazi military masters.

A correspondent for Izvestia said he saw bodies of Romanian troops and a German officer at one point where the Romanians re-fought battles along roadways frequently by surrendering Romanians who were ordered to proceed against the Red army head. Moscow said.

Central Ontario Troops, Guided By Maquis Take Town Without Shot

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians at Thiberville, Aug. 25 —(CP cable)— In the dead of night Canadian Central Ontario infantry regiment through railroad yards and along muddy trails to this quaint Norman town in the Seine valley without a shot being fired.

Thiberville is only 35 miles west of the bend of the Seine at Elbeuf and on the main highway that curves from Lisieux to Paris.

The Canadians expected the Germans would defend it the last with a suicide garrison and even the Maquis thought so. But in the darkness Wednesday night when the Canadians were assembling, the Germans fled deeper into the steadily-compressing pocket west of the Seine.

Just after dawn yesterday morning the Canadians entered the streets of Thiberville and instead of being met by machine-gun fire and a hail of mortar and artillery shells, the townspeople welcomed them.

Hundreds of men, women and children were waiting on the main square to shower hospitality on the conquerors, led by Maj. Al Waters, Toronto. When it was clear there was no enemy in the town, Waters flashed back a wireless message to divisional headquarters saying: "Objective occupied—no guns, no hits, no errors."

Maj. Waters, of Toronto said the German, "went out of here like a shot out of a gun as we stepped through the mud toward the town. And the very real reception we got from these civilians. They are treating us like kings. As for these Maquis guys, I wouldn't follow them to Berlin."

Even into Thiberville yesterday in a scout car after moving for hours in a column of route, the battle of heavy Canadian army traffic pouring eastward along Highway 62. And every road was another graveyard of German wreckage, guns, tanks, horses and soldiers wiped out by air forces as they tried to get back to the Seine the regiment made forced marches from Livarot on the Vire river to Thiberville, moving by trails, by roads and trails. It was a surprise move to the Germans and in confusion they pulled

25,000 German and Romanian Prisoners Taken in Single Day

By DANIEL De LUCE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 25 (AP) — Two Red armies, slashing deeper into Romania against an apparently tottering enemy front when 47,000 men have been taken as prisoners in five days, today were within 35 miles of the Galati Gap defences guarding the Danube gateway to Bucharest and the Ploesti oil fields.

The armies of Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky and Gen. Feodor Tolbukhin, obviously bent on hitting on the outcome of Romania's peace bid through King Michael, swept up more than 550 cities, towns and villages yesterday, including the provincial capital of Chisinau (Kishinev).

In a lightning attempt to get a firm grasp on Romania before her forces can complete plans for counter measures, the Soviet armies took 24,000 Germans and Romanians captured in a single day, and sent spearheads to less than 190 miles from Ploesti which is more than that from Bucharest.

Moscow said Nazi and Romanian instances, as Hungarian and not confirmed, reports that Romanian troops were fleeing towns and villages, followed by enemy, duty columns and that Romanian Nazi Legation Guard.

Nazi Army liaison officers, carrying out the official Russian policies, declared the Hungarian legation and civilians that liquidation of German forces in the country must be achieved before military operations cease and an armistice with Germany is envisaged.

Civilian populations literally cried for joy on hearing of Russian promises by the Soviet government not to annex Romanian territory, and to respect social regime or harm its independence, Stockholm said.

There were no indications still whether the German hoped to draw up a new defence line. They are vastly outnumbered by the Red and Romanian armies.

The Germans have been flooding in such hands as they had 48 hours they failed to demolish bridges and left some fortifications unmanned.

Seizure of Buzau on the Buzau-Galati railway, 38 miles north of Galati, put the Russians within 35 miles of the Galati Gap defences along the lower Siret and Danube. Pushing to the 45-mile gap between Galati and Focsani at the edge of the Carpathians.

Other major strongholds to fall yesterday were Roman and Bacau, the latter 37 miles northwest of Barlad.

Allied Troops Attempt Landing Says Tokyo Radio

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—The Tokyo radio asserted today Allied troops had attempted a landing on the Solomon Islands in the Pacific, the northwest coast of New Guinea but had been repulsed, with no immediate report from Allied sources on the reported attack.

The Mapiks are about 150 miles northwest of the Schouten group, which the Japanese call Nei New Guinea coast and are about 300 miles east of Halmahera. There has been a repeated target of Allied bombing attacks recently.

Halmahera is only 300 miles from the Philippines.

The federal communications commission in Washington said the Tokyo radio as saying Allied troops actually had landed Saturday at the Mapia. Thursday morning but had been driven off by noon. This version said the attackers had suffered "heavy losses".

Trenton 'Flyers' Defeat Bombers In Second Game

Trenton "Flyers" will represent the Quinte district in the No. 1 Command R. C. A. F. baseball finals at Toronto. The "Flyers" eliminated the Mountain View Thorndale in straight games, winning the second match 12 to 2 at Mountain View Thursday evening.

Eddie Gerald, former Toronto sandlot star, was the driving strength behind the Flyers' attack with three rousing triples to drive in four runs and score three himself.

"Lefty" Garnet pitched for the Flyers with Welsh catching, while the latter hurled for the Bombers with Arthur on the receiving end, the latter had an error and three strikeouts. Garnet fired six-hit ball, while Warner gave up eight singles, including Gerald's three triples. Trenton won the No. 1 Command ball title last season, 1943.

The game was handled by umpires Sergt. Planed and Cain.

Tacks Are Thrown With Abandon About Front Street

Carpet tacks, thrown with abandon about Front St. yesterday, are proving a menace to the tires of motor vehicles and bicycles alike. This is the third time within the week the appearance of carpet tacks, found on eight blocks, has been reported to police officials.

Police and a group of boys attempted to sweep the carpet tacks into the gutter before damage resulted to the tires of approaching motorists. Later the Department of Public Works employees thoroughly swept the street clean from the tacks. Strangely enough in all three cases when the carpet tacks were thrown into the street each time it was in front of, or in the vicinity of the footbridge gangway.

Today police merely stated police were bending every effort in an attempt to apprehend the culprit whose game of humor is anything but appreciated by motorists and police alike. With a scarcity of tires the throwing of carpet tacks on a public thoroughfare is a serious crime in the eyes of the law.

Rotary Doll Draw Saturday

The Belleville Rotary Club's "Dollar Baby" will be drawn for on Saturday night at the Canadian Pacific Railway grounds on South Church Street where the carnival, sponsored by the club, is attracting large crowds nightly.

Interest in the "Dollar Doll" a handsome young miss arrayed in garb of twenty-five one dollar bills, is mounting, judging from the ticket sales. Chairman Charles Symons, ably aided by Mrs. Symons is in charge of the doll booth and is doing a fine job in this phase of the carnival.

Last night another large crowd enjoyed the amusement and entertainment offered at the carnival. Games and rides were well patronized as were the booths where the inner man is satisfied.

A special matinee has been arranged for the children of the city on Saturday afternoon. All rides will be in operation and special efforts will be made to entertain the younger folk.

The carnival will close on Saturday night, climaxing a week of outdoor amusement that will, it is expected, bring much-needed finances to the Crippled Children's Fund of the local service club.

Driver Has Narrow Escape From Death When Large Truck Hits Tree

Extricated from his tractor-cab prison after his transport had jackknifed and crashed into a telephone pole near the Ontario School for the Deaf early Saturday morning, Milton Haggerty, 307 Colborne Street, Brantford, employee of the Victoria Transport Company was rushed to Belleville General Hospital suffering from a fractured right leg, chest and facial injuries.

Haggerty, unable to move because of injuries, was pinned inside the cab of the wrecked vehicle, and was released only after acetylene torches and hacksaws were brought into use. The trailer, loaded with 27 ton tons of asphalt, also later caught fire and was destroyed.

The accident occurred when the transport driver, swerved his vehicle to avoid a car that passed on the highway. The big transport went out of control and careened across the highway, crashing into a telephone pole, telescoping the cab.

Provincial Police Constables Charles Siple, Jim Driscoll and J. E. Scobilare were despatched to the scene. The officers attempted jack the wrecked vehicle in order to assist the driver, but later sent to the city for acetylene torches and hacksaws. Unidentified employees of the Reliance Industries and the Corbin Lock Company were also the victims of the police officers' efforts in assisting to extricate Haggerty.

Leaking gasolines from one of the three tank trailers on the vehicle caught fire, and fumes and flames enveloped the vehicle. City firemen under Captain Frank Orr raced to the scene but their supply of chemical firefighting equipment was insufficient to subdue the blaze, around the cab.

Later the trailer and contents ignited and the firemen again rushed to the scene, but lack of water handicapped them and despite their efforts the vehicle and contents were destroyed.

Dr. F. R. Ross was called and treated Haggerty before ordering him to hospital.

POLICE COURT

"This man admits he has worn out three pair of Reserve Army issue shoes, while working on his father's farm in the last year," stated Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan as Charles Brain, Tyendinaga, appeared on a charge of illegally wearing the King's uniform. Brain pleaded guilty, but added he was only wearing the uniform, while his civilian clothes were being cleaned and pressed. He was remanded for a week by Magistrate J. C. Lloyd until a change of raiment arrived and he could shed the military garb.

Major Ewart Jones, of the 6th Field Regiment, appeared in the case and told the court all the military authorities could do was to remand the man his complete issue and then he would be discharged from the Reserve Army.

Granted Remand.

Stanley Wilson, North Bay, appeared on a charge of obtaining a money car from the Riggs Motor Sales by fraud. "This man has an accomplice, who is held in the Hamilton police. We are sending for him," revealed Mr. Donnan as he was granted a remand for Wilson.

Charged With Assault.

Zella Cooney, of Bancroft, appeared on a charge of assaulting Viola Sallans, Belleville, but her case was also adjourned and Zella held in custody for a week. Zella is the young woman, who materially wrecked the women's cell at the police station some months ago by tearing the plumbing pipes apart.

Tourist Inquiries Set New Record Says J. O. Herity

Inquiries for tourist accommodation received at the Belleville Chamber of Commerce offices this year exceeded by one hundred per cent the highest figure of any preceding year, Manager J. O. Herity stated yesterday.

Contributing factors to this situation were the availability of ready gasoline and the restrictions on both sides of the international border.

At that, ninety-five per cent of the requests for hotel, cabin, cottage and other resort accommodation came from Canadians, Mr. Herity said.

North Hastings, in particular benefited from the unusual tourist trade, this practically every lake and village resort crowded to capacity, for the entire season. Many visitors found that postponed vacation reservations until the eleventh hour were disappointed. Resorts were booked solidly for the season as early as the first week in July.

Cabins by a lake or stream, with boating facilities at a nearby hostelry appeared to be the most popular form of summer vacation with a great number of the potential holiday-makers. In some instances, families drove ahead of the vacations for the cottage occupants to depart, to eliminate any danger of some one also getting in ahead of them. The tourists were taking no chances.

But there was not nearly enough of lake and stream cabins to meet the demand. Northern proprietors stated that they could have utilized hundreds more in order to satisfy the needs of vacation seekers.

Many side-open spaces had the stronger lure for the summer inns-by-the-road, but homes did a fair business, which expanded to large proportions over the holiday weekends, Gerrard speaking. It was nothing to "write home about".

CRIPPLED BATTLESHIP HIT

London, Aug. 26. (CP)—A German broadcast today reported that carrier-based British planes yesterday raided the German naval base of Altenfjord in northern Norway. Hungarian Govt. Is Reshuffled

London, Aug. 26 (CP)—Germany announced today a reshuffle of the Hungarian government "because of the serious situation which has caused certain political tensions" arise in the Nazi-occupied country.

Details of the shake-up were not given, but the DNB dispatch said Hungarian Foreign Office Minister Sztojay had been replaced by Foreign Office.

The tensions which lately have arisen in Hungary in consequence of events in Rumania have been intensified immediately in view of the dangers with which the Hungarian people are threatened by the broadcast official DNB dispatch said, quoting a German foreign office spokesman. The "tensions" were not explained.

Germany occupied Hungary earlier this year. Only yesterday, a decree abolished all political parties apparently to forestall any intrigue which might grow out of the war.

The Berlin radio announcement was an official D.N.B. dispatch and said all necessary measures dictated by developments in southeast Europe had been taken.

MOUNTBATTEN RETURNS TO POST AFTERCONFERENCE

Says Fighting in India Area Hampered by Lack of Equipment

42,000 JAPS KILLED

By WILLIAM F. BONI
(A. P. Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 25 (AP)—Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten has returned to his post as head of the Allied command in Southeast Asia after a series of conferences in London with British and American leaders during which plans were made to step up the war against Japan, it was disclosed today.

Lord Louis Mountbatten's visit here coincided with that of Adm. of James V. Forrestal, United States Navy Secretary.

Lord Louis said his men were fighting "in the most terrible country and one of the world's worst terrain and that the Allied hardships in this theatre largely were minimized by the "folks back home."

He declined to forecast future operations. Instead he reviewed to some extent how the campaign which has been hampered by lack of landing craft, withdrawn for use at Anzio and in Europe. He said the loss of their vehicles meant a shortage of big plans "on a less ambitious scale," aimed at clearing the Japanese from northeast Burma and thus improving the supply situation for China and the U.S. 14th Air Force operating there.

The clearing of Northeast Burma was accomplished "after fighting along 700 miles of jungle and mountain trails by British, American, Indian and West African troops, often with invaluable help from Chinese and other Burma tribesmen.

"The Japanese fortunately played into our hands," the Southeast Asia commander said, for after the three divisions on an ill-fated march into Manipur State in India last March, the Japanese had no reserves.

He said Gen. Stilwell "with great gallantry" himself commanded the Allied force in North Burma which achieved its goal.

Fighting in Burma in 1944 cost the Japanese a minimum of 42,000 killed and the Allies 10,000 killed, 3,000 missing and 37,000 wounded, he said. Lord Louis said 27,000 tons of million calorie rations had been conserved from sickness, chiefly malaria and dysentery.

The Southeast Asia commander said he believed Japanese troop morale was lower but that the Japanese soldier relies on his stupidity which enables him to fight to the death. He said Japanese equipment was not improving, but that Allied material is improving constantly. Allied air superiority has been established.

The Japanese navy, he said, "now is as afraid to accept action in the Indian Ocean and the Bay of Bengal as it is in the Pacific."

First Instalment On Beating Taken In Burma Paid

Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 25. (AP)—Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell totalled his account with the Japanese today and marked the first instalment paid on the "full of a beating" he admitted the Allies took in Burma in 1942.

An official recapitulation of the 1944 North Burma campaign disclosed that more than 10,000 square miles of territory were recaptured.

"Similarities to the first Burma campaign but in the exact reverse are now appearing", said a southeast Asia command headquarters statement.

"Equipment taken by the Japanese in the 1942 retreat was retaken and used by the Allies. British and American automobiles abandoned to the Japanese have been captured, repaired, and are now ready for our use again. British blankets and Australian anti-tank guns have been recovered.

"Even Officers' supplies, among the items once ours and then used by the Japanese were finally taken".

Churchill Confers With Pope for Hour

Rome, Aug. 25 (AP)—Prime Minister Churchill left Rome Wednesday after a 45-minute private audience that day with Pope Pius XII, it was announced today.

A Vatican announcement said "many essential questions were touched upon relating to important problems of the present hour." Mr. Churchill's visit was observed with all the splendor of the Papal court.

"It was a pleasant conversation," Mr. Churchill was reported to have told the Chamberlain of the Cape and Sword. As his car drove away from the Vatican, a group of Allied soldiers recognized the British Prime Minister and cheered him.

Mr. Churchill was accompanied by Sir Francis Osborne, British Minister to the Holy See.

In one of the formalities upon the Prime Minister's arrival, Swiss guards in 15th century uniforms presented their halberds as Mr. Churchill passed through the Clementine room.

"That's a sight far away from daily reality," Mr. Churchill said.

Germans Arrest Leaders

The Moscow radio said the "push of German armor is leaving Paris" and that the news of Leclerc's arrival went around the capital "like oddities and the bells of Notre Dame rang out".

The Cathedral of Notre Dame is the geographical centre of Paris, on the Ile de la Cite, and the Paris City Hall is on the north bank of the river opposite the island.

The American reporter's broadcast followed a official announcement from Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters that French forces had penetrated the outskirts of the city this morning.

The German High Command, in its final mention of Paris in one of its communiques, also told of heavy fighting in the suburbs which, it said had been reached in strength by Allied armored and motorized forces.

PARIS

would not use for their withdrawal. The Belgian reported on the civil distress within Paris and the British officer gave the real sound warning that German defence positions in Paris were still intact, and a clear approach to the city would be costly.

Leader Wednesday

Lt.-Gen. Bradley himself told me that beyond the British officer he didn't know who to believe but that he was in a position to spare the French 2nd. Armored Division and would order it to Paris. It was estimated the French 2nd. Armored Division could not be within the city within 48 hours—and that is exactly what it took.

Later Wednesday afternoon I flew to Paris in a reconnaissance aircraft. Other plane planes of the air force over the city were dodging balloons and heavy ack-ack barrages, indications then that the French control of the city was not complete.

Paris certainly helped liberate itself but it remained for the gallant French armored forces together with large numbers of attached American units to drive the hated enemy from the city of glamour and strife.

The War Today—
Germany's Position May Be Critical But There's Plenty of Fight Left

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

Hitler's shattered forces cannot long delay complete reclamation of Paris, but their sudden fierce resurgence, after ostensible withdrawal from the capital, provides us with fresh evidence that there's still fight in the cornered Nazis.

It's fair warning against the rather prevalent super-optimism which already has written the European war off as finished.

It's true that Hitler's situation is so critical that anything can capsize him at any time. On that basis he might indeed collapse today, but he's not likely to.

Barring unforeseen developments, we have a lot of hard work ahead of us. Even if the Hitlerites should start to retreat toward their frontiers immediately, both in France and in the Russian theatre, many weeks likely would elapse before they were brought to bay, unless their retreat was an utter rout without any attempt at rear-guard defence.

In sizing up the situation we mustn't overlook this: There's every indication that so far as Hitler himself is concerned he intends to fight to the bloody end. Dr. Eduard Benes, Czechoslovak President-who is himself a war veteran, predicts that Hitler probably never will surrender but that his army will disintegrate into small units which will fight singly to the end. Dr. Benes thinks "fighting for every place will be necessary even after the Allies invade Germany."

Grim evidence of the Fuehrer's determination is seen in his latest regimentation which abolishes all social and welfare activities in Germany, apart from motion pictures and radio. That's hitting rock-bottom.

The length of time Hitler can hang out depends on two things:

1. How long the German public and fighting men stick with him;

2. How hard the Allies hit him now when he's rocking on his heels.

So far as Western Europe is concerned it's highly unlikely that Hitler will be able to make any protracted stand short of his own frontier. He's in the final throes of the disaster that has overtaken him in Northwest France. But there are many natural defensive positions along his probable line of retreat, and it will be strange if there are no battles.

Meantime, the Germans are clinging for dear life to their lines in the east, and it will take time to shift them.

Every Section Hit.

Each renewed grand scale strategic bombings, which started at midnight Wednesday when the weather began to lift, have sent Allied planes from Britain and Italy against nearly every section of the Reich and its edges.

Keeping after the Germans' evaporating oil supply, the bombers added Politz to the list today and crews said the results were good.

Bostons and Mitchells of the R. A. F. second Tactical Air Force bombed a gasoline and oil dump at Clermont in France and blew up a long string of freight cars at Aisding nearby. The fighting French Lorraine squadron accompanied the bombers.

The night Mosquito attacks continued an Allied air offensive in which 1,000 planes from Britain and Italy struck yesterday at vital oil and industrial targets from the Baltic to the Balkans.

Fifty Railway Cars

Fifty railway cars and a German tanker car were reported destroyed in other sweeps over France and Belgium. One plane was listed as missing.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force meanwhile rounded out yesterday's operations with about 1,500 sorties, keeping up the combined large scale air operations against both the north and south flanks of Hitler's wobbling armies.

The Mediterranean bombers blasted the Bologna railyards, other Northern Italy communications along the Po Valley, and oil refineries and airdromes in radio in Northern Italy, Hungary, Yugoslavia and Czechoslovakia.

Destruction of 53 enemy planes yesterday raised the three-day score to 15 in Mediterranean area operations. The Allies lost 19 yesterday.

Advances Made In Arno Valley Of Italian Front

Rome, Aug. 25—(AP)—British 8th Army troops have made "considerable advances" in the upper Arno valley on the central sector of the Italian front and have occupied the villages of Castelnuovo, Pornino and La Montanta, Allied headquarters announced today.

Just east of Florence, in the Pontassieve sector, 8th Army forces have "made good progress toward the Gothic Line and are firmly established on the western slopes of Monte Pecollena."

In the 8th Army sector west of Florence continued patrol activity was reported on both sides of the arno.

Polish patrols of the 5th Army penetrated more than a mile beyond the Metauro River in an exploration of new German defence lines in the Adriatic sector, Gen. Alexander's headquarters said.

The Allied Command, in a statement, paid tribute to the "increasing assistance" rendered by Italian regular army troops fighting alongside the Poles in the Adriatic.

Mountbatten Praises Work of R.C.A.F.

London, Aug. 26. (CP Cable)—Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, supreme southeast Asia commander, described the work of the R.C.A.F. in his theatre as "outstanding" during a press conference here.

Lord Louis, who since his visit to London has returned to his theatre of operations, paid tribute to the R.C.A.F. in answer to a question. He said it was difficult to give a precise picture of the effectiveness of the R.C.A.F., due to the integration of Canadian crews with the R.A.F., but he mentioned specifically Canadian flying boat crews.

GERMANS

"The enemy is leaving bits and pieces to try and delay us, but there is no hope of stand till we say back to the Seine," a field headquarters officer said last night after a sharp Canadian advance of 26 miles had driven the German pocket an area about 36 miles long and 15 miles wide.

As the Germans fell back before this enveloping attack, managing to get away the bulk troops beyond the Seine but leaving thousands of others and a great bulk of equipment behind.

The Supreme Command still remained largely silent about the activities of Lt.-Gen. Patton's armored forces east and south of Paris. The city now was that Montereau, near Fontainebleau, and of Montargis, farther south, had been occupied. With an advance east of the latter city, there was not report on the American force which two days ago penetrated 15 miles beyond Sens, approaching to within 190 miles of the German frontier.

Heavier Resistance.

American forces were reported to have encountered heavy enemy resistance at Elbeuf on the Seine, 14 miles northeast of Rouen, but those capture was prematurely announced at Allied headquarters yesterday.

The Germans shoved the bulk of their forces against the American pocket on the Falaise-Argentan gap to cut off their escape across the Seine, entirely by driving 25 airline miles further forward to the mouth of the river. Heavy fighting was going on on both sides of the town which the Germans still held.

At the northern end of the Allied advance the power Seine pocket, which extends from the vicinity of Elbeuf to Berray, and then roughly toward the coast at a point four miles west of Dieppe, is said to be wiped out in another 24 hours.

Fire Ferry Boats

Across the Seine and along the rocket coast of northern France the R.A.F. continued to pound German trucks were fleeing with their loads in the vicinity of Forward Amiens, indicating a withdrawal. On one road, at least 15 trucks blew up when they were attacked indicating they were carrying munitions.

An Algiers radio report said the Germans were evacuating the big port of Le Havre on the cape of the north of the Seine Estuary in a hurry in an attempt to shorten their lines.

It was announced at headquarters that the American bridgehead across the Seine River west of Paris at Mantes has been firmly held, despite a heavy German attack.

Romania Leaves Axis

The Balkans, the powder-keg of Europe it has been called, was in 1918 a sign of the impending doom of Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm and his militarist Germany. In 1944 the Balkans are showing a similar trend as Romania, threatened with the advancing Russian armies, gave in on Wednesday on the terms of unconditional surrender to the United Nations and her King Michael at once ordered his armies against Hungary.

The swift drives of the Russian forces for the past year and more had brought the Russians up against Romania and it was inevitable that Romania would sooner or later be forced to capitulate. Romania has seen her desperate plight and decided to make the step immediately.

It is said that Bulgaria has been seeking a way out of the struggle, to clear herself of association with Germany which is headed for defeat and collapse.

Romania has also seen the war come back from deep in Russia, and knows for a certainty that the Germans are destined for a debacle.

Now the Romanians will have to take on the Hungarians against whom they are reported as marching and also to get rid of the Hitlerite forces. But Romania has Russian aid at hand in this task.

Romania's abandonment of the Axis and her sending her troops against her former associates the Hungarians and the Germans must be to everyone's liking as well as a sign, the proof or sign that the handwriting is seen very clearly on the war for Germany and that it is but a matter of brief time until Germany is crippled and crushed. Back in 1918 the forefinger of fate was seen first in the Balkans. In this war the signs have been more extended, they have been seen in the loss of North Africa, by the Germans, the defeat of the Hitlerite hordes by the Russians in their great offensives, the loss of Sicily and much of Italy, the lightning thrusts of the Allied armies in northern and Hitler's net into the open fields of France, the strength of the underground and the patriot organizations and above all the towering might on land, in the sea, in the air and in the air of the United Nations.

What Does Hitler Think?

Hitler during the North African campaign once referred to "military idiots." Wonder what he is thinking of the Allied military commanders now when they and their armies are tearing to shreds the fabric of his unholy imperialism and aggression. Rome fell a short brief time ago to Allied Armies. Paris did not fall, she has risen in her French might. Bucharest has turned against the Axis.

Hitler when he made the remark about military idiots was still strong but was beginning to feel the blows of Allied strategy in Russia. At that time he could not have been in the mood he is in now when he can only hope for a turn of events that will never come to save him. He could strike hard then. But now he cannot strike back with military power which has slipped from him with the terrible drainage on the German armies through the war in the east and in Normandy and in Italy. Now he is in a mood of desperation.

The mighty collapse of the doom of Hitler's oppression draws near, the real Gotterdammerung (twilight of the German gods) impends. This is being enacted right before the eyes of the world. Hitler sees it and can do nothing in a military way to prevent it. His fate is sealed and with it the fate of Germany the oppressor. So today he is in a state of desperation with the shaking and shattering of his military might about him, the ruin of Italy and France and Romania, of overrun territory, the defeat of his armies. He can do nothing to halt this avalanche of Allied power and vengeance for the deep-dyed sins and crimes with which Hitler and Germany have treated the world. The world is ablaze with the fires of vengeance and fury which will utterly destroy this man and his evil works. His satellites who see but one hope, that of getting out by unconditional surrender and accept the verdict of the United World they have fought against.

Allied military leaders have proven their superiority to Germany's leaders in their strategy and in their plans and in their use of their vast power. It is Hitler, the man of "intuitions" who has been the military fool or idiot, whose name today frightens no nation, rather spurs all the powers that are available to crush this man who is utter selfishness and viciousness, spite and enmity to every noble impulse and every good cause.

In military strategy the Allies have had the abundance of wise and sane counsel of great military leaders of outstanding and proven gifts. Their counsel like the counsel of the Allied statesmen has been all for the good of the Allied cause. On the German side is the one-sided counsel, unsane and set to evil ambition, tyranny and aggression. Hitler's wrong "intuitions" supported by the advice of his sycophants and admirers who surrounded him have helped to bring catastrophe upon Germany. No great voice had been heard in Germany against aggression and one-sided counsel has prevailed with the ultimate results—a terrible war and the impending debacle of Germany.

When Hitler spoke of military idiots he showed he gloated in what Germany has done throughout the centuries, using power to bludgeon her neighbors. The German object that has been given for German power, for its aggression, Hitler put this dependence in for-his attempted climb to world power. There was one mistake—he who trusts alone in military might overlooks the spirit of freedom and individuality and the fact that democracy is a principle that holds within itself the germs of expanding liberty. He is a military and political fool who disregards these facts. Such a man has been Hitler. He does not belong to this age. He has tried to set up a tyranny that has no place in the modern world.

Death Weapons Shown

In a move to show conclusively that crime does not pay, weapons used in South African murders and exhibits of rare crimes are displayed by the Cape Town police. Among unusual crimes recalled by the display is the picture of an Eastern Transvaal native who trained two monkeys to climb through windows and loot homes. Hand-made counterfeit bank bills, guns used in headline crimes of the past and forgeries of documents which failed to foil justice were taken from the police museum for the educational display. One feature shows how police use ballistics to link shells with murder weapons.

Those Sault Wolves

(Sault Ste. Marie Star)

The other day nine hound pups of the Algoma Wolf Club strain were born on the farm of Dune Gordon at Bar River.

But perhaps by the time they are of an age to take up the chase they will be needed. For wolves are reported from Laird Township, near Lake George, while others have been getting into their licks in the Dunn's Valley section.

Like the poor, the wolves we have always with us. But it seems probable that hounds and bounties will continue to be the best method for dealing with wolves.

DISTINCTION

I envy no man crown or throne
Or wealth or word of fame;
I've share enough of things to own
Recorded in my name.
I've learned when death for comes to me
An added care begins,
But this I'd count it joy to be:
Grandpa to twins!

Some men are known as millionaires;
As leaders few are scored;
At last some graybeard puts on airs
As "chairman of the board."
A Reverend Bishop rules a See
To save us from our sins,
But rarely man's allowed to be
Grandpa to twins.

I have no wish for station high
Or noble rank and rate.
For poohbah! I would never try
Or post of potentate.
Uncheered I'm happy to remain
While fame my brother wins,
But there's a job I'd like to gain:
Grandpa to twins!

Oh, lucky few! to whom God gives
So full a cup of bliss!
The greatest, cleverest man that lives
This joy supreme may miss.
And though but poor of purse is he,
About the world he grins
Who comes to age allowed to be
Grandpa to twins!

Wounded British Airman Trapped Eight Days in Upside-Down Cockpit

By KENNIS PYLE

ON THE WESTERN FRONT (By wireless)—We ran to the wrecked British plane, lying there upside down, and dropped on our hands and knees and peeked through a tiny hole in the side.

A man lay on his back in the small space of the upside-down cockpit. His feet disappeared somewhere in the jumble of dials and rubber pedals above him. His shirt was open and his chest was bare to the waist. He was pinned there by a gasoline.

He turned his eyes toward me when I peeked in, and he said in a typical British manner of offhand friendliness, "Cor, blimey!"

"Are you all right," I asked stupidly.

He answered, "Yes, quite. Now that you chaps are here."

I asked him how long he had been trapped in the wrecked plane. He said he didn't know for sure as he had got mixed up about the passage of time. But he did know the date of the month he was shot down. He told me the date. And I set out loud, "Good God!"

For, wounded and trapped, he had been lying there for eight days!

His left leg was broken and punctured in the ack-ack burst. His back was terribly burned by raw gasoline that had splashed out of his leg. And his leg was pinned rigidly under the rudder bar.

His space was so small he couldn't squirm around to relieve his own weight from his paining back. He couldn't straighten out his legs, which were bent above him. He couldn't see out of his little prison. He had not had a bite to eat or a drop of water. All this for eight days and nights.

Yet when we found him his physical condition shocking, and his mind was as calm and rational as though he were sitting in a London club. He was in agony, yet in his correct Oxford accent he apologized for taking up our time to get him out.

The American soldiers of our rescue party cussed as they worked, mixed with open admiration for this British flier's greatness of heart which had kept him alive and sane through his lonely and gradually hope-dimming ordeal.

One of them said, "Good, but these Limies have got guts!"

It took us almost an hour to get him out. We didn't know whether he will live or not, but he has a chance. During the hour we were ripping the plane open to make a hole, he talked to us. And here, in the best unbiased account derived from the conversation of a brave man whom you didn't want to hear, are his trivial questions, as what happened—

He was an RAF flight lieutenant, piloting a fighter. Over a certain area the Germans began letting him have it from the ground with machine-gun fire.

The first bit knocked out his motor. He was too low to jump, so—foolishly, he said—he turned on his flaps and tried to land. Ah, land! Then they really poured it on him. The second hit got his radio. The third and a third bullet cut right across the balls of his right-hand thumb, fingers, clipping away one of them to the bone.

He felt his wheels up, and the plane's belly hit the ground going uphill on a rocky slope. We could see the groove it had dug for about 50 yards. Then it flopped, tail over nose, into a hole. The pilot was absolutely sealed into the upside-down cockpit.

"That's all I remember for a while," he said. "When it came to, they were shelling all around me."

Thus began the eight days. He had crashed right between the Germans and Allied positions. It was pastoral no-man's land.

For days and nights the field in which he lay surged back and forth between German hands and ours.

His pasture was pocked with hundreds of craters. Many of them were only yards away. One was right at the end of his wing. The metal sides of his plane were speckled with hundreds of shrapnel holes.

He lay there, trapped in the midst of this inferno of explosions. The fields around him gradually became littered with dead. At last American ground pushed past the remains back, and silence came. But no help. Because, you see, it was in that vacuum behind the battle, and only a few might see him.

The days passed. He thirsted terribly. He slept some; part of the time he was unconscious; part of the time he undoubtedly was delirious. But he never gave up hope.

After we had finally got him out, and were taking him back to safety under a wing, "Is it possible that I've been out of this plane since I crashed?" he asked.

Everybody chuckled. The doctor here had arrived and, with the promptest possibility. You were sealed in there, and it took men with tools half an hour to make an opening. And your leg was broken and your back was injured. You haven't been out."

In a talk to women about smoking I said here "If a lady cares to chew she is just as much entitled to taking a chew as a gentleman is, if a gentleman is entitled to smoking is no more harm to a woman than it does to a man. But there is this argument about the injurious effects of tobacco in youth"—and Jewell, as I see it, life is growing, developing period of life from the age of ten years to the age of 25 years. I warned young women smokers to look blemish legs, I prefaced that, indeed, the great majority of persons with Buerger's disease were males who started cigarettes comparatively, we would probably find a good many women afflicted with thromboangiitis obliterans in the next decade or two, now that girls were copying the thing to such extremes. Mind you, I do not mean to imply that smoking is the only cause of Buerger's disease, for there are authen-

POSTAL CARDS ARE READILY COMBUSTIBLE

Some one signing "Postcard Fiancie" asks whether Buerger's disease ends in gangrene, says a friend has it and she suffered much pain, burning and numbness in both feet, and asks whether I can explain about Buerger's disease.

Yes, I have about 5 here recently and had a series of articles about it but a few nights ago when I got to chapter about it in booklet OVD —for copy send ten cents and a stamped envelope bearing your address.

Postal card seldom get to my desk but "Postcard Jennie" got through to me once because she wrote to a newspaper editor about Buerger's disease.

Now the medical name for Buerger's disease is, I regret to say, thrombo-angiitis obliterans. However, I am not inclined to be unreasonable about such matters, in fact I am inclined to be about 99 per cent dropping of one of the 1's from angiitis, I sometimes think, shows that medicine is a liberal art.

In a talk to women about smoking I said here "If a lady cares to chew she is just as much entitled to taking a chew as a gentleman is, if a gentleman is entitled to smoking is no more harm to a woman than it does to a man. But there is this argument about the injurious effects of tobacco in youth"—and Jewell, as I see it, life is growing, developing period of life from the age of ten years to the age of 25 years. I warned young women smokers to look blemish legs, I prefaced that, indeed, the great majority of persons with Buerger's disease were males who started cigarettes comparatively, we would probably find a good many women afflicted with thromboangiitis obliterans in the next decade or two, now that girls were copying the thing to such extremes. Mind you, I do not mean to imply that smoking is the only cause of Buerger's disease, for there are authen-

COCKED HAT

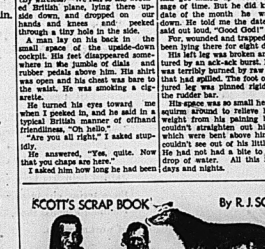
"To knock into a cocked hat" means to knock out of shape with a single blow, or after record, recognition, or to put an antagonist completely out of a contest, either physically or financially.

The phrase is generally supposed to have originally referred to a hat which by a single such a blow that it becomes limp and can be doubled up and carried flat under the arm, like the old-fashioned cocked hats worn in the latter part of the 18th century and the first part of the 19th.

Such hats were three-cornered and had the brim permanently turned up. Their name came from the fact that "to cock" is an old verb meaning to turn, and to cock one's hat still means to turn it up on one side or to set it on the head at a peculiar angle.

The British military hat worn by officers with the full dress uniform is still called a cocked hat, although it differs widely from the cocked hats formerly worn by British naval and military officers, as well as those now worn by church dignitaries.

The island of Saba in the Dutch West Indies, because of its peculiar shape, is known as "Saba's Cocked Hat," and James Monroe, last Revolutionary President to hold such a hat, was called "The Last Cocked Hat."



Sarah Hutchinson, however, believe that "knock into a cocked hat" is only indirectly derived from physically or financially. She says the expression originated in the game of tenpins or bowls. Occasionally a player, with a single ball, will roll down all the pins of a frame except the two corner pins and the head pin, leaving a triangular figure. This is called knocking the pins into a cocked hat, which the triangular figure is supposed to resemble.

On April 30, 1907, Woodrow Wilson, then president of Princeton University, wrote as follows to Adrian H. Joline: "Would that we could do something at once dignified and effective to knock Mr. Bryan once for all into a cocked hat."

This letter was published in January, 1912, when Wilson was seeking the Democratic nomination for the presidency. The purpose of publication was to injure him with William Jennings Bryan and the latter's political friends. But Bryan was one of the men who had most largely instrumental in Wilson's nomination, at the Baltimore convention later in the same year.

Americans Prefer Air Strips Built In Canuck Way

Hessian Process Perfected by Canadian Army Engineers Is Widely Used on Normandy Front

By ALLAN RANDALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the 9th United States Air Force, Overseas (Canadian Press, Aug. 23 (CP)—The Hessian process of building air strips, a method devised and perfected by Canadian army engineers, is being used throughout Normandy for the rapid construction of permanent landing bases for aircraft of all the largest air forces in the world.

Scarcely six weeks after the beachheads were established, enough air bases had been constructed by the engineering genius of this air force to handle hundreds of fighters.

Additional bases are being built just as fast as the forward troops take more territory and the work of building air strips is proceeding all along the allied front. Some of these bases were built under shellfire and bombing[illegible] under the bomb. Casualties among the American engineering outfits engaged in this work averaged about 1 per cent, from enemy action, a group of war correspondents were told when they visited these forward bases.

Great graders, road men and machinery of all kinds and sizes have been thrown into the job of air field construction.

Best of Three

Of three methods used for laying out these strips the Canadian method has been found the best, so good that the 9th Air Force now insists on Hessian strips.

The other methods consist of laying square steel mesh in strips, pinned together, on top of a smooth hand-packed surface and the laying of inter-locking steel plates on a similar surface. The latter is the latest method of British development and the steel plates are now an American idea.

The Hessian strip, so fliers say, is good. Weighing only three more than two tough layers of building paper which it replaces, and made reinforce by a machine which resembles nothing quite so much as a[illegible] stamp lick-er. It has no inherent strength and merely serves, to keep the weather off the hard-packed earth.

All runways on these air strips are long with additional footage at either end for extra safety.

Col. Harold B. Hartney of Wilmington, Del., in charge of this airport construction said that in most cases it was easier to build an airport out of new territory than to use captured airfields. For one thing the Germans mined any airfield they abandoned. For another the German airfields were not much good.

Of Poor Construction

"It is now time to take over a German airfield than to start a new one," he told us. "The German fields were really nothing much more than balloon fields and from one we took out more than 1,000 mines.

The colonel said, it had been learned that at least half of the German air force's losses from accidents were due to poor airfield construction, including landing strips of too small proportions. This he added, was not due to lack of good engineers in the Todt organization but rather, probably due to the Germans having concentrated their engineering and supply facilities on development of armor.

Plans for the airfields now in use in Normandy were conceived probably a year and a half ago. The experts made a close study of R. A. F. pictures of the territory to be taken and had chosen their possible airfield sites long before the troops moved across to France.

Right back of the fighting troops the airfield construction outfits[illegible] small armament and followed these up with fast-moving construction gangs which set to work even with the enemy close at hand.

Love Me, Love My Bee

(By John Gould in Christian Science Monitor.)

Bees are an unpredictable chattel. Some days they are purry and pleasant, and I go among them with[illegible] a bandage on my face and unconcern, but they are nasty and contemptible, and I go among them with veil and mittens, breathing like a beekeeper who can't tell one day from another and I have[illegible] anxiety and more veil whenever I approach a hive.

But on certain days in particular, probably because the honey flow is not to their liking, bees go around looking for trouble and aren't easy where they find it. These are the days they pull the happy housewife as she steps forth to toss some potato peels in the pig pail, or the mailman as he leans from his automobile to fill our box with glad tidings.

They will fly 300 yards just to pick off a fallen quietly heeding bees on yonder knoll, and they sense any youthful innocent bowling to the house with a hand clapped to a beesbreed.

Today, however, was another of those days. We were on our way to the hives, I and the bee that was teasing the tractor slowly past the[illegible] and sitting on top of the tank, wondering if one load would be enough, and a bee that[illegible] the air from the end of the nose. I have drilled in, and then sat there wiggling my nose.

"It appears that I made some[illegible] remark to which my hired man stopped the tractor to see how many people we had run over. When I am with him it is merely a bee sting, and in such an unpeopled place, my hired man said, —the tears that come with the more severe stings and the[illegible] hysterics.

I probably should have throttled her except that bringing both hands together for this purpose would necessitate taking one down from my nose. I did get out my knife and open a blade hoping that when she came digging and guffawing she would have the decency to unencumber me.

But in the midst of her laughter and glee she let out another of her[illegible] and then made a few[illegible] around the spray-tank, and got up again on the other side—carrying with[illegible] that she had a bee in her hair and why didn't I do something besides standing there holding my nose.

So I pulled out hers and she pulled out mine, and it wasn't so funny after all. But we're going to be even with the bees. Tomorrow we're going to put on veils and take their honey away from them.

Washington Spotlight

By C. B. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, Aug. 25 (CP)— Republican and administration foes who fear and dislike the C.I.O.'s political action committee and its avowed determination to elect President Roosevelt hailed with delight this week's resignation of two Utah locals in protest against voting instructions.

For months the P.A.C. has been working openly for Mr. Roosevelt and Democrats of their choice in the most active political organization so far in the campaign.

But when the committee sought to force its members to vote as he directed or resign it went too far for some of its adherents.

Two Utah locals of the C.I.O. unanimously advised Sidney Hillman, P.A.C. head, that they chose to resign and charged him with trying to get control of the Democratic party.

They took this action, they said, "rather than give up our constitutional rights and be forced to sponsor an Intrusted vote."

These instructions were issued July 25, they said, "when we were told that all members must vote Democratic or resign," and they added: "We wish to remain free Americans with the right to cast our votes as our forefathers intended—free from pressure of any one man or group of men."

One swallow doesn't make a summer and two dissenting C. I. O. locals will not wreck the P.A.C. plans but the committee's opponents are hoping these incidents are but the start of a general protest against regimentation at the polls.

CONGRESS ON THE AIR; Radio soap operas which write the battles of housewives during most of every week-day afternoon will meet new competition if the resolution of Senator Claude Pepper (Dem.-Fla.) gains enough support. He wants the debates of both House of Congress broadcast as a step toward "pure democracy." But blase gallery reporters comment that the soap operas needn't worry.

TELLING FDR: About the most unnecessary job in the country is that assigned to 40 men and women by the Democratic national convention officially to inform President Roosevelt that he was nominated last July 20. Postmaster General Frank Walker heads the delegation but he and the rest are seeking an opportunity to go with his group of informers to the White House to tell F. D. R. what he and the whole world knew almost the moment it happened.

From there the Prince went along the line where the Netherlands Brigade is engaged in the fighting this week.

The slim Prince, whose Princess lives in Ottawa with their family, told the Netherlands troops:

"Your first actions here have proved[illegible] and I have been promised this morning that Netherlands troops would be trained in other actions on the French front, I expect soon. It will be a matter of a race behind the fleeing enemy until you reach Holland. I shall be there at the meetings from Queen Wilhelmina. 'It has been a great pleasure for me to see again that Netherlands troops now are in the struggle for the[illegible] of the fact you are sharing in-it."

Peterborough Boy Recounts Strange Tale of Adventure

Peterborough, Aug. 24 —(CP)— A story of detention in a German Prison Camp in Poland, of his escape, recapture and final liberation when American troops overran Germany, are revealed here today in a letter from Cam. W. I. Blair, 1st Canadian Parachute Battalion, Peterborough.

Reported missing July 8, Cam. Blair told in a letter to his wife of his adventures since. They when he parachuted over Normandy fell in the Caen area and was picked up by a German patrol. He is now is recovering from wounds in England.

Wounded while trying to locate his battalion after landing in France, Blair was captured at a medical station where he was receiving treatment for leg and arm wounds.

"Four days later, I found myself in a stalag at Rennes," the letter said. "The Germans had my leg and arm fixed up and as I was free to move, they were preparing to ship me off to Germany. Accordingly I dressed and decided that we didn't want that so planned to escape on the first subsequent air raids. The stalag guards all went to ground during the raids

Blair said he and his companion made the trip safely during a heavy raid July 5.

Wounded during their attempted escape, the two were recaptured and placed in French hospitals where their wounds became infected, keeping him in hospital for several weeks. Blair's condition improved more quickly and "was shipped to Germany" before American forces took Rennes.

Blair was flown to England after treatment in an American evacuation hospital.

Sense of Direction Given To Dogs But Not To Men

By W. H. Colclough, Vancouver, in Stratford Beacon-Herald

"Where is the dog you had last year?" my wife asked me when showing some visitors through her flower garden. "Oh, he's in Kingston," she replied, somewhat absentmindedly, "I guess I knew. He disappeared about two months ago. I advertised for him, but I guess he[illegible] by now. He was quite a character and we had grown very fond of him. I got him when he was then 13 years old—he disappeared. Two weeks after I got him brought him to the[illegible] he had been picked up[illegible] Langley Prairie, Langley Prairie is a town on the Fraser Valley about 28 miles out from Vancouver.) "How he got there nobody knew. He crossed Vancouver, worked his way through Burnaby, then New Westminster over the Fraser River and ten miles up the valley to Langley Prairie, where we lived for a year, years ago. He was found on the side of the highway in a weakened condition, but after six weeks here at home he became as chipper as ever and then he disappeared. I'm afraid he is gone this time."

Stories about dogs are very common and they have been known to do almost unbelievable things, involving psychological processes such as reasoning, deduction, conclusions, etc., but just when there was left the brain of this small terrier which would drive him back to his home in a place where he had lived a short time years ago, to, die, is an extremely interesting problem. Just how a little dog, partly blind and[illegible] could[illegible] over a route like that distance, through heavy traffic, will always remain a mystery.

One thing seems to be certain, and that is that a sense of direction has been given our canine friends which has been denied to the[illegible] woodsman of gods. Nobody has ever yet explained how it is that you may take a dog, place him in a box and put the box in a closed car, drive 10 miles from home into a strange locality, and yet have the animal go straight home when released.

Some years ago kidnappers proved that a man with better than average intelligence could be[illegible] disorientated, though the country and not have the slightest idea where he was at the destination. In one case the victim ended up in the same house from his own dwelling, yet thought he was 50 miles away. Had a small terrier been smuggled into the kidnapper's car he could have[illegible] out of the bag" in short order.

The average dog-lover will resent[illegible] to stop in his work and start telling you about the marvelous intelligence that Nature has bestowed upon the dog. But there are times when the bored listener will conclude that the dog got all the intelligence.

A few months back an old lady went for her regular afternoon walk in Stanley Park, accompanied by her Chow dog. She failed to return that evening, or the next day either. The police was notified, and made a thorough search of the park. On the third day, when two soldiers were strolling through the[illegible] they[illegible] in a hollow in the park and two miles away, they saw a[illegible] dog, and to a small creek, plunge his head in the water and then hurry away through the brush. They followed the dog, and found the old lady in a semi-conscious condition lying under a tree, while the dog poured water from his mouth into the face of his mistress. The lady recovered.

The[illegible] part of this story was later proved, and at a public meeting the famous dog was presented with a medal for[illegible] and for saving human life. Judging from the[illegible] of this dog, it would[illegible] would have gladly traded the crowd, the platform and the medal for a bone in the backyard any day.

There are folk who hate dogs, but they are in the minority. There are folk who[illegible] to dogs, but who neglect them. Unfortunately[illegible] is the case with such a master, but the average individual knows that a dog pays dividend[illegible] that cannot be recorded on the income tax returns.

"Love me—love my dog."

The MUSSELS HELPED Their Own Destruction

Chertsey's breakwater owed much of its strength to a peculiar[illegible] of the mussel.

The French, ever resourceful, harnessed the mussel to help in the construction of a breakwater on the Normandy coast, and spin what is known as[illegible] of fine silk-like strand formed by the mussel into a kind of[illegible]

The strings of all the mussels join up into a rope and from a mussel[illegible] to the next rope are the strongest[illegible] shift it.

When the breakwater was being built the ingenious French engineers put thousands of mussels on loosely piled stones, knowing that the byssus would bind them together more strongly than any cement.

This method certainly helped to make the breakwater a worthy challenger of the sea's most violent moods.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, wearing a floor length gown of white sheer lace, with a train, and fingertip veiles. A long embroidered net veil was caught to her hair with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of "Greta Garbo" roses and fern.

The maid of honor, Miss Marcella Stapley, sister of the groom, wore a floor length blue sheer and the bridesmaid, Miss Marguerite Gowland in a floor length pink sheer. Both girls wore shoulder length white embroidered veils and carried arm bouquets of Vagabond Prince' and 'Smiling Master' gladioli.

The bride's brother, Mr. Eric Summers, assisted the groom.

The ushers were Mr. Milton Shaw, Ivanhoe, and Mr. Harold West, Stirling.

Mrs. M. Shaw, Ivanhoe, cousin of the bride, played the wedding music.

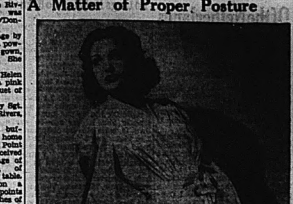
Mrs. Harold West, Stirling, sang "O Perfect Love", during the signing of the register.

Following the ceremony, the guests numbering fifty were seated to the home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother received in a gown of cocoa tan and the groom's mother wore a printed crepe. Both had corsages of gladioli.

The home was tastefully decorated in white and pink crepe paper and the bride's table was centred with a three tiered wedding cake. Mesdames Joyce, Johnson, Lois, Mc-Cann, Marion Greaves, and Master Ian Johnson served the luncheon. Mrs. Mr. Edgar McKeown, Mrs. Elwood Johnson and Mrs. Ross Hoard assisting in the kitchen.

For travelling, the bride donned a two-piece frock of luggage tan with brown accessories. The happy couple left amid showers of confetti for Ottawa and other points.

On their return they will reside on the groom's farm at Hallowy.



The groom's gift to the bride was a chest, of silverware and to the groomsman and ushers, billfolds.

The bride's gifts to her attendants, soldat and pianist were English china cups and saucers.

Rev. T. C. Townsend proposed a toast to the bride. The pastor also paid tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Phil Darr, uncle and aunt of the groom, who were married 39 years that day.

A special toast was proposed to the three men, James Sharp, William Johnson and Roy Thrasher, who each got their bride at the Summers' home. This is the fourth wedding held at the Summers' home in the past forty years.

Lining Up With Good Lookers--A Matter of Proper Posture

Linda Darnell has a most graceful carriage.

By HELEN FOLLETT

"Slim Mirrie's a goddess and she looks a queen" wrote the poet. A lovely lady in some lines called Ill would be nice if that could be said of our young moderns. All too often one observes the awkward along with shoulders humped over, chest caved in saddened forming a little shelf because they have lost holding their backbone properly.

Poor posture is considered to be the acme of beauty, and fashion too. It is to be deplored. It takes a hanger, vitamin A, figure to set clothes gloriously. What is Stoptimes and money keeping her complexion in form, preserving the beauty of her hair, her hands keeping hands lily white.

Settled Look.

But she is so unmindful of the need of good musculature and correct posture that she lets her figure go to seed. At 30 she will have the "settled" figure of 40.

At 40 she will look like 60, and we mean 60. Then we'll all be mad at herself!

The figure-conscious girl is pretty stupid; she does not draw her heels, poke along like a tired mule. She does not walk as if she were in a hurry and ease instead of dragging up like a long stride. When she enters a room, she is a charming picture.

Exercise or Posture.

This a deep breath, my friend and let the tummy sag and carry in the abdominal muscles. See how close with a neat line from chin to the bone. Then pull up spinal column, inflate the chest. Let arms hang, or arms have an easy pose. Point toes straight ahead and walk. Let steps fall, take the first position and repeat. If you have fallen into easy habits of posturing, this exercise will strengthen body fibres, especially at the waistline. Ten minutes' use is a requirement if one is to line up with the good lookers.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Small Means and Domesticity Not Destructive of Married Happiness

A couple of weeks ago this column asked the question if family life is destructive of the romance of the marital happiness. The question was inspired by a letter from a girl whose husband is overseas. They'd been married less than 6 months, when he was ordered away.

They'd been engaged for two years and their short honeymoon seems to have been a foretaste of parting. And she wanted to know if he came back to her if their love would be as it was. Some enabled plans that it had been during those wonderful days of their engagement and their rapturous honeymoon.

This girl was afraid, as she wrote me, of the "terms of life", the debasing influence of housekeeping in a small apartment; the constant and re-counting of pennies and dimes, the possibility of a baby with the making up of formulas, vegetable straining, diaper washing and all of the humdrum routine that goes around His Majesty The Baby when the latter decides to favor a couple who were happy enough without his interference.

They had hoped for the stork but the girl felt he had passed them by, and she didn't dare confess her hopes to her soldier husband before he sailed, nearly a year ago. I heard from him in the Italian theatre she was pretty sure they had received the blessing of the stork. But she didn't want to tell him until she was positively certain, and then she had the idea of not telling him until she could begin her letter "Hello Daddy".

When I felt pretty sure this greatest happiness was to be ours, I confided in Tom's mother who is a little older than I, and perfect care of me as I wasn't very well, which helped me make the most adorable baby clothes. They were outer evidence of the old-fashioned and made on the same model she had made Tom's twenty-two years before. Somehow I like that the modern method of dressing a baby in shirt and diaper, is a time and save washing.

So we had the glorious secret from Tom until Junior had actually arrived, and I wrote our famous "Hello Daddy" letter. And the first news he had of the arrival of his son and heir was a "Dear Mother" cable.

Now, dear Miss Fairfax, I want to say this. Things weren't easy for Tom and me during the years of our engagement. I had to take a job in a shop during that time and Tom lived and on his pay and hard on my pride and my feet. But I kept they are until the end of a good job and was finally inducted into the Army.

"I think our love will withstand the pounding-grinding of domestic life when he returns. We are ourselves and we have Junior who grows richer every day. I've heard girls who write to your column if they're really in love, that domesticity in which two young people are trying to establish a home only strengthens their closer together".

GOOD MANNERS

On Wearing Long Gloves

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—When a girl wears long gloves, either in the late afternoon or evening, should she, when she is having tea or cocktails, remove one glove, or both gloves, or leave both on?

2.—Next month I am going to be married to a soldier. In my wedding party will be my sister and three girl friends. Would you please suggest a somewhat inexpensive present that I could give to these girls for doing me this favor?

—E. E.

1.—Wear your gloves into the room, and keep them on at the table. It isn't good taste, and it certainly looks awkward, for a woman to leave her gloves on the arms and just take them off the hands of the gloves. Always take off your gloves when you drink or eat.

2.—It would be a nice idea for you to give your sister, who will undoubtedly be your honor attendant a more inexpensive gift than you give your girl friends. Possibly your wedding gift would like to have as a memorable gift for this occasion. Then you might give each of your bridesmaids; a piece of costume jewelry; compact; bracelet, or if they wear charm bracelets, an appropriate charm; fountain pen, or purse pencil; pin or clip, to wear at your wedding; identification bracelet; evening bag; comb in case, for purse or evening bag; key chain with monogrammed ; corsage ornament; jewel case; perfume bottle.

Open Your Gifts When You Get Them.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My husband and I are giving a dinner in a restaurant to celebrate our twentieth wedding anniversary. If any of the guests bring gifts, do you think I should open them as they are handed to me, or since the dinner is in a restaurant, take them home unopened and do my thanking by notes?

—C. E.

I suggest that you open the gifts when they are handed to you, since this is the natural way to register appreciation for the gift, the thought and for the gift. Of course this means wrapping the gifts up again, ... but this inconvenience to you is better than not letting your friends enjoy seeing and hearing your immediate appreciation.

Is Man Name Known First

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Will you settle an argument, please? A says that when you are introducing a man to a woman, it is proper to ask a man if he has met a girl ... "Sir Smith, have you met Miss Brown?" B says that you should say, "Miss Brown, have you met Mr. Smith?" Who is right?

Alan

A is right. And a good way to remember this rule is that when asking this question about a possible former meeting of a woman and man, always put the names in reverse order from that in which they would be introduced ... that is, mention the man's name first in the question.

The Experts Say

By The Canadian Press

Ottawa, Aug. 25 (CP)—CORN-ON-THE-COB is revered old North American dish which comes into its own every August and September. It is one of those wonderful foods which is just as good for you as it is delicious: the score sheet issued by the Nutrition Division of the Pensions Department, gives a bonus of five points for a serving of corn, green or yellow vegetable, because they are so rich in vitamin A. (That is the vitamin which promotes growth, increases resistance to disease and keeps eyes and skin healthy.)

So these days when you're menu making, remember the golden goodness of corn-on-the-cob for good eating and good health.

FRESH TOMATOES: No matter how good canned tomatoes and tomato juice seem during the winter months, they can never equal the flavor of luscious ripe tomatoes fresh from the garden.

This is the time of the year when every dining table should be graced with a good big platter of sliced raw tomatoes, daily. The preparation is easy. If you follow these tips from Laura Pepper, chief of the Agriculture Department Consumer Section:

Quickest way to prepare tomatoes is to drop them in boiling water for a moment and then into cold. Don't leave them too long in the hot water for it will cook them. Often this happens if clings to the skin and the tomatoes are difficult to slice.

Another way is to rub the skin with the back of a knife until it is sufficiently loosened to slip off easily. Or hold the tomato over a gas flame for a second until the skin splits.

The next point...to get the best value, and that means the most vitamins, out of tomatoes peel and slice just before serving.

FALL HOUSECLEANING: Although you wouldn't think it by the mercury, fall housecleaning looming on the horizon and one or two small chores about the house now will make the big job easier. For instance, give your summer rugs a critical once over.

Grass rugs, woven of heavy marsh grasses on a stout cotton thread generally have a pebbled or ribbed term which is showing signs of wear at this time of year. Mouse pulled thinned with turpentine will put the gleam back on if you have a secret ambition to paint. Other common summer rugs made of sisal coconut or jute fibre can be given a quick once over with soapsuds. but don't soak them. Painting is harder but it can be done.

JAM MAKING: By way of preserving time, Canada Preserves and Jellies Institute, Agriculture Department has these general suggestions which will help the most inexperienced cook over the hurdle of jam making:

Select firm, ripe fruit and be careful to measure fruit and sugar carefully. Wash fruit, cut or mash to start the flow of juice. To prevent sticking a little water may be added. A little cider vinegar may be added to less acid fruits such as peaches and pears. Heat fruit very slowly to extract juices. Stir frequently, using a wooden spoon.

All enjoyed a bountiful repast and then the afternoon was spent in reminiscing of old times and friends. Several pictures were taken on the lawn of families and different generations and a very happy time was spent together.

Rural Italy Is Still Feudal

We had not been more than half an hour in our billets at the Masseria San Cataldo in Italy when the boys had begun to refer to "our mansion" and "the hacienda", says a New Zealand officer writing in The New Statesman and Nation. The farmhouse is in fact rather like the Mexican manors one sees on the films: a big flat-roofed building with square towers at the ends. It has a wide arcaded porch on the ground floor and an open terrace above it. The living quarters are all on the upper floor. The rooms on the right of the terrace are the master's quarters, uninhabited since his last visit four years ago. We found them sparsely furnished; the silver, the linen and the bulk of the other furniture, all of it first-class stuff, were locked away in a room on the farm. It happened that the wife of the workmen to whom I spoke was the foreman, the guardian. Although I saw him every day for a month I never learned his surname. I called him Giovanni, at his request; the Italians called him Ghuan. A tall, straight man of sixty with his hat always square upon his head and dressed in cottony near-tweeds with collar and tie. Giovanni had fought in the last war at Caporetto and in the Abyssinian war had been some time with the occupation troops in Dalmatia. So he knew his army ranks and always hailed me with a "buon giorno, Signor Capitano," though his last six inches above his head. We became good friends. I was able to help him in certain small troubles of his, including the troops from trampling the vegetables, allowing him to keep the key of the storeroom for which he was responsible, and such like. In return he gave me the use of odd things of furniture from the store-rooms and was generally co-operative.

Big Estate

It was from Giovanni that I got my first idea of the size of the farm. I supplemented what he told me by observation and by talks with other workmen, with the fattore and with a neighboring landowner, a retired colonel who had been driven by fear of bombing to leave his town house and reside for the time being on his land. The Masseria San Cataldo I learned, is one of ten farms, seven in Apulia and three in Campania, the property of the Marquis of Arragna, a nobleman who has kept with his Spanish name the condottiere status of his Spanish family, with the addition of four ravens to indicate the centuries that have ceased since the founder of the family conducted Black Ivo north of Constantia. Considerable German shipping and the Nazis' small but effective Black Sea naval force, consisting chiefly of E and U-boats, are based there, the expectation in Cairo was that the Germans would scuttle their ships.

Russia's offer of co-belligerent status to Romania was willing to fight the Germans and Hungarians hastened a complete collapse of Italo-Balkan policy, and the supplied recognition of Romania's right to Transylvania, said a Moscow dispatch.

ROMANIA MUST

90 Nazi Divisions in Romania.

Best estimates of German troops in Romania range up to 60 divisions, many under-strength. That force of perhaps 400,000 men represents Nazi survivors of their Russian armies, chased from that rich Russian republic in the winter campaign. Presidential aim is believed massed on the active front. Apparently it was to annihilate these Germans that the twin Russian offensives were launched.

Romania has perhaps 25 to 30 divisions, many under-strength from less suffered in the ill-fated Russian campaigns which were estimated to have cost Romania up to 1,000,000 casualties. Part of these were at the front, perhaps 150,000 were in the centre of the country and near the border of Transylvania, Hitler awarded Hungary half of Transylvania in the 1940 Vienna dictate.

Seine Bridgehead

The Seine bag is rapidly being folded up and with Lisieux cleared of its garrison, British armor moved east rapidly, linked up with the Canadians at Thiberville, and reached St. Georges du Viere, just west of the Seine.

British infantry also pushed out from Lisieux and the Touques River area to the north and midway between the Touques and the Biale.

Air-borne troops finally captured Pont l'Eveque, nine miles north of Lisieux, and advanced eastward towards Beuzeville, seven miles southeast of Honfleur.

After cleaning up the coastal town of Trouville, the Gekigka forces advanced four miles along the coast road to capture Villerville and with British and Canadian airborne forces were closing in on Honfleur, a spanish old Normandy fishing village from which Champlain sailed on his voyages to Canada.

Canadian infantry and tanks are operating on more than a score of roads and German forces, which have been ordered to delay this advance to the Seine, are finding it impossible to block the advance.

"The Germans obviously see the writing on the wall now and are getting back as fast as they can," a staff officer at Canadian headquarters said. "Guns are being rushed back to the Seine for evacuation attempts."

PROGRESS REPORT No. 7

To:
SHAREHOLDERS,
NORSEMAN MINES LIMITED,

We quote the following which just received from our Mine Manager, in charge of the work on the Manager Claims in the Area of

YELLOWKNIFE

"SHIPPED SAMPLES AND REPORT ON 1,000 LBS. MAIL. FOUND SIXTEEN VEINS AND QUARTZ STRINGERS. SEVEN OF CERTAIN CONSIDERABLE GRADE. TWO VEINS SHOW GOOD WIDTH AND GRADE. ONE GOOD VEIN AND STRINGER STOP NORTH. YOU HAVE SCHEDULED MANAGING DIRECTOR TO ARRIVE HERE ON MONDAY NEXT. ROSS COLEMAN INTERVIEWER WAS SHIPPED TO GOODFISH LAKE TUESDAY."

We consider this an outstanding report considering the small amount of work performed on the property to date. It is our opinion that this will develop into a rich bonanza. Yellowknife and Beaverlodge so far in the past have proven up a mine.

BOUSSAINGAULT

The writer has just returned from the Norseman property Boussaingault and will endeavour to give you a brief summary of progress to that date on the property.

The diamond drill is now at work on Hole No. 6, with a total of slightly over 2,000 feet to date. We have many substantial veins of quartz encountered in the drilling, a number of low-grade gold assays, and, of course, the ever present occurrences of visible gold. Hole No. 1 was the deepest so drilling was suspended until we could pull the rods from this hole. Hole No. 2 was then drilled to a depth of 1,000 feet before coming through it for construction. It was a considerable surprise to find that there was a very good values at greater depth. This Hole is in the Southern section of the property. Hole No. 3 is in the Northern Mines, who are now drilling the Eastern section of their property. Hole No. 4 is in the Northern section of the property. Hole No. 5 is in the Southern section of the property. Hole No. 6 is in the Southern section of the property.

After further drilling in this Southern section of the Norseman claims where the Magnetic Survey showed possibilities, we will then move the drill over to the Northern area adjoining Aumagon. In addition there can be no doubt in anyone's mind that Norseman will develop into a substantial and successful property of gold ore considering the depth of ore already found and the drilling encountered.

In addition to these findings, Aumagon previously disclosed an important mineralized zone four feet wide for the entire distance of the property and stretching from the extension crosses the Norseman property for at least 1500 feet. Aumagon has also found a number of veins and one of this "break" in all drills were rushed for "intensive development" on the Norseman and stripping of the mineralized drill will cover the extension of Aumagon as mentioned above. The Norseman property is a large one and therefore is not only for the purpose of locating high-grade gold veins but also to outline it as far as possible in order to determine structure to depths from 600 to 700 feet. When this has been accomplished and the ore bodies blocked out, we will be in a position to much more intelligently decide the proper location for further development work to be done.

Remember, too, that Norseman's property is in the heart of perhaps the most intensified gold development area in Canada. Within a radius of twenty miles, Yellowknife, Con, Asamaque and Lavallo—are using 1, 2 or 3 drills each. At least a dozen other companies in the area are also now doing the same. The recent drill hole showings on Lexvieport to the East with fully encouraging, and the Giant Mine to the West are outstanding producer in the future. No. 10 Hole for example, cut 14.4 feet of ore assaying .60 oz. per ton of gold and 3". We understand that the showings from Hole No. 12 are really sensational. The ore will be released in a few days.

News of high-grade showings on the Norseman claims either by drilling or development will, in our opinion, make Norseman shareholders who hold shares at even double their present market value. We have no shares for sale but offer none. We expect news of that sort almost any time and everything is being done to get the facts when it may be received.

Yours faithfully,

Semark bunched hits to score two runs for the Combines in the second inning on a walk and Mrs. Watson's hit gave the losers their other tally in the fourth.

In the meantime Reliance were scoring runs in every inning with Gene Semark getting five circuit blows and a single for a perfect night's batting average. Rita Bird also flattened her batting average with four hits in five trips.

Millie Foster struck out five and walked but one while F. Delorme batted for the losers.

Captured Towns Out of Bounds

With American Troops in Brittany, Aug. 25 (CP)—One thing that annoys doughboys most is that after fighting for days—perhaps weeks—to take a town, it immediately is put "off limits."

The idea is many soldiers are allowed to remain in town unless they are on official business. The Army can't permit every liberated town and occupation by troops interferes with rehabilitation of the civic life—but the Infantry can't always see these reasons.

"We've even have the German trained now," said one disgruntled doughboy. "The last thing a Nazi does before pulling out of town is hang up a sign, reading: "Off limits to all troops."

Columbian Squires Defeat Hastings In Playoff Series

Don Boyle Restricts the Opposition to Five Hits

SCORE IS 8-2

Behind Don Boyle's five-hit pitching the Bellville "squires" won the first game of the Junior O.A.A. baseball playoffs at the Hastings kids by the score of 8 to 2 at the Fair Grounds here last evening. The complete series in the best-in-three series will be played at Hastings on Monday.

With Don Boyle scattering five hits in a masterful pitching effort and backed by eight of the visiting batters, his team mates collected eleven safeties off the fallywise of the slugging Jack Warner to score three runs in the first inning, setting a merrie pace for the fracas and clout in with Boyle being given five support hits and three runs.

After Donovan struck out for the first Squire batter, Cosby singled and Boyle walked. A combination of attack to have Wardaugh, Culkin and Cosby scampering home with counters to jam the runways before Morris Pitzpatrick could fan Gordon Donovan and later going home on a passed ball for four runs. Before the initial frame of triple was wasted, while Bob Bunton singled and scampered on Smith, Quigley's triple to open the fifth for Hastings gave Boyle a fine fielder's choice for the visitors' first tally, an error and a fielder's choice giving Hastings their only run of the O.A.A. Clapper's victory in the ninth.

Jack Warner, with three for four, Wardaugh and Fitzpatrick with two hits each paced the Bellville team while Quigley and Smith collecting two of their five base hits. Hunter and Bunton led the batting for the home team while Quigley did likewise by fanning six batters and struck out ten and Warner four as there wasn't a single walk issued in the game.

Yesterday's Stars

Ted Wilks and Walker Cooper, Cardinals — Wilks copped 10th straight victory as Cards moved closer to Brooklyn, Cooper drove in Augie Galan with the run in the ninth as Cards' game-winning spurt in third.

WINNER DISQUALIFIED

New York, Aug. 25—(AP)— Clyde Hughin, West Indies lightweight, was knocked down four times and belted out for keeps by Monte Pigmalone in the 12th round, last night at Fort Hamilton, but Hughin won the fight.

Pigmalone had English down for the eight-count and three times for nine but became over anxious and knocked him cold after the bell ending the second round.

Referee Young Otto disqualified the New Yorker.

LOUGHRAN DISCHARGED

Philadelphia, Aug. 25 — (AP) Tommy Loughran, former light-heavyweight champion and one of boxing's internationally known figures, who was medically discharged from the Marines several weeks ago because of coverage, on Monday will become associated with Lowry & Company, a super brokerage concern.

Joe McGuigan, district sales manager of the firm, announced that the 41-year-old Loughran first will be stationed in the Philadelphia office, then be sent on the road as a salesman.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

A parson, walking down the street or an English village, was attracted by some very strong and colorful language close by. Turning, he observed a man having difficulty in slipping the rim of his spare tire on the wheel.

"A good man that kind of language won't help you," he said when the man had finished. "You should ask the Lord to help you."

"Wot!" replied the irate motorist. "I've tried everything else, I might as well try that."

So saying he bowed his head for a moment, then raised up, took the rim and slid it smoothly and easily onto the wheel. The parson looked, scratched, his head, and "Well, I'm blessed," he said.

What Goes?

Following a recent announcement that an armed services football league would operate in Central Canada, the various services military headed by Military District No. 2, Kingston, made application to be admitted into the proposed league, but their advances were promptly given the well known run around. Now, it's no military secret to say there is the nucleus of a mighty fine football squad among the various service camps in and around the Kingston City. Also they have the fine Richardson Stadium in which to play games and all of the football attributes to assure the success of such a venture. However, the final onto answer was still NO.

Prior to this it had been announced that a service rugby league would operate with teams from Camp Borden, St. Thomas, Camp Petawawa, Toronto R. C. A. F., Trenton "Flyers" and the Toronto Navy quintet, the latter being forced into the playoffs by Ottawa. At that time it was announced, and supposed, that each camp would play home games for the benefit of the unit personnel and civilians who were sufficiently interested in watching service league football. There is no denying there is a wealth of football strength in the various camps and there would prove quite attractive through the winter months, but more anon.

Now we hear all games are to be played at Varsity Stadium. This has not been announced officially as yet but our informant, who is usually reliable, makes no secret of it that F/L. Lew Hayman is the prime mover of the service league and presumably Toronto teams will benefit and now it is rumored that the Queen's University team will be Toronto's Varsity Stadium each Saturday for rugby games.

Oh yes, and by the way, where does all this leave the struggling O. A. A. F. soccer league?

Squires Too Good.

Johnny Boyle's local Squire kids were too good in every department for Aubrey "Dit" Clapper's Hastings kids in the first game of O. A. A. baseball playoffs last night, the local winning 8-2, which is a good indication of the difference in the night's play. Don Boyle, on the Squires' mound, observed a mighty fine masterful pitching chore as the locals, who collected ten safeties off Clapper and Jack Warner of Hastings' Jack Warner. Incidentally, the Boston Bynin playing coach Clapper, has a smart infield part in Quigley at short and Wes Smith at the Squires will have a night's chore beating Clapper's kids in Hastings next Monday.

The fruits of hard practice were in evidence last night when Coach Boyle's Squires made it in bunt Warner out of business. And they did just that in the first inning when Wardaugh, Culkin and Fitzpatrick all layed down perfect bunts for hits to the outer paths before Morris Rollins came through with the pay-dirt hit and all of the fielding that's and some-fine fielding that carries the victors home to victory. It was bad to see such an empty stand but no doubt the fans were waiting for tonight's Kingston Collegiate and Bellville intermediate O. A. S. A. play-off.

Remember When—

Captain Matthew Webb of England became the first recorded English Channel swim 68 years ago today. He did it in 22 hours 45 minutes. Webb is credited officially with having made the first swim across the English Channel—a claim that Captain Paul Boynton, American, disputes. Boynton won in April of the same year.

Strange Quirk.

Here is a strange quirk about this home-run business, which certainly was unexpected, and that is the New York staff.

No fewer than 19 hitters have poked the home homers of the season against Manhattan's hurlers. The Yankees, however, haven't a pitcher pinch homer won a game in 31 in the league. Only Mickey Whitehead, who belted one off Dubiel.

Just think that over. Of the 46 home runs poked by Yankee batters, 19 had been hit by men who previously had not been able to get the circuit range.

Reliance Gals In.

Gene LaBonne's Reliance lassies made sure of a semi-final play-off spot in the Quinte Ladies' Softball League by beating the Combines 12 to 3 last night at the Memorial Park. Incidentally Jimmie Semark's gals, Millie Foster fired strong ball for Reliance while her team mates were racking up runs in all of the seven innings. Tonight at 8 o'clock at Memorial View "Bombertics" and Universal Studios tangle in the Amherst lawn with the "Bombertics" one up in a best-in-three series.

SIXTH WARTIME SOCCER SEASON OPENS SATURDAY

New Attendance Records in City but Calibre of Play Will be Down

2 MAJOR CIRCUITS

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 25 —(CP Cable)— The sixth wartime soccer season opens tomorrow and, with the war news cheerful, there is a feeling new attendance records are in sight even though the calibre of play will be far below peacetime.

The ministry of home security, which has so many football-minded people working for it as any other single organization, has given the "green light" to football with the announcement no new restrictions are to be placed on the size of the crowds. However, Football League matches in Southern England will be interrupted if "imminent danger" signals of approaching flying bombs are given.

And after keeping football going under all the attendant difficulties of the war, the aim is to make this the most successful of the war and pave the way for full-blooom peacetime play.

The Football League consisting of three major circuits—the League South, League North and League West—has many gaps in the ranks of seasoned performers and most club managements will have to face again the task of using what players they can get away from the fighting services and assembling work. Some clubs would like more football than the season's plans call for and there have been complaints from some club directors that the decision to postpone relegation of the league competition until next year, even if the war ends before Christmas, has taken without consulting the clubs and with little appreciation of public reaction.

Toronto, Aug. 25 — (CP) — Well, anyway, it was something to get rid of the suspense when Red Dutton finally confessed he was abandoning the N. H. L. to its own nasty devices for the duration but all we have to chew our fingernails about is wondering who will be the lucky successor.

Names have been mentioned, and more names will be suggested until the new league president is chosen. But Sports Ed has been given also an appreciative build up as Montreal Star Sportscribe Baz O'Meara received at the hands of Elmer (Moose) Ferguson.

Fergie suggests Baz for his wide and far-reaching knowledge of hockey, and as a man who has broken some much-needed publicity to the league. "Dotton had he stayed, could have been relied upon to inspire some good color stories in his own paper," Ferguson says of O'Meara, has the writing ability to turn out the reams of copy needed to keep the league's viewpoint in the public eye. That, of course, goes also for the other sport writers who have been mentioned for the job. . . .

And, continues the irrepressible Fergie, his candidate has a ready and effervescent wit that might remove some of the austerity from the N. H. L. councils, and create a bit of merriment and a laugh or two about the solemn halls. "

Incidentally:

Hastings's 18-years-old Sandy Gibb took the eye of Olympic sprinting Jesse Owens when the speedy American athlete visited the pep pill a pair at training Negro baseball clubs, Sandy ran against Owens in a few exhibition matches, and the coach calls him a "potential champion," with no reservations . . . Memorial Cup, League Princess of the western race tracks, will be retired from the turf this fall. She has been racing, and winning, for 10 years and has just about done her duty to her owner . . . Football planning is getting underway in Winnipeg. Bert Warwick, manager coach of the R. C. A. F. Bombers when they won the Western Canada Senior Football title last fall, has been appointed football coach at St. Paul's College. He succeeds Chet McCance, presently of the R. C. A. F.

TWO-MAN STAFF, DETROIT TIGERS READY FOR SERIES

Team Relying on Dick Wakefield Now Hitting .303 and Leading Club

CARDS BEAT CUBS

By JACK BAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Detroit's two-man pitching staff prepared to make its bold challenge for an American League pennant today as St. Louis Browns dropped into the city for a three game, a single game set showing signs of wear and tear after a terrific campaign.

If the Brownies' are going to "blow," the crystal ball gazers have predicted a series for the time for it although Luke Sewell's leaders have won 11 games in their last 12 early-season meetings.

Putting their faith in the Brownies big series edge was the fact the teams met seven times in April and hadn't been on speaking terms since 26. Since then the Tigers were strengthened by the return of Dick Wakefield who is hitting .303 to lead the club.

Hal Newhouser still was sitting pretty with a 4 1/2-game lead and could dispose of Detroit's hopes by an even split. New York and Boston needed clean sweeps to do any extensive damage.

Chicago's Cubs gave St. Louis a clean sweep yesterday, winning the 12th straight time last night in the Cubs' Wrigley Field ballpark, 4-2. Philadelphia at Boston day game was rained out and no other clubs were scheduled.

Teddy Wilks, beaten only by the Cubs, the first time, lifted his mark to 10 and notched his 13th triumph by beating the Cubs, 5-1. He allowed three hits in topping Claude Passeau.

New York Aug. 25 —(AP)— Bill Terry's Giants, idle on September 7 hurricanes, has figured out four National League records that will stand Cardinals can break if they win the pennant in a gale bucked by just two breezes . . . Billy Southworth's boys are shooting for the 116-victory record set by the 1906 Cubs, the 27½ game margin that the Pirates of 1902 held over the second place Dodgers and they'd like to clinch the flag on the earliest date of any National League season, the September 16 record of the 1931 Cards . . . But those are nothing compared to the one record the Browns are shooting at—their first American League pennant.

Early Underground.

Since he has been studying up on Kentucky football history, coach Ab Kirwan is getting quite casually at the practice field . . . Newspaper stories revealed that the start of the 1902 Kentucky team "caught his foot in a mole hole during practice and had to discontinue football."

Los Angeles papers are blasting George (Wetwash) Marshall because the Redskins are getting a fat guarantee out of tonight's charity game with the March Field grid forces.

Hear, Hear!

Judging from Marquette's football ticket brochure, coach Harry Stuhldreher of Wisconsin listened in on the Hilltoppers' plans . . . The folder pictures a fullback on coach Tom Stidham and two of his players, and quite noticeable on one of the Stidham shoulders is a corner of a photo that hangs in Stidham's office.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON: NO. 404

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Early in my bridge experience, I learned a lesson. To Mrs. Tyro I said: "What kind of a person are you that you can't play bridge?" and she replied: "What kind of a person are you that you can't quit?"

She had me there. Ever since, I have been tolerant of all who did not play good bridge. If I lost pennies, I was only with experts, who should know better.

However, any palooka who wants to can easily learn to play no-trump bridge. That is the probable game of bridge. The first step is to know how to count no-trump tricks. Even a moron can do that.

Each ace or king or queen is known as a high card. Each high card is counted as one no-trump trick. So, by counting up your high cards at one glance, you know how many no-trump tricks you have.

This is supposed to be the beginning or lesson about opening bids of two no-trump. But there is no better place to start than at the beginning. And the counting of no-trump tricks, high cards.

An opening bid of one no-trump promises five high cards. Two no-trump promises five high cards. If you have two hands, both partner's no-trump bids depend on those five high cards. If he has four, he says one.

If one has six high cards and partner has three, they also have nine. If one has seven and the other two high cards, they have nine. And if one has eight and the other one, they have nine high cards.

Count yourself in on this pair of partnership hands.

South has eight high cards; three aces, two kings, three queens. North has one high card; the king. If they can tell each other, they will find nine high cards in their pair; enough for three no-trump.

South opens with a bid of two no-trump; a signal that partner has eight high cards. North's single high card suddenly becomes important.

Even a cumbersome player can see that.

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER 3

I saw Pam speak briefly to Peter who had come up with a dignified, unapproachable manner and then slowly bored her turning an intellectual touch to a low IQ group. Then I saw her look up at the ceiling and she laughed tightly at something Madeleine said and I told myself that Pam was having a big debut and almost stopped. That's all that Pam wanted, the master with her mothering whom she'd had to do everything to cue the whole affair.

Pamela's acute, supercilious triumph was spread on me finally. I was sitting in a corner of the room, nursing the martini Reginald had pressed, sipping it cautiously. Reginald had his hand with both Pam's and I knew that if I publicked off my whole cocktail, I'd be accusing myself of a corner spoiling for a fight.

"And how's everything going with you, Letty, dear?" Pamela asked, smiling over them. There was something wrong with that smile. As if it was painted on and had been there for years.

"I'm in the pink," I said, "and you're glad you didn't cancel Sandra's debut, aren't you, Pamela?"

"Yes," she replied, but she certainly didn't sound convincing. I wanted to point out that Sandra's being had practically swell, it was one of the best debuts of the season, and that she should relax. "I guess Sandra's out at the country club now, exaggerating a bit."

I went on Sandra was giving a dinner at the club in honor of her debutante who had assisted her. "Lord knows everyone in town turned out for her luncheon. I'll be see.

Pamela said nothing, but I felt I had to make conversation. I remembered then that I hadn't seen Lake Crosley all afternoon. Lake should have been around. Lake was always Pam's shadow and had been since they were engaged. "Where's Lake today?" I asked, trying to act casually right down his alley."

"Lake telephoned me at noon. Lately, Reid is constant with Sandra's debut. Some business connection, Pamela told me. "But forever," Pamela's hell be along presently."

And I knew the faint flash that stained Pamela's pale cheeks that just speaking Lake's name created her. I couldn't blame Pam much. Lake had everything Sandra. Good looks, personality. He'd made a pile of money with his brokerage business there in Philadelphia and had moved into a world of graceful attitudes and handsome surroundings — and it hadn't gone to his head. It could have done so easily, since he had come up from nothing — socially and financially. Now, he'd come to marry Pamela Keith, one of the richest women in Washington, and it wouldn't change him. Lake had something on the ball all right.

Finally it was eight o'clock and Reginald announced that dinner was served. We all went into the big dining room. I was on Katie Pines' arm and Pamela was on Marvin Barney's. I don't know why I happened to glance at her face — I was so busy trying to prove to Pines that I wasn't a moron, as he seemed to think, and trying to accept himself, of course. But I did glance at Pamela and the dinner as she looked earlier in the afternoon: frightened. Horribly, hideously frightened!

I was conscious then that Lake Cramer had not yet arrived and I wondered if that had anything to do with Pamela's return of fear. Did Pamela think Lake Cramer for protection from someone — from something?

That was the darndest dinner. I ever sat through. I'm not the kind to be horrors that were to follow was lightly there at the dinner table, and I missed it completely. From soup to nuts, the peculiar silences which interrupted her talk were so thick you could have carved a frieze in them. I did my best to help that dinner just wouldn't bounce! And — still, I had a feeling that terror hung over the table. Nebulous. Invisible, yet present. A shadow like a giant potato at the dinner dragged on and on.

Pamela made it over the same way too. Sitting at the foot of the table, looking like a queen, but she looked like a ghost of herself... her eyes like black hollows in her colorless face.

Snap out of this, Letty, I told myself—and I tried to strike up a lively conversation with Dr. Wayne Courtney at the head of the table on my left. But my words seemed to annoy rather than please him, and I finally gave it up and sank back into boredom. Then I overheard Pamela tell the butler that Pamela was retiring and I came partly to life.

If Pamela got over whatever was worrying her, she could snap this dinner out of its slump. But when Pamela returned to her place at the table, her dark eyes were more troubled and I heard her tell Earle Pines that Lake Cramer couldn't come to Washington after all. At the mention of Lake Cramer's name, I saw Gladys Newcomb, directly across the table from me, perk up her ears in intense concentration. Bitching on Gladys' side of the table were Marvin Barney and the Countess. Like a tennis gallery at a championship match, they all turned their heads simultaneously and looked at Pamela.

"Lake Cramer on view? I thought— and then I remembered that somebody said he'd been ill, maybe a touch of the grippe. Newcomb was all broken up over Lake Cramer's illness and had to Pamela, I remember. I thought: how nice of Lake to be so attentive as a nightmare too were the hard, grasping arms of Keith. I tried to twist my wrist so that no breath was left in my body. Only one thing was perfectly clear to me. I hadn't put into the words of a man's neck, and those arms threw me headlong into the grass.

I was finally I climbed dazedly to my feet, the figure was gone. I ran back to the house. Pamela was in her room, my body scrawl with terror. Pamela was in her room, changing her clothes and climb into bed. I'll be back in a few minutes.

"Hot toddy, yes," said I. "Best no. I've a study to do."

Going to the debut story and sent it to the paper by messenger. And Mother had a couple of cheering fits when I said I was going back to Pamela's story. Dad got to by the scruff of the neck and the bell, he tried to frog-walk me to bed.

"Lay off, parents," I pleaded. "I've got to go back. I want to make it before Pamela barges off to Philadelphia. Lake Cramer's sick and she's going up to hover over him. Anyway, I left my evening bag over there. Politics aside, I'm it, not to mention my keys, my driver's license, lipstick, compact and what have-you."

I must have argued ten minutes. I didn't really want to go back to the party for the party's sake—it was definitely over. I wanted to see Pamela and reassure myself at this point anyway. But I did want to talk to Pamela. Pamela was frightened. About Peter Gibson. Tremendously afraid. And I couldn't sleep a lot better tonight, I knew, if Pamela told me Peter had no wife and that we were wrong about Peter.

"Well, all right." Mother finally agreed. "But take a taxi. There are a million places in back of this garage, and if the murderer of Mrs. Keith's estate, where you could be murdered and no one would know for days and days, until someone stumbled over your body."

"Cheerful thought," I said. "But no one would want to murder me."

I added that blithely, gayly, ignorant that someone very shortly would try to — and would almost succeed.

Then Mother remarked, "I read once of a man who murdered every red headed girl he met."

"And wasn't he a dope to murder 'em!" I laughed. "Well... maybe they were freckled!"

Little Reginald looked up.

"That's my name, all right," said he. "For the time being, anyway."

I was thinking: Letitia Gibson. Mrs. Peter Gibson. Letitia Randolph Gibson. I took a moment to enchanted combinations over my tongue as I slipped out of my ruined black net, climbed into a romantic negligee and a fur coat and threw a cape around me. I took the same route I had taken earlier in the evening, walking briskly along cheerfully in the moonlight, thinking how much about Pamela than about that horrible feeling of tragedy that had clung to Pam's dinner party earlier.

The Charlton-Arms, where I live with my parents, stands on one of the highest hills in the city and, passing a moment beside the tennis courts I could see the tall spire of the Washington Monument far, among the clouds, the brilliantly illuminated white dome of the Capitol. Below me the city was quiet, the night a glittering belt of gold and I thought for a moment about the Nazi fliers who might come over Washington soon with their silver and bombs and filthy destruction. I walked on more slowly...

I felt at once I was standing perfectly still in that little opening in the boxwood hedge, the palm of one hand over my mouth to stifle the screams that were rising up in my throat.

Even in the wan light of the moon I knew it was Pamela Keith—that small, crumpled figure lying there with both knees, jewelled arms flung backwards over her head; her legs turned under her limply.

But it was Pam's face that broke the tight constriction of my throat that sent those wild, mad screams ripping through the night air. Her face blotched with blood... Those wide, dark eyes staring, staring, staring... I knew she was dead. And I knew she'd been—murdered!

I don't know exactly what happened next. Only that I went on screaming, and screaming and screaming. Finally I was no longer alone with that grim, mutilated figure. People were talking excitedly all around me, their voices striking into my consciousness like something splintering outrageously inside my head. In a brief and brilliantly horrible hazed spasm, I realized my screams had turned to hysterical laughter. I felt a hand cut sharply across my cheek and the next moment one of my laughter passed into sobs.

"My dear!" my dear! A voice was saying quietly. "There, there, you poor baby!"

It was the familiarity of that voice which affected me. My hysterical screams ceased. I opened the lovely peace of exhaustion. I clung to Peter Gibson weakly, my head against his tweed coat. Just grateful that he was there. No surprise then. It never occurred to me that there was anything odd about my clutching to and suddenly on the scene of a murder! Not then. Not until later... So I buried my head and sobbed and became conscious of what was going on around me.

Over Peter's shoulder I saw Marshall Keith across the living room, quite close together, looking down at the small, tragic figure in the white satin gown. Keith's hands were clasping and unclasping nervously in front of her and Marvin's thick lower lip was caught between his square white teeth. Over on Pamela Castigena and Gladys Newcomb both looked dazed and there was Reginald, his hand protectively on one knee, his fingers on Pam's wrist.

"She's—dead," Dr. Courtney pronounced quietly.

The Countess said, "do we have to call the police? Do we?"

Each figure seemed to materialize suddenly out of a shadow. He was perfectly calm. "Yes, the police will have to know," he replied. "I'll notify them now."

Out of the talk of my eyes I watched Earle's short, barrel-body start striding across the lawn in a heavy, thrashing course. He paused once, looking down at Pamela. Little.

Then he seemed to straighten and, with a bold swagger, went on. It occurred to me that at Earle Pines' command at the scene of this hideous crime, he wasn't quite calm. He was ... busy.

Reginald, the butler, stiff white shirt glistening in the moonlight, was standing rigid, impenetrable, his black fingers across the corpus delicti. As I watched him, Reginald took the body of the crime" and stared at Gladys Newcomb, but as he'd stared at me, and at the debut that afternoon but a few hours before. And once again Gladys' face went to her throat as if she were having trouble getting her breath.

I think that was when I really got myself collected and began to look around. Peter Gibson was here. I pushed out of his arms and stood looking at his face. He looked down for an answer to my sudden suspicions.

I went on staring at Peter Gibson. ...Suddenly, amidst the soft night sounds of the garden, a sharp, harsh gasp drifting in among the trees like a grasshopper. Then the whole horrible affair seemed improbable, unreal. I felt that I'd awaken in a moment and find Mother scolding me for chucking myself full of home-cooked food and going to bed.

But it wasn't a nightmare; Pamela Keith had been murdered... And there was Peter Gibson saying gently, "Feeling better, Letty?" ... I nodded.

"Tell us what happened."

Says Oct. 1st. 1944 Date Which U.S. Army Sets 'Tentatively' For End of War With Nazis

Washington, Aug. 25 — (AP) — Chairman Clifton Woodrum (Dem-Va.) of the House of Representatives Post-war Military Policy Committee said today that the United States Army tentatively looks to Oct. 1, 1944, as the date for the end of the war against Germany.

Mr. Woodrum interposed the statement as a footnote to Major-General Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., Irish, inventory control officer for the navy, indicated the navy expects to be still fighting in the Pacific through 1946.

Mr. Woodrum did not amplify nor explain the source of his information.

Almost simultaneously, it was emphasized at the White House that President Roosevelt is having no part or predicting on the end of the war.

The President told a reporter that he had been very careful about such things and that he is not the only person authorized to say when he expected the European war to be over.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Aug. 25 (CP)—Losses were heard by all four index groups in the early session while trading turned dull and listless. Turnover for the first three hours was only 200,000 shares.

The gold list took a drop of 37 on weakness for Kerr-Addison, Pickle Crow, Lake Shore, Hollinger, Probisher, Teck Hughes, Bear, Consol., Central Patricia and others.

In the base metals Nickel, ventures, Hudson Bay, Labrador and Steep Rock took small losses.

In the industrials weakness was signified by the sags of Canadian utilities and foods. Abitibi Pfd. was off 1 1-4 to 45.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 25 —(AP)— Stocks generally declined after a slightly lower rush in today's market. Selling here and there, tendencies toward recovery were in evidence, however, for speculative and investment caution still were plentiful. Among those was the likelihood of industrial dislocations should the European conflict end speedily.

Sluggish dealings prevailed from the start and declines predominated near the fourth hour.

Occasional improvement was registered for Goodyear, Youngstown Sheet, International Nickel, Chrysler, Union Carbide, Santa Fe and Philip Morris. Canadian issues were quiet.

HOGS

Toronto, Aug 25 —(CP)— Prices remained unchanged at $15.75 here today, reported early today. Dressedweight: Grade A delivered, Loaded $17.50, Straight A to farmers $17.50, to truckers $17.65.

Labor Shortage For Harvesting Crop in West

Winnipeg, Aug. 25 —(CP)— A labor shortage for harvesting one of Western Canada's largest crops was reported today by farm labor officials, who estimated another 6,000 men will be needed. Wheat from 54.50 to 56 in Manitoba to as high as 56 in the other two provinces.

Cutting, combining and threshing has become general in southern sections of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. A few southeastern Saskatchewan districts reported work being held up due to lack of stookers.

In southern Manitoba cutting was 75 to 100 per cent completed, in Saskatchewan 25 per cent and one-third in the Alberta foothills. Wheat yields have averaged 25 bushels an acre in Manitoba, 20 in Saskatchewan and 13 to 25 in southern Alberta.

Canadians Close In on Rouen After Lightning Advance

German Pocket South Of Seine Nearly Liquidated

By WES GALLAGHER
(AP War Correspondent)

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Aug. 26—(AP)—Gen. Eisenhower's forces were driving northward and eastward on a 200-mile front toward Germany and Belgium today on the heels of fleeing Germans who apparently were trying to get out of France.

The Seine had been crossed at half a dozen places.

Allied planes relentlessly hammered the enemy, destroying 548 vehicles and 96 tanks in the past 24 hours.

Forces of the 1st Canadian Army in a whirlwind advance reached the Seine river today and were closing in on Rouen, where the Germans were making a frantic effort to get back across the river and were suffering terrible losses under a storm of bombs and shells, said a field dispatch.

British formations of the Canadian army have approached within Auderer, 13 miles east and slightly south of Rouen, the shipping port which was taken yesterday by airborne units operating as infantry. Field dispatches said the forces operating along the coast had advanced almost to the mouth of the Seine, which is across the base estuary from Le Havre.

American troops have seized Mileberg 20 miles due south of the Seine.

United Nations troop teams were rapidly liquidating the German pocket south of the Seine, now turned in a graveyard.

Approximately 300 miles behind the entire fighting front running northwest and southeast of Paris, an allied task force in southern France was launched on the besieged German garrison, at Brest on the tip of the Breton peninsula. This attack by U. S. troops was supported by hundreds of allied bombers and the guns of the famous British battleship Nelson.

The Allied drive north toward the Pas-de-Calais coast continued with a series of big flying bomb attacks on London and southern England, but it was not known whether the Germans already were moving their rocket weapons in the forms of range of the advancing armies. Allied pilots reported the Germans had fired only a few at least part of their forces from the Pas-de-Calais area.

Although American tanks in a 22-mile advance from Mantes-Gassicourt, 25 miles south of the German border at the Seine, there was almost a complete lull on the official information, at headquarters here on the Allied troops have pushed in the direction of Belgium and Germany.

May Slash at Somme-Marne Line.

If the Germans make another stand in France it is believed they probably will do so along the Somme-Aisne line and the Belgian fields of the First Great War.

In their present confused state it was unlikely that the Germans have an exact idea where the British, Canadian and American advanced columns have reached. One of the new destruction crashes of the Seine was made at Corbeil, 18 miles southeast of Paris.

The idea that total disintegration in France was self-evident in the report of air force commander Leigh-Mallory, who told a press correspondent, Thomas F. Hawkins, from Nancy, 80 miles northeast of main border of Strasbourg, of conditions inside France. He referred to reports in the heart of the defense being attacked by American forces.

Confusion, disorganization and panic ruled, the German soldiers sought to escape in civilian clothes, Hawkins said.

Occupy Brienon

Rome (AP) — American columns have occupied the Alpine town of Brienon, near the Italian frontier more than 100 miles north of the capture of Grenoble, Allied and other 7th Army forces have driven into Avignon, key communications center in the delta of the Rhone Valley, Allied headquarters announced today.

The triumphant advance of the Allied troops freed nearly all of Southern France east of the Rhone River and south of Avignon and Briancon. At the eastern coastal end of the invasion front Allied forces were driving within less than 20 miles from the Italian frontier, pushing forward on Mont de Authier, which fell yesterday.

Capture of Avignon, with a population of 60,000 placed the Allies firmly astride Rhone valley communications. Avignon are the last sizeable enemy escape route, and seaport of Marseilles, 50 miles to the west.

Allied troops have seized Mileberg 20 miles due south of the Seine.

144 NAZI PLANES DESTROYED DURING GREAT BATTLES

6,450 Sorties Flown By Allied Planes From British And French Bases Alone

78 PLANES LOST

London, Aug. 26. (CP)—Allied air forces flung a third record hammered Germany and battered German forces in France following day and night operations Friday that saw 6,450 sorties flown from British and French bases.

From Brest to the Baltic powerful fighter formations through numerous ed fighter opposition to give the Germans a thorough hammering on land and sea.

R.A.F. bomber command Friday carried out more than 1,000 heavyweights to smash the huge German war works at Hanover and hit the German rail centre of Darmstadt. R.C.A.F. Lancasters took part in the blow at Russelsheim. R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. Halifaxes and Lancasters simultaneously struck a series of blows at light and heavy gun emplacements along the sleged Brest, key Brittany port and R.A.F. Mosquitos smashed at Berlin.

The Allied forces lost 78 planes in their extensive operations yesterday and throughout the night, compared with 77 R.A.F. bombers of which were Canadian heavy bombers. 37 R.A.F. fighters lost seven fighters and the U.S. 9th Air Force lost 14 planes. Ground fire battled 146 German aircraft, destroying 52 in the air and 19 on the ground.

The British Air Ministry disclosed that before dark Friday night R.A.F. bombers and fighters had smashed "a large concrete structure believed to be connected with the enemy's threatened use of long-range rockets" at Watten in Pas De Calais. Germans Risk More Planes.

The amount of fighter opposition encountered was regarded by some as a possible sign the Germans now may be beaten in a few days they have decided to risk their remaining planes in a desperate defence of Germany itself.

Nazi fighters swarmed up from Belgium and the Pas De Calais, Caen, Soissons, Reims and San Quentin—all in the 100 mile area bombed yesterday 91 ME-19W and FW190s in the air. Nine of the 14 lost were 7th more German fighters were caught in the Beauvais area.

The 2nd tactical air force alone destroyed 96 tanks and 299 motor vehicles, 56 tanks, 39 barges, two motor vessels and two tugs.

4th Canadian Armored Div. Now in France

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent.

With the 1st Canadian Army In France, Aug. 26 (CP)—The Canadian 4th Canadian armored division has been fighting in France and is to be identified as the 1st Canadian army's large-scale attack down the Caen-Falaise highway and in the advance on Trun, southwest of Falaise, which joined the Normandy trap on Field Marshal Von Kluge's 7th German army.

Formations have given today to mention that this division was in the fighting in Normandy on the 18th and also it was permitted to disclose that the Canadian 2nd and 3rd infantry divisions were in action until that date.

Canada's Entire Overseas Military Establishment Fighting in France, Italy

By FRANK PLAGERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Aug. 26—(CP)—Canada's entire overseas military establishment, the 1st Canadian army headquarters organization, two corps headquarters, seven divisions and three army tank brigades now are in action against the enemy in Italy and France.

The overseas military organization grew out of the 1st division which was organized on the outbreak of war and went overseas in December, 1939.

At the 1st Canadian Army under Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar is pushing forward towards the battlegrounds of the First Great War, Canadians English and died the actual Canadian representation on the soil of France in that conflict was more than in the last war but vastly greater in support by reason of its armor and weapons.

In the last year the old Canadian corps grew from one division to four and the four fought through the most dramatic stage of the war in 1918. This time there are three Canadian divisions in France and two in Italy, along with the 1st army tank brigade in Italy and the second, at a point yet undisclosed, but probably in France.

In Italy the 1st corps, commanded by Lt.-Gen. Christopher Vokes of Ottawa, which fights with the British 8th Army contains the 1st and 5th armor and the 11th armored division. In France the 1st Canadian Army corps, under Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds of Kingston, Ont., which in turn is made up of the 2nd, 3rd and 4th Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar drives Canadian Army ex Polish, Belgian, Dutch and perhaps French Canadians.

In France for the first time in history Canada has an army in the field with its own army, a particular kind or organization in action. The Canadian army is the army meaning the entire military establishment, including, in the sense of a military formation, means one or more corps with necessary divisional, corps, lines of communication and supporting formations, operating under a single command.

The 1st division went overseas December, 1939; the 2nd, July, 1940; the 3rd, August, 1940; the 4th Sept., 1942 and the 5th November, 1943. All started out as an infantry division but was changed over to an armored division and so, while organized earlier than the 5th was later in getting overseas.

Spectacular thrusts by Allied forces in France are battering the Nazis in all sectors and gaining ground so rapidly that news breaks on new victories are being received one on top of the other. Primary purpose of many of the drives appears to be a co-ordinated plan to cut the German army to bits. An armored unit that flanked Paris on the north (1) is reported heading toward the coast. Driving for the German border is another force (2), under Gen. George Patton, that flanked Paris on the south. Spearhead pushing up from the south of France (3) has captured Grenoble. An armored column is reported headed southeast (4) from Nantes. Reported pushing up from the south with units which are said to have effected a landing in the Bordeaux area (5) according to D.N.B., the German news agency.

German Forces in Italy Expected To Withdraw To the Austrian Alps

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 26 (CP. Cable)—A general withdrawal of German forces in Italy to the Austrian Alps is a likely development as a result of the giant pincers movement now threatening to trap many of the harassed Germans fighting their way back to the Gothic line.

The immediate danger to German forces, estimated at 25 miles distance, is not great but if Field Marshal Kesselring or his superiors have not seen the writing on the wall it is only because they are as blind or as foolish as the German commanders who tried to stand at Stalingrad and in the Normandy pocket.

In Southern France, American and French divisions have closed for an historic purpose on the escape door through the Maritime Alps. The Germans instead are reported to be moving into Northern Italy from France and from Germany as has called upon Italian patriots to block this movement.

Romania's defection from the German cause and the anticipated defection of Bulgaria from the war provide a setting for the right arm of a claw which has threatened Germany since unless he hastens back to the Italo-frontier and the Balkan passes leading into Central Europe.

GEN. DE GAULLE ADDRESSES CROWD WITHIN PARIS

All Resistance in Southern and Southwestern Areas Overcome

PROCLAMATION ISSUED

London, Aug. 26 (CP) — French broadcasts from Paris last night announced the liberation of the capital but supreme headquarters, in its daily communique today, failed to confirm the city's fall.

"More Allied armor and infantry are in Paris following entrance of the 2nd French armored Division Friday morning, and all resistance in the southern and southwestern outskirts has been overcome," the headquarters communique said.

The Paris broadcast last night announced the Canadian commander had signed an order of capitulation.

A Berlin broadcast this morning said resistance continued especially at the Place De L'Etoile and around the Arc De Triomphe."

The broadcast three days ago French Patriot forces declared they had freed, was proclaimed liberator of the city by De Gaulle himself.

Cheering Crowds

Back in the capital after four years of fighting from abroad, the president of the French Committee of National Liberation addressed the cheering crowds last night in front of the Prefecture in Paris. In his broadcast speech the shouting and singing of the crowd could be heard clearly.

ALSACE-LORRAINE FRENCH WARNED NOT TO HELP NAZIS

Gen. Eisenhower States They Are Now in Rear Area of Operations

DETAILS OUTLINED

New York, Aug. 26—(AP)— Gen. Eisenhower broadcast an order today to the French in Alsace-Lorraine bordering Germany telling them that already they are in the "rear area of military operations" and may soon be in the theatre of the battle of war.

The order from Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters which also was addressed to the people of Luxembourg said:

"The elimination of the German 7th Army as a fighting unity has decided the battle of France. The survivors of the Normandy battle, and a handful of German divisions north of the Seine can at best fight a delaying action while they get their retreat into Germany.

"The area in which you live are already today in the rear area of military operations. Very soon they may become a theatre of war.

Notice Outlined.

"In view of these facts I give you the following notice:

"1. The rear communications of the remnants of the German Army retreating into Germany will be menaced by bombing and devastation as that which preceded and accompanied the Allied campaign in Normandy. The people of Alsace,

GENERAL RETREAT OF GERMAN ARMY SEEN IN ROMANIA

Bucharest Reports Romanians Join The Allies in Increasing Numbers

BULGARIA WAITING

London, Aug. 26 (CP) — "Quarters of the German command" in Bucharest, "the Romanian capital, are engaged in fierce fighting against Romanian army formations the German radio announced today.

The German high command said repeated attacks "made by traitors" were repulsed and that "severe fighting" was engaged in a general retreat in Romanian while defending Romanian territory, according Soviet attacks.

Reports declared Romanian soldiers in increasing numbers were joining the onrushing Red Army in Moldavia. Under pressure from the front and rear Germany's whole position in Romania appeared headed toward disintegration.

Romanian troops throughout the country are giving in and whole groups are surrendering, declared Soviet broadcast. "Allied troops and our own soldiers from the front are headed toward Bucharest."

Meanwhile Bulgaria was said to be awaiting an early delivery of Allied terms to take them out of the war, Greek insurgents were reported fighting with German occupation troops in the north and tightened their grip on a shaking Hungary.

Hitler in Conference

All of these troubles faced Hitler as he was reported in conference at Berchtesgaden with his military and political advisers.

The Bulgarian radio broadcast an "appeal to the Bulgarian people saying Bulgaria would face defeat unless they rallied to the support of Hitler's camp," said BBC broadcast monitored by CBS).

The Romanian government announced the declaration of war on Germany in a dramatic broadcast that charged the Germans broke their promises to leave the country, the capitulating Romanians by bombing Bucharest and by refusing to turning guns on civilians.

German commanders who tried to stand at Stalingrad and in the Normandy pocket.

German commanders in Bucharest has been cordoned off by Romanian troops and police forces, said a Bucharest broadcast.

It added that "under these circumstances there can be no possibility of direct communication with the German army or with Berlin."

WORK ON SIEGFRIED LINE

London, Aug. 26 (AP)—More than 100,000 foreign laborers were reported in a radio message received here today to be working night and day under Nazi overseers in an effort to shore up the Siegfried line, Hitler's old west wall facing France, before the arrival of Allied forces.

Speed Through The Galati Gap Toward Bucharest

Romanians Best Germans In Battle Near Tirgunian

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(A.P. Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 26 (AP) — Romanian troops were reported turning on the Germans, killing and taking prisoners, as the Red Army sped through the Galati Gap today towards Bucharest at a pace which, if maintained, would carry Soviet spearheads to the Romanian capital by tomorrow night.

The charging Russian troops last night reported little more than 100 miles from Bucharest and beyond 75 from the Ploesti oil fields. Marshal Stalin's Red Army forces in the Galati Gap area have been killing and capturing Germans in increasing numbers, and the Romanians have been joining in the fighting against the Nazis, front reports said.

Line of 200 Villages.

Red Star said the fight occurred beyond Tirgunian where the enemy had gathered on a line of 200 villages.

The Germans and Romanians both had been fighting the Russians. They were both on the defensive, with the German division and a Romanian regiment.

The dispatch said the Romanians attacked their former comrades in arms after the German line had nearly melted in the advance. The dispatch said the Romanians were marching as they slashed into the Nazi ranks and that as a result the Germans lost "many soldiers."

In a continuation of the fighting-like drive through Romania that has cost the enemy nearly 50,000 killed, captured in two days, Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky's 2nd Ukraine army established a wrinkled across the Siret in the vicinity of Nanasi.

Russians Fast to Foe.

It appeared that the Galati Gap defence now guarding both the Romanian capital and the Ploesti oil fields was virtually lost to the enemy.

Fanning out, Malinovsky's troops reached the Bucharest railroad between by-passed Focsani and Buzau, a charge.

The annihilation continues of 12 Nazi divisions pounded to shreds of fallen Christian, provincial capital of Besarabia, by the Soviet whirlwind. German troops in dazed, small groups or fled in disorder. The Russians, meanwhile, by adding the minister of the Interior Xaxiu Hentic Militiae "expressed his admiration for the manner in which the raids were carried out.

Soviet bombing harbors and trains reaching stations were inspected, the broadcast said.

6,000 ON STRIKE

Detroit, Aug. 26 (AP)—A strike affecting 6,000 workers in four Ford-800 war workers halted production at the Ford Motor Company's Highland Park plant today. Approximately 2,800 machine operators refused to work because of gears for aircraft engines left their jobs yesterday when a piece line turned back 2,450 afternoon shift workers.

Flame Is Thrown 450 Feet Ahead By 41-ton 'Churchill Crocodile'

Washington, August 26 (AP)—The British authorities bought one secrecy wraps off the fire-breathing Churchill crocodile, powerful 41-ton armored flamethrower capable of hurling its lethal blaze 450 feet through the air, the army announced.

The potent British weapon was introduced to the Germans at the Normandy beaches. Since then it has been used with what the British say is tremendous services reported as "deadly effect" in burning a path for the British and Canadian forces through Hitler's strongpoints in Normandy.

The British supply council and army staff in Washington released the new weapon called it the most powerful flamethrower in the world.

Designed to burn out strongpoints of the Atlantic wall and save infantry lives, the "Crocodile" uses special low type of fuel. Its flames can be ricocheted off a nearby surface, in the manner of a billiard ball, to burn out pillboxes and trenches hundreds of feet away.

The flame gun is mounted in standard Churchill tank, with the fuel carried in an armored trailer behind. The flame equipment can be jettisoned in case of need and the tank can operate thereafter as an orthodox Churchill, with no cut in speed.

The announcement said British troops first encountered the weapon in a coastal battery out of action in the Dieppe raid in August, 1942, and the 2nd Division constituted the majority of the attacking force, who have been working on their development ever since.

Originally known as the "Crocodile" flame defence improvised on the Kent beaches in 1940, when invasion seemed imminent, have contributed, along with information from the Russian front, many suggestions.

One eminent British scientist, Dr. Frank Sturdy Stinnatt, hastened his death by his untiring efforts in the development of flame weapons, the British Information services reported. Many civilian and military workers suffered burns and injuries in the search for safe and efficient projectors to put in the hands of troops.

The new weapon, the benefit of it all shortly after D-Day when the Crocodiles, now built, rolled ashore on schedule.

Finnish Police Block All Roads Out of Helsinki

New York, Aug. 26—(AP)—Finnish police blocked all roads leading out of Helsinki at dawn yesterday and staged mass raids through the capital with the aim of rounding up the Finnish radio said today in a broadcast heard in London by way of explanation or the action.

The broadcast, recorded by Federal communications commission monitors, said "results have been very satisfactory and that "about 500 people were interrogated as their identity papers were not in order.

"Since the raid continued into the early morning hours yesterday, further details will be made known, later," the broadcast said, adding the minister of the Interior Kaarlo Hentic Militiae "expressed his admiration for the manner in which the raids were carried out.

Soviet bombing harbors and trains reaching stations were inspected, the broadcast said.

YOUNG GIRL GETS LETTER OF THANKS FROM ENGLISH MOTHER

Little Allie Rosie Boyce, Trenton, ten-year-old granddaughter of Mrs. E. R. Grimson, James Street, is glowing with justifiable pride these days. For she has just received a letter of appreciation from an English mother, one of the many victims of robot bombs, thanking her for a little quilt the child has made and with her own hands.

Mrs. Grimson is secretary of the Refugee Sewing Club and forwarded the quilt with other articles to the British war victims through the Red Shield Club.

The letter states: "Dear Bessie: I am writing to say thank you for the quilt. It is very nice and it was kind to think of our babies and spend all that time sewing a quilt. It is beautifully done and I shall treasure it always. Thank you once again, and God bless you".

Farmers Start To Fill Silos

As a result of continued dry and hot weather during the past several weeks, farmers in the Bay of Quinte district have begun to fill their silos beginning possibly at the earliest date on record, according to report.

Already beginning to dry up because of lack of moisture, corn on other than exceptionally low fields is now being cut by farmers and will be filling will be started by the end of the week. Silo filling is thus from three to four weeks earlier than last year when many farmers did not start during the last two weeks in September.

Threshings well on towards completion in the Bay of Quinte district, a drive through the country finds that practically all fields are now cleared of stooks. Yields are spotty with early sown grain giving best results. Owing to disappointing grain crops, farmers in the Belleville area in some instances are already contemplating the purchase of western grain to assist in wintering stock and fattening hogs.

Saturday Market

A typical early Autumn display of farm and garden produce greeted Saturday morning market shoppers, with generous quantities of practically every garden produce available for urban buyers.

While a number of new fruits made their market debut, prices generally were firm, with last week's levels holding in the majority of cases.

Small fruits held part of the market spotlight with Blue, and Burbank plums appearing for the first time at $1 the six-quart basket prices. Green gages demanded the same. A few wild plums sold at 50 cents the basket.

Tomatoes were firm at $1 the bushel with potatoes offered at $2 for the same quantity. Bunched vegetables were plentiful at Thursday prices. Watermelons priced at 15c/lb and cantaloupes at from three for 25c. Corn was fairly plentiful selling from 20 to 30 cents the dozen; Fresh lima beans were 20 cents a pint.

Clapps Favorite pears were offered at 90 cents the basket and fine quality Yellow Transparents sold at 50 cents the six-quart basket.

48,000 Cigarettes Sent by Veterans In One Shipment

From "the rock" at Gibraltar comes expressions of thanks and gratitude for Canadian cigarettes received by the 48,000 consigned from the Army and Navy Veterans, Unit 301, fag fund. "This is a great task to be after being in Sicily and North Africa but you have done it in record time", writes to us by the Army and Navy Veterans unit in Belleville and district. P.C. Thompson wrote in reply to Secretary James Lazenby recently. Similar praise was received from scores of other Belleville lads, who received the coolness of Canadian cigarettes to no end.

The total consignment of 48,000 more cigarettes to 160 Belleville and district boys this week is the aggregate number of cigarettes sent overseas by the Army and Navy Veterans since the fund was started by the hundred thousand mark.

Veterans in Belleville and district boys serving overseas to be sent 300 cigarettes each month. 300 cigarettes each through the Army and Navy Veterans were:

ODE
BED, DOUBLE-TIER, ONE

He lays are loose, it groans and shakes,
A most intimate touch it makes,
That bottom spring's a killer.
He cold steel lays my numbness bare,
I dance in misery, I groan in pain,
My bed, I love it not.
When nightmares scare the man up right,
Trying to sleep's a dismal flop,
I'm jerked from my rest,
Just cough or sneeze, that bed will shake,
Like palm trees in the Frisco 'quake,
My bed it is distant.
When the man above's on leave
Insomnia gets a short reprieve,
And I sleep overtime.
He returns, regaled with goof,
And on my bottom I groan,
It's good night! Farewell, sleep!
Boy dance up and down
Like the Devil
War
(Title Stolbuss is a ruddy hero)
Then farewell, sniny bunk!
A million fleggly-wiggly bed bugs
Will then be sold for junk.

Nice Gals', Gah.

It seems that the hearts of these gals of the Auxiliary Corps (Women's Force are bigger than the bosom they are packing for that gunner troop overseas. Not content with the good job they are doing for their adopted lads in Italy, they forwarded cigarettes to Jimmy "Snipe" Hutchinson and the gang at the 34th Anti Aircraft Battery now busily engaged in "chasing" them from French skies. It goes without saying that the boys will appreciate this big-hearted gesture on the part of the local gals—and what's no doubt be disappointed in the fact that no city organization has yet stepped in to take over the task of writing. Surely there must be some club or company who could send a few smokes or comforts to the boys in their spare time. Let's get busy!

In the meantime, Major Marion Harden and Lieut. M. F. Smith, and their gallant crew, have the colourful orchids for their generosity. They will be among the first to return. Remember, The boys don't forget those things, nor the people who do them.

Takes Over Control Royal Navy Fleet Arm Training Station

Ottawa, Aug. 26. (CP)—The R.C.A.F. has taken over control of the Royal Navy air arm training station at Collins Bay, near Kingston, Ont., it was announced today.

The station, however, continues to be devoted almost exclusively to the training of flying personnel for the Royal Navy, an official said. He added that some Canadians were among the Royal Navy trainees, but he thought the majority were from the United Kingdom.

Earlier this week a Canadian navy spokesman, said that no steps have yet been taken to train an all-Canadian fleet air arm. He was commenting on a report from Kingston that the Collins Bay Flying School was to be used for such a purpose.

He said that Canadians were training at the Fleetwood, Lancashire, Fla., and other Royal Navy fleet air arm schools. After completion of their courses they entered the Royal Navy and not the R.C.A.F.

He added it was possible some might join the latter in the future, but docks of the two R.N. flatops whose sea-crews are all-Canadian.

Announcement is made that the R.C.A.F. had taken over the Collins Bay station, and that the change appears to have no special significance.

"We supplied a good many of the instructors, and ground personnel so we are just going to run the show," explained for the Royal Navy", said an officer.

Capital Closeups

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Aug. 26. (CP)—Two weeks after the work of the public sanitary section of the parliament buildings has been given over to tourists, echoes and memories. Members of parliament and visitors to the galleries of centre block are most quiet in January.

In the offices of government departments, scattered about the national capital, Commissionaires and messengers are tackling up on accumulated week's work, working in vacuum they can.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King is back in the city to his home on Laurier House in the city to his private office in the Langevin Block, as the session ended but carried on after the session. Except for a brief visit to Quebec where he played with the Earl of Athlone and Princess Alice.

Most Cabinet Ministers carried on with their work in Ottawa but a number are off on brief vacations, visits to their constituents or business trips.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner is back from Lanesboro, Sask., and Finance Minister Ilsley is in Nova Scotia discussing the union between Halifax and Kentville. Fisheries Minister Mackinnon is in Vancouver but busy on official work at his office there.

Justice Minister St. Laurent took time out to attend a meeting of the Canadian Bar Association at Sherbrooke, Que., last week and then left for his home next week for the annual meeting of the Canadian Bar Association.

Labor Minister Mitchell is planning a vacation in Western Canada but Munitions Minister Howe is back at his office after a brief holiday, and Minister Power is on a short vacation but the other two Ministers from Quebec, Lapointe and the Army and Macdonald of the Navy, are at their desks.

Veterans Minister Ohleon is at his home city of Hamilton, and Defence Secretary McLarty, Postmaster-General Mulock, Pensions Minister Mackenzie and Trade Minister McKinnon are on vacation. Mr. McKinnon is on the west coast and Mr. Mackenzie plans to go there later. Resources Minister Crerar is out of town for a short time.

Transport Minister Michaud is in New Brunswick where a provincial election is on. He takes a big interest in it but not actively campaigning.

Supply Minister Lafleche is at his office with vague hopes of a vacation some time later. Works Minister Fournier, whose home is in Hull, is also in Ottawa.

Hull, is on the job at the office.

A Change

Some French people who have come through the Hun occupation and have tasted something of the joys of liberation are being moved by the Allies in jeeps and trailers to places of safety from the fields of operations.

They go gladly for they already know what an Allied victory means, they know they will soon be back, never to see the hated Huns again, for these are either destroyed or prisoners or driven eastward.

That is the Allied way of handling civilians. And what a difference it means to them to have Canadians shepherding them to safety!

The feelings of the people of France who are in the freed areas can be felt only by others. These people alone know what have been their hardships during the German years of terror, which has now turned to a nightmare for the Hitlerites.

New Nazi Restrictions

The enemy is determined to squeeze the last bit of strength and hope out of what he has.

Germany has for many years known the stern rule of Hitlerite control and now in what appear to be the closing scenes of the war Hitler through Goebels is demanding the fresh sacrifices of the Germans and calling on them to see the light of "the star in the gloomy clouds that are darkening the horizon." Totalitarianism has ruled Germany since long before the war for then Hitler was getting the start he planned to serve his purpose of beating the world. He is further marshalling the energies of Germany by putting off everything but what is for the totalitarian step to add to Germany's failing strength. A sixty-hour week has been ordered for enemy workers in public administration and industry and drastic reduction in schools and entertainment has come. The new austerity will release civilians, the German broadcast says, these to be taken into armament production or the Wehrmacht.

The new order closes the doors of music halls, cabarets, art exhibitions, professional schools and entertainment of every without a direct bearing on the war effort. The universities are to be further restricted.

In perfect Nazi form Goebbels threatens the lightest offences with punishment.

So desperate has become the plight of the enemy. The Germans started years before the war to draw in their belts and they are asked to accept more hardships. This is the proof of the desperate steps that they are to take and of the unlimited demands that the Nazis will make preferring to wreck humanity and the world as far as they can rather than yield.

Hitler's Dance

A little over four years ago Adolf Hitler, the former German corporal, stood with some of the Nazis in the Forest of Compiegne, France, made memorable by the armistice which ended the First World War. It was about ten months after he had launched his thrust against Poland and Hitler must have seemed to be on the eve of attaining control of the world. The very spot where Germany had surrendered in the last war was chosen by this showman for the armistice sought by France in 1940. It was on that day he in elation danced a few steps, gloating and smiling while the sycophant officers smiled on their master. It was no mere accident too that a German photographer was there and was able to take the picture of the Fuehrer in his poor imitation of a rhythmic measure so that it might be sent to Germany and broadcast to the world how far he had advanced in his mission towards domination of humanity.

But he counted his chickens before they were hatched. His dream will remain forever a dream. The channel he was near he never crossed. Time passed. German craft in harbors along the Nazi-held coast of the North Sea and the Channel were battered by the R.A.F. In September of 1940 Germany saw the futility of trying to dominate the air over Britain. Probably with a sense of relief and pleasure in dodging the task of dealing with Britain he turned to a fresh field for his operations, he thought he would do up Russia in a few months and then come back to deal with the stubborn resistance of Britain. In the spring he plunged into East Europe and then into the war with Russia. He moved in far but he accomplished nothing lasting. In due time he was thrust back with gigantic losses. His fate was sealed in the Middle East and in North Africa. His dream was beginning to dissolve into a haze and into the nightmare that was to come.

Today France which must have seemed only second to Britain as a prize he wanted to gain is being liberated and Hitler's armies are being pushed about by the Allies. Allied forces are again not far from Compiegne. Paris is free. Hitler is not in Compiegne to stage a dance for his own self-gratification and the entertainment of his friends. He is far in Germany and he faces the red dawn of colossal defeat and obliteration. He is far from Paris where he rose the remains of Napoleon, whose wars must have intrigued the mind of the Austrian corporal greatly. Four years ago at his greatest hour Hitler went to the tomb of the great Emperor in Paris and stood in meditation.

What was he thinking of? Doubtless of the day when all the world would be called upon to do him obeisance. What is he thinking of four years later, perhaps in his retreat in Berchtesgaden? He must realise there is no island of Elba, no St. Helena for him, for his hands are dyed too deeply in the blood of nations he has attacked and the United Nations have declared for punishment of the war guilty and for doers of atrocities.

It was the June following his musing at the tomb of Napoleon that he started into Russia on his mad offensive. It seems that the vision or spectre of the Emperor Napoleon was beckoning him on in his last fatal step. Napoleon got to Moscow. Hitler planned to outdo the Corsican. Moscow in flames and winter sent Napoleon reeling back. Hitler never reached Moscow. Hitler's orders of the Russians hurl back the desecrator of their fatherland. Though Hitler tried at Stalingrad and near the oil fields of the Caucasus to advance, he broke down and had to fall back before the Russians and the winter, and then began a train of calamities. He left behind him armies lying in far-flung graves and he has been forced back across Russia's wheatfields, through the Baltic States, into East Prussia and into the Balkans.

So with conquerors. Hitler's "jig" is nearly up.

Man-Power Peak

(The Times, London)

The western offensive involved for industry the transfer of as many as 1,250 workpeople from the work they had been doing to new work. To the workers, and to their employers too, the reason for the transfer was not disclosed. There was need for secrecy, and workpeople and firms making only individual parts did not know what the finished product was. They could not be given the responsibility of sharing in the secrecy of the enterprise. Some of their work still passes under a false name, as the original task did in the last war, and the whole service which receives the finished product from the assembly point knows its value. Now mobilization has reached the very peak, and manpower of every sort is a precious commodity to be used everywhere with the utmost economy and efficiency. The need for efficiency will not grow less. Even when the country begins to turn to civil production again there will be a scarcity of labor, because married women and elderly people will leave their employment by the thousand when the safety of the nation no longer binds them to the factory. Every unit of labor and every unit of production must still be set to the best use. The industrial achievement of the nation for war is the measure of its capacity for the greater tasks of peace.

Only the Great Vitality of Pilot Trapped 8 Days in Plane Saved Him

(By ERNIE PYLE)

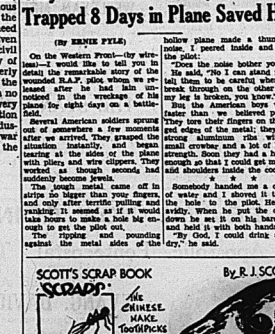
On the Western Front—(by wireless)—I would like to tell you in detail the heartbreaking story of a wounded R.A.F. pilot whom we released after he had lain unnoticed in the wreckage of his plane for eight days on a battlefield.

Several American soldiers sprang out of somewhere a few moments after we arrived. They grasped the situation instantly and began tearing at the sides of the plane with pliers and wire clippers. They worked with fierce speed, and suddenly became jewels.

The first metal came off in strips no bigger than your fingers, and only after terrific pulling and yanking. It seemed as if it would take hours to make a hole big enough to get the pilot out.

The ripping and pounding against the metal skin of the hollow plane made a thunderous noise. I peered inside and asked the pilot:

"Does the noise bother you?"



He said, "No I can stand it. But tell them to be careful when they hit my head, on the other side—my leg is broken, you know."

But the American boys worked faster than we believed possible. They tore their fingers on the jagged edges of the metal; they broke strong aluminum ribs with one small crowbar; and by sheer brute strength, those they had a hole big enough so that I could get my head and shoulders inside to look.

* * *

Somebody handed me a canteen of water and I shoved it through the hole to the pilot. He drank avidly. When he put it down I stuck down he set it on his bare chest and held it with both hands.

"By God, I could drink a river dry," he said.

CANNES CAPTURED BY AMERICANS; GRASSE SEIZED

Stiff Fighting Still Continues in Toulon, Sporadic in Marseille

20,000 PRISONERS

By NOLAND NORGAARD
(AP Staff Writer)

Rome, Aug. 26.—(AP)—American troops of the 7th Army have captured Cannes on the Riviera on the French Riviera and the nearby Island town of Grasse, extending the hold on Southern France eastward yesterday toward the Italian frontier, Allied Headquarters announced.

Another U. S. column pushing westward from Salon, northwest of Marseille, was reported within eight miles of Arles and the lower Rhone river valley, in the drive on that vital natural highway for a junction with Allied armies in northern France.

Lt.-Gen. Alexander M. Patch's headquarters said nothing of gains by American troops entering the city of Grenoble. Geneva dispatches said the troops had reached the mountain resort 70 airline miles north of Grenoble.

The Cannes drive captured Grenoble after a spectacular advance measured from Draguignan was a thirty column, including some armor operating in advance of the main body of the American troops which subsequently has firmly established the area with the occupation of the French Forces of the Interior," was the only official announcement of the fall of the capital of that gaitily striking force.

Headquarters announced that Marseille and Toulon—the two big ports needed to major supply base for the Allied forces—

There were sporadic street battles in Marseille, but in the Toulon area district, an Allied official said.

"Organized resistance has given a ring of steel tighter around the desperate Germans entrenched in the city and the fortified coastal area. The French troops have driven to the outskirts within the city. The enemy's stiffest resistance was around the naval arsenal and docks, which are on two peninsulas which almost landlock the harbor to the southwest and southeast.

"Thousands of prisoners already have passed through the lines established on the beachheads, and the stream of captives is constantly back from the rapidly expanding front.

Somebody outside said not to let him drink any more right now. The pilot said, "Would you put some more on my head?"

I soaked my dirty handkerchief and put it on his forehead with it. His hair was sun bruned in color and very fine, and although it was reddish and scraggly and he had a three-day beard, his face was young and thin, and yet you could tell by his tremendous chest that he was a big man physically.

His eyes were not glassy, but I was fascinated by their clearness. They didn't protrude; it was just that they were so big. When he turned them toward me, I was as though he was slowly turning two huge blue marbles.

He had complete command of his thoughts. He told me frankly that he would expect of a man trapped for eight days without food or water, that he would be crazy. But he was just being himself.

His face was dirty from much sweating, but the skin of his body was white and clean. There was a small scar on his forehead and there were some light bruises on his arms.

Inside the plane, the stench was overpowering. I could only guess that there must be another man in the plane who had been dead for days, but I didn't see him.

"Is there someone else in the plane?"

And he answered, "No, this is a single-seater, old boy."

What I had smelled was the pilot himself. We couldn't see the lower half or the left part of his body, and it must be gangrenous and in a terrible state.

"I can move my right leg," he said, "it's all right, in fact. I've had it out from time to several times, and moved it around for exercise. But the left one, I can't move at all."

I asked, "Where did you get the cigarette you were smoking when we got here?"

He said, "You; chap gave it to me, the boy who carried me. He lighted it for me and stuck it between my lips, and went searching for the rest of you."

* * *

I was wondering if it wasn't dangerous for him to be smoking inside the confined space. He mentioned something about his being lucky that the plane hadn't caught fire when he crashed. And he said:

"You tell your self-starter that you had to start it a little way north of us!"

There were several small words but I said, "Yes."

"Well," he said, "that first night they set fire to that woods I could tell it by the glow in the cockpit. And then the plane was soaked with hundred-octane gasoline. I thought the fire would spread right across the field. But it didn't."

Actually what he had thought was the woods afire was the little town of La Haye-du-Puits, which had been set afire by shelling. I didn't bother to tell him. He was alive, and after all what could the technicalities matter?

BRING YOUR OWN PIPE BUT WE SUPPLY THE FUEL.

In 1941 we moved from ——— to ———, and I think the thing we missed more than anything else was the daily ———.

Well, only a month ago we were delighted to find one of our friend holding forth in the leading paper here—a fellow in our office happened to clip something "For Your Brady" said, and I stopped him to ask where he had read it, and so ——

First let me tell you, your article How to Make Coffee and Win Friends" taught us how to enjoy a real brew for the first time. Whenever friends compliment me on my coffee on her excellent coffee she explains that it is made as directed by Dr. Brady.

Now I need never enough to meet you, perhaps on the bowling green, or to share a pipe with you on the D.L.W.

If you call, not on business, bring your pipe, if you have one your wife allows you to keep in the house, but never mind the tobacco. We have a tobacconist here of many kinds, to suit various tastes but all fill in the pipe.

Readers who still think coffee is a decoction of devil's brew are sensitive to their benefit by reading the chapter on How to Make Coffee and Win Friends in the red book What to Eat and Why—for only twenty-five cents and stamped envelope bearing your address.

Aside from the important question of the proper brewing of coffee, a lot of people deny themselves the enjoyment of this beneficent beverage because of some vague apprehension concerning the effects of coffee. They take seriously the prohibitionist statement that coffee makes one "nervous," or the notion that it prevents normal sleep, or the notion that it causes high blood pressure.

It is true that coffee taken within a few hours of bedtime will make some persons wakeful, but it is not true that coffee taken at breakfast time or even at evening dinner will prevent sound sleep four or more hours later. The effect of the caffeine in coffee, on the cerebral cenlipped shell,

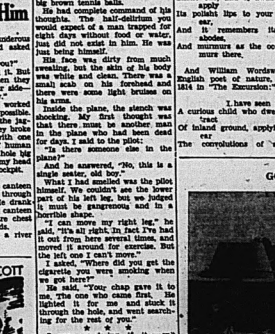
Dwells in silence hushed, his very soul
Listening intensely; and his countenance
Brightened with joy, for from within were heard
Murmurings, whereby the monitor expressed
Mysterious union with his native sea.



Many people believe that the rumbling sound is the sea itself or the actual echo of the waves of the ocean.

This is not, of course, is not the case.

The noise is merely a composite of the noises of a great number of ordinary sounds occurring in the vicinity of the shell.

Because of the peculiar shape of the shell and the smoothness of its interior these sounds become produces an echo, and numerous sounds are blended into the rumble or roar. The effect is heightened by the fact that the shell magnifies the noises in the head as well as the sounds produced in the vicinity.

SEA SHELLS

When certain sea shells are held to the ear the ocean resounds with the distant roar or rumble of the sea can be heard.

More than one poet has referred to this subject.

Tennyson composed in 1798 on the coast of Wales, Walter Savage Landor wrote:

But I have sinous shells of pearly hue
Shake one, and it awakens; then its polish lips to your attentive ear,
And it remembers its August abodes,
Murmurs as the ocean murmure there.

And William Wordsworth in the English poet of nature, wrote in 1814 in "The Excursion:"

I have seen
A curious child who dwelt upon a beach
Of inland ground, applying to his ear
The convolutions of a smooth-

Saco Marines Beat Ordnance In Thrilling Ten-inning Game To Even O.A.S.A. Playdowns

Teddy Henn Proves Hero in Tenth by Spearing Line Drive for Double Play

SCORE IS 4-3

SACO "shorties" evened their Intermediate "A" play-off series with the Ordnance Corporals on Friday night beating the "Soldier" side 4 to 3 in a thrilling ten-inning game. It was the veteran Teddy Henn who rose to duty twice to leap high into the air to spear Joe Maiola's line drive for a double play in the top half of the tenth to halt a Kingston rally, aiding on the great sensational-ism Henn then stepped to the plate with two aboard in the last half of the tenth and drove in Jimmie Barriage with the winning run. The third and deciding game will be played at the Pats' Grounds in Belleville next Tuesday night.

It was one of those typical Belleville-Kingston softball games filled with thrills and verbal repartee between players and umpires, but the feature of the game for the home fans was the belated rally of the Marines to knot the count in the seventh and drive in Jimmie Barriage with the winning run. The total of 81 hits were rung up by both squads, the game proved somewhat of a pitchers' battle with Bill Anderson, on the SACO, mound, better than Ormsbee pitching, Rudy Ruthowski, the Soldiers' starting southpaw being knocked from the hilltop with a barrage of base knocks in the seventh, Jack Anderson going in to relieve. The Marines in the first of a best-in-three series at Kingston finishing the game and being charged with the loss.

Fanning His Homer

The Soldiers from Kingston started off auspiciously when Gord Fanning, their short stop, caught one of Anderson's slants for a hard-hit drive which blew left centre in the first inning. The Marines made no runs in the second and after Sh. Pierce singled, went in second on Gord's ball and scored on Storin's one-base blow. Storin later tallied on Ruthowski's hit to end at the end of sundry Kingston scoring in a ten inning affray. Actually the Soldiers only got one batter as far as first base from the second to the eighth inning, only they jammed the sacks in the sec.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 465

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The time has come for me to have a talk with you about some of the facts of bridge. If I sound too serious, about it, I hope you will realize that I am doing it for your own good.

The bids used in bridge are code words. A bidding system is a set of related code bids. To be best, a system must use the fewest words to say the most quickest. That's Horse Sense.

Each bid would like to express a natural meaning. But there are too many different types of hands to show. And too few natural meanings bids are available for showing enough of them.

So, some bids are set aside for use as special signals. These are employed to reveal a gob of hot information fast. To say as much, it would take too many natural-meaning bids.

Which are the bids reserved as special signals? Only the bids that are seldom if ever needed for natural meanings. And that, you must agree, makes good sense.

Among natural-meaning bids are openings of one, which show not less than five tricks. If it is one in a suit, it shows a biddable suit. If one no-trump, it denies a biddable suit.

That takes care of all the opening bids of one. So, there are no opening one bids that can be used as special signals. And that brings us to opening bids of two.

An opening of two in a suit is the signal for showing a hand that can make a game by itself. Therefore, no other bid should be wasted for use as a signal to show a game hand.

What other opening of two is there? An opening of two no-trump. For what kind of a hand would an opening bid of two no-trump be most useful? A hand like this.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Are These Our Parents"

A parent system designed to fit the problem of juvenile delinquency is presented in "Are These Our Parents", the sensational Monogram drama which comes to the Capitol theatre next. The picture places the blame for much of the present wave of juvenile waywardness squarely at the door of the older generation.

Helen Vinson is starred in this dramatic film, heading a cast which includes Lyn Talbot, Ivan Lebedeff, Noel Neill, Richard Byron, Thurston Dunn, Addison Richards and Anthony Warde.

The story follows the adventures, amorous and otherwise, of a young girl who rebels at the cold, unsympathetic attitude of her father, while she has for years been sent by a self-centered mother too wrapped up in her own pleasure to give any personal attention to her daughter. The girl falls in with a boy who is similarly situated through his father's neglect of business and association with a flashy woman, and her growing waywardness culminates in a dangerous situation. Eventually the youthful pair are suspected of a murder, and it is when they come to the attention of the juvenile authorities that the picture reaches a dramatic climax.

AT THE BELLE

"Two Girls And a Sailor"

Movie fans are in for a real musical treat at the Belle theatre, when Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer's "Two Girls And a Sailor" opens its engagement today.

Here is a picture that has everything! It's an outstanding blend of music, comedy and romance that will keep you entertained every minute of the picture's running time.

M-G-M has rounded up a stellar cast, including Van Johnson, June Allyson, Gloria de Haven, Jimmy Durante, Jose Iturbi, Gracie Allen, Lena Horne, and Harry James and Xavier Cugat and their bands — to name just a few of the lumberjacks and has added the kind of music that's always high up on everyone's personal hit parade. Spiced with just the right amount of romance and comedy, the whole adds up to the best musical film of this or any other season.

June and Gloria play a pair of headline night-club entertainers born and brought up in the theatre. During their engagement at a New York spot, Gloria helps to receive orchids every day from a mysterious admirer. Van, who is jealous of her sister's happiness, tries vainly to discover their identity. Another friend is a wealthy and handsome young sailor (played by Peter Lind Hayes) who has been enjoying himself at their canteen all along.

Jose Iturbi, Jimmy Durante, Van and Gloria take a curious turn before Van realizes that Gloria has real love-eyes for him, and Gloria is happy too when she realizes her heart always has belonged to a sailor boy.

But that isn't all, for there are songs by Jimmy Durante, Gracie Allen, Ramirez and Virginia O'Brien, a dance by Ben Rice, piano playing by Iturbi and his sister, Amparo Navarro, and the renowned One Concerto Crescendo by Gracie Allen.

UNIVERSAL GIRLS EVEN SERIES WITH THE BOMBERETTES

Score Seven Runs in the First Frame and Never Headed

FINAL IS 14-3

Racking up seven runs in the first inning, Jack Alexander's Universal girls evened their play-off series with the Mountain View "Bomberettes" in the Belleville Ladies' Softball League with a lop-sided 14 to 3 win at the Armouries lawn Friday night. The third and deciding game of the series will be played on the same diamond on Monday night.

Consistent hitting on the part of the Universals, coupled with the five-hit pitching of Miss Douglas on the winners' hilltop accounted for the one-sided victory. Miss Douglas fired five-hit ball and was never in difficulty after her teammates gave her seven runs to work on in the initial frame. Vickie Hillier was on the mound for the "Bomberettes," but her slants were no mystery to the slugging Universals as Helen Tuttle and D. Reeves each touched her for home runs and doubles for good measure. Not a single Mountain View batter counted over one safe blow off Miss Douglas' deliveries.

The Universals scored runs in every inning except the fourth, getting seven in the first, two in the second, one in the third, three in the fifth and one in the sixth. After getting one in the first the Bombertes were kept off the scoring sheet until they scored two in the seventh.

The Line-ups.

Mountain View — Webster ss, Strachan 2b, Willetts 3b, Mills lb, Rogers c, Holmes cf, Grant lf, Edwards rf, and Hillier p.

Universals — Cornsel lb, Parker 2b, Allison 2b, Tuttle ss, Reeves lf, Rumen rf, Carswell cf, Douglas p and Zebedee c.

Umpires: Denlow and Ehlier.

LEAF'S WIN AGAIN

The largest crowd in Baltimore's history, 20,842 fans, saw the Orioles regain their perch at the top of the International League heap, by sweeping a doubleheader from the Newark Bears Friday night, 4-3 and 10-3.

The double win enabled the Orioles to take a half-game lead over the Bears with the final in the crucial four game series to be played today.

Sam Lowry won his 12th. game in the opener, despite a four-hit performance by Johnny Maldovan of the Bears. Stan Benjamin and Bob Lakshas with homers for the Birds. Trailing by one run in the nightcap, the Orioles exploded for eight runs in the sixth, featured by Frank Skaff's 13th. home run with two on.

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER 6

I did, trying to remember every detail, but....I decided not to mention my brief encounter with the Unknown just before ten o'clock.

Suddenly Gladys Newcomb cried: "Why, Letty, dear, you've changed your dress. Is it your?"

Gladys seemed quite in control of herself now and I knew what was going through that agile brain of hers. Anger boiled up in me and my surprise did a very unbecoming in two seconds. "No, I haven't changed my dress!" I said scornfully. "I just stepped into a tank of purple dye and here I am."

"Now-w, Letty," Gladys Newcomb protested placatingly, "I didn't mean anything. I just wondered."

I looked at her with restrained distaste. "Oh, no, you didn't mean a thing," I burst out. "Only that I murdered Pam and shot my head off then dyed the hotel's incinerator."

My voice trailed off shrilly. The police would undoubtedly ask to see that black dress, and what would they think? The hem here, the broken shoulder strap, the dirt and stain of grass? Letty Lamprey, you got all over me and I drew my black velvet robe a little closer. It was reassuring to see that poor Pamela didn't look as if she'd been strangling with her. She seemed to have fallen quietly there on the grass, without struggle or violence, with no effort to protect herself.

"The police!" stood Pamela, asked: "Why, Peter Gibson, what are you doing here? You left Pamela's hours ago!"

"That's really none of your business, Pamela," answered Peter in cold, searing tones.

"Now-w, Peter," cooed Pamela, I just wondered!"

No one meant anything. Everyone just wondered!

But the police would mean a great deal when they asked Peter Gibson why he was here. A sinister thought ran through my brain. I turned and looked at Peter again, realizing he had been the focal point of all my excitement for the last few hours. He certainly didn't look like a murderer. But then, what do murderers look like? Don't they sometimes look like men ofbroken of tenderness and goodness and loving kindness that people nicknamed them Baby Face and Pretty Boy?

I looked at all the others then, one by one. Marvin Blaine, Wade Eastace, Doctor Wayne Courtney Reginald Mc Intosh, Gladys Newcomb, Gladys Newcomb. Which was the murderer? Then I saw Earle Pines coming back under the arbor the lawn, his shadow stretched out like a grim giant behind him, his heart began to thud.

Earle certainly looked like the best bet if appearance had anything to do with it. Somehow I always visualized murderers as dark, with hard, narrow-bodies, blue jowls, glittering black eyes and enormous hands. Earle's hands sprinkled with hair. It occurred to me that Earle Pines is a bathing suit would be a hairy monkey-packed ape of a man!

But why would Pam kill herself? I cudgelled my brains, trying to remember everything I knew about the man. I had seen Earle at parties for nearly a year, but only him for the first time last week and had found his manner an irritant. He was considered a very clever writer. He had had one book published and, after considerable a few months with him, I knew he believed with burning arrogance in his own literary genius without, I was certain, having done anything to earn that belief. He was working on a second book which would probably be guiltless of inspiration and sense ...just as the first had been. I thought the man was just another of these literary bores.

Why indeed, had Pamela invited him tonight? Less than four days ago I had mentioned Earle Pines to Pamela. She had curled her lip scornfully and snapped: "That skunk! Don't get me started on him!"

I made up my mind then to sleuth (as star reporters do in the movies, you know) on my own. I reasoned that if I found out some startling facts and produced scoops, that is, exclusive news for my paper about the police, the managing editor might learn I was capable of being a star reporter or a feature writer. I liked my society work, all right. Still I got out, and to call it the caviar I've eaten at parties in the past year, well—you could astound a lot of Russian Anyway I found becoming bored with society news routine and wanted to become a regular staff reporter maybe a star! So, thinking along these lines, I said swiftly to no one in particular: "I must call my paper." With that I gathered my flowing skirt in my hands and started off swiftly, up the terrace, across the tennis and croquet courts and swimming pool. Presently I was crashing my way through the underbrush and shadow leaping like a thing of life beside my own. Fear rang and surged in my ears as I shifted into first and ran as I've never run before.

One horrible second later a hand reached over my arm, a voice, cold, strident, whispered: I saw it was Peter Gibson.

"You!" I found I could breathe clear down to my insteps. "You nearly scared me to death!"

"Sorry, infant," he said. "You see, there's a long dark stretch ahead of you. I thought page had better trot along, just in case.."

All right, then," I said.

It was past midnight now, and I was The Charlton-Arms in convinced that's an hour when all but street-cleaners, insomniacs, commercial merchants, millionaires, burglars, night club habitues and roominghouse keepers are in bed. The things —both A and B—were securely fastened. I thought Peter and I simply would have to walk westward around the vast red-brick building, through a garden gate and so to the front entrance, eventually, in front of the hotel where the taxi-limousines presented the only unlocked door.

It was slow going and rather frightening. The night was as black as the inside of your pocket. And all sorts of things rushed through my brain. Pamela Keith lying...Murdered...And her murderer might be prowling around somewhere, watching, waiting..... A murderer might crouch behind one of those trees... might even be hiding beside me.....

At that exact moment Peter Gibson put his hand on my shoulder, his fingers pressing down quite through my velvet cape. My heart nearly exploded with conflicting emotions. Was he going to kill or kiss me?

"Letty," he began in the strangest sort of voice, "Did you do it? I've got to know."

"Why?" I asked.

"Don't ask, Letty. I'm serious. Did you do it?"

"No. Did you?" I countered.

"Don't lord, NO! Why would I kill Pamela Keith?"

"And why would I?"

"You knew her. You might have hated her."

"And you crashed her party. You might have crashed it to 'case the joint' as the gangsters would say."

My voice cut off sharply. I heard sounds nearby. And in the next moment I saw two figures, scarcely more than shadows, coming out of the heart of the park. Peter gave me a vicious yank which almost dislocated my spine and then we were in the deep shade of an oak, bushes and vines together, watching.....

Watching Sandra Keith and Victor Corlies coming toward us, Sandra was walking a little or as stead of Victor, but suddenly he reached out one of his long arms, caught Sandra's hand and drew her to a standstill.

"Sandra..." his voice was hardly more than a whisper, but I could hear it. I'll die if I don't tell you!" Peter Gibson and I were more than five feet away from those two.

Sandra jerked her hand free, I saw, rather than heard, Sandra's voice blazing like fireballs in the darkness: "Don't touch me, Victor! I hate you! You get your hands off me again! You walked out on me at the club tonight, and you can stay out—what—what girl you were with. But—I know, You thought I'd never hear about you and that girl, didn't you? And that awful place on 9th Street. But I—I heard, all right. How cheap and common she was—and how—how drunk you were!"

There was a thin note of despair in Victor's voice. "I've told you twenty times that I wasn't with any girl tonight. You've got to believe me, Sandra. That girl meant —nothing to me. Nothing. Your self-respect—I'd—I'd die—I'd never marry you. She told me to stop seeing her, that you were through, and to get out of your life and stay out. I—I was crazy about you. I left your house that night. I didn't know what I was doing. I couldn't even see you now. I—I don't believe you'll ever speak to

Champion Trapshooter Breaks 97 Out of 100 To Win Title

By The Canadian Press
They are not unknown always who win the Grand American handicap trapshoot. It happened again yesterday at Vandalia, O., when Leslie Jesson of Dwight, Ill., captured the classic, breaking 97 of 100 targets at the 19-yard line—using a single barrel.
Last year's winner, Jasper Rogers of Cisco, Tex., made only 96 targets in defence of his title. No man has ever won the "Grand" twice.
Jesson's championship was won by Mrs. Van Marker of Evanston, Ill., who broke 94 targets to tie with Jesson. Four marksmen from Hamilton, Ont., finished next in the 92-target group. They were Harry Kreichman with 92 Dr. D. H. Stewart, 92, Norman White, 91, and Sam Vance, 87.

A dispatch from Helsinki last night said Lje Nalmo, a Finn, had set a world's high jump record mark at 29 minutes, 35.4 seconds. The former record was 7 feet 6 11-32 and was held by Thisto Mski, another Finn.

Pensive, the 1944 Kentucky Derby-Preakness champion, running with Bill Shoemaker up, was the only Farms entry, and By Jimminy, winner of Belmont's seventh-race event, was rated today as front runners in the 94th renewal of the $60,960 American Derby at Washington Park, Chicago. By Jimminy, owned by Alfred P. Parker of New York, and the Pensive-Mata combined duo were quoted at 6-5 in the field of seven. They were favored over to run for the rich purse. To the winner will go first money of $52,600 and a gold cup. There is a reinforced claim to horse-of-the-year ratings.

The Washington Redskins inaugurated the 1944 pro football season last night at Los Angeles with a 7-3 victory over the Cleveland Rams, well conditioned march field team representing the fourth army air force.

Guelph beat Waterloo 11-2 at Waterloo last night to win the Intercounty Midget Bantam Baseball championship.

Hamilton Midgets moved into the second round of the O. B. A. playoffs by defeating Brantford, overnight, 5-1, with Pete Strabac holding Kitchener to three hits.

At Hamilton the St. Catharines-Hamilton Canadians tied the Niagara District ball playdowns when they beat Hamilton 8-1. Second game of the series will be at Hamilton Saturday night.

AirBombardments ReduceProduction Of Oil Products

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Aug. 26 (AP)—Production of finished oil products for Germany was drastically reduced last week by Allied air bombardments during May, June and July.
A joint statement of the R.A.F. and United States Strategic Air Force's curtailment of production capacity in Germany of both crude and refined products.
Attacks were made day and night on synthetic oil plants, Italy and Russia on oil installations in Germany and in her satellite countries, with priority he has given to the repair and rehabilitation of transport. The natural oil plants seriously damaged in May, June and July," the statement said.
"A number of these installations have been restored and put back into production. As a result of this emergency repair, it is possible that improvement in the overall oil situation may take place by the end of August. Should the current continuing attacks, it is too early to say what the exact situation will be then."

Early Agreement On World Security Has New Impetus

Washington, Aug. 26 (CP)—Official hopes for an early Russian-American-British agreement on world security were given new impetus today by a report that the Russian delegation entered the Dumbarton Oaks Conference carrying only skeletonized and flexible commitments from its government.
Earlier indications from Russia as to her views on how the proposed international security body should be up had hinted at possible Allied disagreement on a host of questions, ranging to small nations and the organization of an international air force.
Britain and the United States have favored small power membership in the belief the security agency plan would not otherwise be acceptable to the rest of the world. On the point of any sort of international force the United States is opposed, favoring instead the use of national air forces by prearrangement.
It now is reported that while the United States and Britain have left the door open on which filled a book, and the British delegation came with a complete plan for organization, the Russians surprised the other nations by arriving without a document only a few pages long.
In this they advocated the principles of world security backed by force, an assembly of nations and a council with the use of prompt and strong measures by the big powers to put down trouble-makers themselves and wherever they threaten. But they left themselves room to insist on specific acts of accomplishing objects.
This has given them a flexible position in which to negotiate without having to alter the principles to which they have gone on record officially.
The prospect is that the work will be completed in about three weeks, when Prime Minister Churchill and Russian delegates will hold a week-long talk with President Roosevelt. At the close of these meetings, it is hoped, will come a tentative foundation plan.

SIX AMERICAN LEAGUE TEAMS CHANGE PLACES

New York Yankees Take Over Second Spot 4½ Games from Top

BROWNS BEATEN

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
Jigger Shofner, Yankee relief ace, stared the St. Louis Browns in the face today as the league leaders moved into Sportsman's Park for the second game of a "crowbut" series.
Six of the eight teams in the American League changed places yesterday when New York took over second spot only 4½ games off the pace and the Tigers shoved into a third-place tie with Boston.
Ellery Prout handed the Browns a neat four-hit whitewash job, 1-0, doubling the string of Shofner's victories. Johnny Niggeling Tuesday night. Dimy before that. Jigger's relief brand of hurtle to less four shutouts.
Prout fanned Washington but it took 11 innings to do it, 4-2, as Ailey Donald handed Roger Wolff his ninth straight defeat.
Boston Beaten Twice.
Boston's fans fared in a double set-back at Philadelphia, 6-1 and 9-4, with Bobo Newsom losing the opener and Mickey Haefner losing relief triumph in the second. Bobby Doerr's homer with the A's Jim Fifth place and helped drop the Red Sox from second to a tie for third with the Tigers. Dick Wakefield, including his fifth homer with two on.
Detroit's Kelltop became the 3rd Major Leaguer to hit a grand slam homer this year when he connected for the second time in Cleveland's 10-3 romp over Chicago's Bill Dietrich.
Glants in First Division.
The Washington Giants hopped back into the National League first division on four successive victories by Mickey Haefner, 10-3 behind Bill Voiselle as Chicago was shut out by Cincinnati, 3-0, Pittsburgh's run of victories was cut at six straight with a 7-1 win of 12 games when St. Louis' Fred Schmidt shut out the Pirates 4-0.
Phil Cavarretta's second-inning homer gave the Phillies' Dick Barrett a 1-0 victory over Brooklyn. Jim Tobin of Boston but Nate Andrews outsteadied Charley Schanz to even the score in the finals, 4-3.

Yesterday's Stars
(By The Associated Press)
Joe Hoover, Detroit Tigers — Hoover singled, stole second and scored on a hit and steal with Eddie Mayo for only run as Trout shut out St. Louis, 1-0.
Ben Chapman, Phils and Buck Richison, Braves — Northy clouted two runs in No. 16 which Barrett loaded to drop Boston in opener, 6-5, and Richison relieved Jim Tobin of Braves' 4-3 edge in second.
Nap Reyes, Glants — Drove in five New York runs with homer, triple and single in 10-3 shellacking of Brooklyn.
Bill Kellner, Indians — Hammered grand slam homer as Cleveland swamped Chicago 10-3.
Bobby Estalella and Mickey Newsom, Athletics — Estalella collected five hits in seven at bats, including three-run homer as Philadelphia downed Boston twice, 6-1, 9-4. Newsom stretched Boston Park scoreless-inning streak against Boston to 26 with seven-hit job in opener.

SHOCKING DAMAGE BY BUZZBOMBS

"Cornered Beasts Are Dangerous," Says Health Minister in Warning of Risk to Children

London, Aug. 26 —(CP)— Nazi robot bombs sent against England at the rate of 100 a day have caused many casualties" and a "shocking damage to property," the government asserted yesterday in a fresh appeal to Londoners to keep their children away from the capital. (Last officially announced figures showed the death toll was nearly 1,000. It likely has surpassed that total now.)
The appeal came from the Minister of Health Henry U. Willink in the midst of a several-hour lull in the bombardment and shortly after it had been disclosed that historic Buckingham Palace in Chancery Lane was among the famous buildings smashed by the bombardment.
The Minister of Health, accompanied by Lord Woolton, Minister of Reconstruction, visited London's bomb-damaged area. He said persons "must not, through the glorious victories of the Allied armies blind them to the risks to which children now are held in London still are exposed. We have to expect that these dangers will continue for some time—cornered beasts are dangerous."
Windows and woodwork of Lincoln's Inn Gatehouse, which bears the date of 1562, as well as lawyers' offices and residential quarters adjoining, were badly damaged but no one was hurt.
Houses in the robot bomb area are being destroyed or damaged at the rate of some 2,000 every 24 hours, the British Information Services in New York announced.

Allies Attack 4 Last Hun Points In Marseilles

By RED FEDER
(AP War Correspondent)
Marseille, France, Aug. 26—(AP)—The Allies launched a smashing attack on the four remaining enemy strong points in Marseilles yesterday after capturing two 2,000-man garrisons and 1,000 prisoners in this area in 72 hours.
Pressing the attack, a heavy artillery duel was on at the Notre Dame de la Garde, a commanding hill in the aristocratic residential section of Marseille, crowned by a fort, and the cathedral. Combined headquarters was in that area, which projects westward into the bay and forms a protection for the harbor.
Two front-line report said shells hit the dome and nave of the cathedral.

Americans Capture Meaux After Ten-Mile Advance

By JAMES LONG
(AP War Correspondent)

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Aug. 28 —(AP)— American 3rd Army tanks in a 10-mile advance today captured Meaux in the Marne river loop 25 miles east of Paris and raced unchecked up the winding river, while 1st Canadian Army troops poured across the Seine southwest of Rouen and threatened to outflank that former German stronghold.

Fighting stubbornly in the corridor between the Rouen and the Lisieux, the latter a gateway city slowly in the Canadians' sector, Robert G. Wilson of the Associated Press reported.

An earlier dispatch from Canadian Front war correspondent William Stewart said German resistance in the area seemed "completely disorganized," and a senior British staff officer told AP war correspondent John F. Chester that "Rouen is another Caen" in the chamber, in which some 20,000 Germans, trapped in three pockets, are trying "hard to get out from the Allied ground and air pounding."

For the first time in this war American troops were fighting on a battlefield of the First World War. The time was the day we marched the high tide of the German attempt to take Paris and the place was Meaux, an attempt which ended with Allied victory and the sealing of the Marne when the Paris taxicab army stemmed the German drive.

The town is the northwest of Chateau-Thierry where American troops in the second battle of the Marne held the Germans during June and July, 1918, and took part in the counter-offensive launched on July 18.

Attack Swinging North

The whole Allied attack today was swinging generally on across the Seine river along almost the whole 200 miles from its source to the sea.

Between Paris and the English Channel, British, Canadian and Canadian armies deepened four bridgeheads over the Seine and have doomed Rouen, whose Joan or Arc was tried and burned, Rouen, 19th city of France with 131,376 population, now is the centre of German resistance such as it is.

The Allies also virtually doomed the great port of LeHavre, which they have opened the way into the Germans' flying bomb belt in the Pas De-Calais farther north.

The American bridgehead was at Meaux, the British at Vernon, and the Canadians had two between Elbeuf and Pont De Larche, 9 miles to the south.

U.S. 3rd Army infantry was streaming into the great tank-won bulge between the Seine and the Marne forming a consolidated front 35 miles in all, more than halfway east of Paris in a great half-wheel around the still encircled city and now almost clear of French capital.

To the southeast one American column was at Brie-Comte-Robert, 15 Seine 15 miles east of Melun, a second was at Provins, 20 miles southeast of Paris, and a third pushed seven miles north of captured Nogent-Le Villetaneuse.

Beyond Troyes on the American right flank a fourth column lobbed toward Vitry, on the upper Marne 45 miles northeast of Melun, and was less than 100 miles from the German border.

There was no confirmation by headquarters of an Algiers broadcast reporting that the Americans had reached Vitry—but the extent of the gain beyond Troyes was kept a security secret.

The Germans closed in to the outskirts of Romilly, 10 miles east of Nogent.

Pocket Almost Eliminated

Headquarters said the whole front south of the Seine "except in the last shredded Nazi pocket south of the Seine mouth, has been mopped up except for scattered groups of nowhere more than 1,000 Germans and these are being cleaned out swiftly."

Reconnaissance showed heavy renewed train movements in the area between Belgium and the German borders and in the area just north of the Seine between Paris and the Pas de Calais coast.

There was no way of telling whether this is another indication of a hurried 11th-hour withdrawal from the rocket-bomb coast or merely the rushing in of supplies to stiffen a defaying front.

Whatever its purpose and what ever the Germans' course there was no indication the enemy has the force or the strategic position for a powerful, unbroken defensive line where short of the Belgian frontier or there.

On the extreme right flank of the American advance, a column reaching a point 115 miles from the German border in the Saar. The Nazis put up a stiffened resistance, possibly indicating they were beginning to react to the American threat to their rocket bases.

The Germans already were reported swarming in Nancy, except for a few rear-guards and demolition troops, and were said to be withdrawing east toward Germany under pulverizing aerial attacks, Three Reds Satellites.

These three activities were being conducted by the Allies between Paris and the sea:

1. The British were building up a bridgehead of 3 miles deep and 10 miles from the mouth of the Seine, and 5 miles inland from the junction of Bourvik. Beauvik is 35 miles northeast of Vernon.

2. Canadian, Belgian and Dutch troops were engaged in what one correspondent called "a battle within a battle" of the enemy 1th army. Canadian troops were locked with German rear-guards at the southwestern approaches to Rouen, while others to the east the Canadians thrust two more bridgeheads across the Seine between Rouen and the sea, one of which and were in position to come up on Rouen from the east.

3. American troops were clearing out German stragglers in the Meaux-La Ferte Sous Jouarre-Montes and Paris. The American bridgehead at Meaux is 10 miles deep.

After breaking German resistance in the Meaux area, northeast of Paris, American armor lunged out 10 miles to the east and southeast Province, going through Pecy and Nangis on the way.

With the column at Lagny, these troops formed almost a quarter circle around Germans in Paris. Lagny is 24 miles southwest of that first great war battlefield, and Provins is 15 miles due south. Pecy, between Lagny and Provins, is only 31 miles from Chateau-Thierry.

The capture of Nogent, 37 miles east of Paris, was announced.

At the tip of the Breton Peninsula, far behind the main battleline, Allied ground troops were making short work of German garrisons that refused to reduce the port of Brest.

French Woman Took Heroic Part In Battle of Liberation of Paris

By DON WHITEHEAD
(AP War Correspondent)

Paris, Aug. 26 —(Delayed)— Parisians paid a high compliment to their city in blood—and somewhere in this ancient capital is a modern Joan of Arc who was the heroine of the patriots' battle to drive out the Germans.

Hundreds of civilians were killed and many others wounded in the eight-day battle which raged through the streets and barricades of Paris before fought, to push the Germans out of Paris. French authorities say the heroine died in battle but her body their lives in the fight for Paris. They say her name is known to many and will be withheld.

At times the patriots fought tanks with nothing more than rifles, pistols and hand grenades, and the boldest of the leaders was a French woman known to the Germans as "The Fox."

This slender, brown haired woman of 40 is a captain in the French Forces of Liberation. Fighting under her was a group of 40 men. Having sworn vengeance on the Germans after her brother was killed and her band of 40 against three Mark IV tanks the day before Paris fell. Her command fought with the city and knew her self, but she carried their ammunition, directed a modern Joan of Arc who was the heroine of the patriots' battle to drive out the Germans.

V-2 ROCKET BASE ON FRENCH COAST HEAVILY ATTACKED

Nazi Secret Weapon Said To Use 60 to 90-Ton Rocket With Head of Ten Tons

STRIKE INTO HOLLAND

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 28 (AP)—R. A. F. heavy bombers with fighter escort attacked a concrete structure in the French coastal area late yesterday believed to be connected with the Nazis' secret long range "V-2" rocket, the Air Ministry announced today.

The Berlin radio reported Allied bombers were striking today at Nazi Europe from both Italy and Great Britain, striking in northern Germany, Austria, Hungary and Czecho-Slovakia.

The concrete structure was Mimoyecques in Pas De Calais. The Nazis have been threatened to use a 60- to 90-ton rocket with a war head weighing about 10 tons and capable of wrecking damage far beyond that of the present flying bomb.

Last night R.A.F. Mosquitos slashed at the Rhineland industrial centre of Monchen and attacked German transport in the low countries.

Heavy bombers which have flown 1,000 sorties in large-scale assaults from British and Italian bases in the past four days were apparently not employed last night. The night attacks struck into Holland, bombing and strafing Walcheren causeways and barges while others slashed at Nazi airfields.

Yesterday powerful formations of Allied planes from Britain and Italy attacked at 12 large-scale assaults and scores and strafed and bombed retreating Nazi troops in France, after R.A.F. assaults Saturday night on Konigsberg, Kiel, Hamburg and Berlin.

Pilots reported considerable movement of German reinforcements and supplies from the low countries into France, over medium which the Mosquitos harassed in Holland particularly. Fighter

Canadian Corvette, Regina, Explodes, Sinks in 28 Secs; Two of Crew Dead, 27 Missing

A British Port, Aug. 28 —(CP)— The explosion which sank the Canadian Corvette Regina in 28 seconds blew the ship from under two officers, while a petty officer was twice blown into the air, landing clear of the ship the second time, survivors said when they reached here.

Loss of the corvette was announced at Ottawa earlier this month by Navy Minister Macdonald. Two of her crew have been reported dead and 27 missing.

The sinking occurred while Regina was going to the aid of a disabled merchantman. The corvette, commanded by Lieut. Jack Radford, of Sydney, N. S., won fame in the spring of 1943, when she sank an Italian submarine in the Mediterranean, capturing more than 25 prisoners.

Regina had ordered a landing craft (tank) to remove its crew from the merchantman while she stood by to screen the operation. "Everything was going fine," Radford said, "when whango! There was a terrific explosion and everything went. Our ship just seemed to disintegrate. Torrents of water and oil swamped the bridge. She listed to port and I climbed onto the rail. I didn't know where I was going. I just closed my eyes and jumped. Picked up by Merchantman.

"I swam for about 20 minutes towards a destroyer, where seven others were clinging and later we made our way to a carley float and were picked up by the Ivi."

Before going to the merchantman Lieut. Radford ordered all depth charges set in "safe," and this was credited with saving many lives. The men reported missing were trapped below decks.

Radford praised the attention given injured survivors aboard the rescue ship by Surg. Lieut. Grant Gould of Toronto, who despite two fractured ribs attended all the men.

He amputated a man's leg below the knee, using only a butcher

NEW FRENCH GOVT BEING SET UP IN LIBERATED PARIS

Eisenhower Welcomed and De Gaulle Escapes Death From Snipers

CITY IS QUIET

Paris, Aug. 28 —(AP)— A new French government has being set up in liberated Paris today after a frenzied weekend in which Gen. Eisenhower was given a tumultuous welcome, the Germans bombed the city, and Gen. de Gaulle escaped death or injury from snipers' bullets.

(The Paris radio in a broadcast heard in London said the city was quiet today and that two additional nests of enemy resistance had been mopped up.)

Nearly all of the directors of the French resistance movements, who will have prominent parts in the new government, were in the city. The Algiers government was en route.

Quartus Ceral, head of all French resistance, was appointed minister of forces under Gen. de Gaulle. Ceral's name like some others in the resistance movement, is an assumed one.

Crowds jammed the Champs-Elysses yesterday and shouted themselves hoarse as Gen. Eisenhower and his British, French and American staffs made a ceremonial tour of the city that ended in the shadow of the Arc de Triomphe.

Biggest German-Held City on Seine Between Paris and Le Havre

BATTLE FOR SEINE WON

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the 1st Canadian Army in France, Aug. 28 (CP)—Canadian infantry today pressed toward Rouen, biggest German-held city on the Seine between Paris and Le Havre, and their comrades crossed the river 10 miles to the south, and cleared up scattering enemy elements still concealed in the forests south of the river.

British, Netherlands and Belgian forces of the 1st Canadian Army battered the Elphinstone line with remaining enemy formations on the south side of the river, compressed on a narrowing pocket extending inland from the estuary to the vicinity of Rouen.

The battle for the Seine has been won and Allied forces now are poised for a drive across the river to clear the German 15th army from the robot bomb and rocket gun

With the 8th Army, Aug. 28 (AP)—Attacking fiercely against German forces withdrawing slowly into their prepared line defences for a last stand in northern Italy, Polish troops have punched a path through Nazi strongholds behind the Metauro River and have fought on across the Ariella, Allied headquarters announced today.

The advances placed British 8th Army units in the Adriatic sector within five miles of the important port of Pesaro and only a little more than 20 miles from Rimini at the southern edge of the broad Po valley.

The little Adriatic port of Fano was found clear of the enemy as the Germans scrambled to get out of the way of the hard-fighting Poles, who late crossed the Ariella river, which empties into the Report Says Red Columns 50 Miles Into Transylvania

Drive Swiftly Over-Running Wealthy Ploesti Oil Area

By REDDY GILMORE
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Aug. 28 —(AP)— Two great Russian army groups poised by Cossacks advanced today within less than 50 miles of Bucharest today in a drive swiftly over-running the wealthy Ploesti oil region.

An unconfirmed report said some columns had plunged also 50 miles into Transylvania.

The 14,643-square-mile northern section of Transylvania was cut away from Roumania and wrested to Hungary by Hitler in the 1940 Vienna dictate. Yet there were reports of Hungarian fighting alongside the Germans in that area.

The German communique said the attacks by Hungarian and German troops to prevent the enemy from entering Hungary through the eastern Carpathians are making good headway. Russian Marshal Plaira-Neami at the edge of Transylvania were reported to have "continued their big attack" between Warsaw and East Prussia in the region between the Vistula and Narew, rivers and "reached the Tweved Bucharest."

The main Russian direction in Roumania was toward Bucharest, but numerous columns moved off on a southeast right flank into the Carpathians. It was one of these which was reported deep in Transylvania — which captulated Roumania has sworn to retake from Hungary.

Strong air forces were bombing and strafing the disorganized Germans day and night.

East of captured Calafat in the breached defences in the gap between the mountains and the Danube south, advance Russian troops poured down the highway toward Bucharest on one wide skirt the Baragan steppe north of the Bulgarian border.

Front dispatches said Nazi storm troopers were organizing and evacuating the German troops in efforts to make a stand. Some reports said Germans but the armies of Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin and Gen. Rodion Malinovsky appeared to have broken the back of the Nazi forces before Bucharest.

Russians Smash

(A Bucharest communique said Roumanian troops fighting over on the Allies struck the Germans at Ploesti and blocked mountain passes leading to Hungary by way of Transylvania.

German broadcasts frankly admitted their position was "precarious," and said the situation in Roumania is "unusually ferocious" battle with Romanian troops aimed at destroying completely the oilfield installations.)

Russian troops smashed into the German at Focsani and Galati, anchors of the once-vaunted Wallachian line, and rolled through the oil fields of Ramnicul-Sarat, 22 miles beyond Focsani and 100 miles northeast of Bucharest. Ploesti is 40 miles southwest of the advancing Red armies.

Malinovsky moved on Ploesti and Bucharest down the southern side of the Transylvanian Alps while

So Many Mechanics Killed Launching Robots Germans Use Foreign Workers

London, Aug. 28 (CP)—Flying bomb attacks resumed against southern England, including the London area, today after a lull of nearly 72 hours had been broken only by a brief barrage Sunday morning.

Meanwhile the London Evening Standard's Paris correspondent reported that so many German technicians have been killed in working on flying bombs that the Germans are forcing foreign workers to launch them.

A French engineer who visited the bomb sites said that large numbers of bombs explode before taking off and that others crash after a shaky hop in the air, the Standard said.

So many bombs exploded before leaving the ground that German mechanics refused to continue work. But the average life of a man on the site was 10 days.

The Daily Mail said the Russians are closing in on Poland, where the Germans have been making super "V-2" rockets and had turned over the information to Russian experts.

"In certain circumstances it seems this additional secret weapon would be no more serious than V-1 (the flying bomb)," the Mail said.

OTHER BALKAN COUNTRIES ASKED TO GET OUT OF WAR

Pravda Warning Says Events Leave No Time for Hesitation

MOSCOW INFORMED

By JAMES F. KING
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Aug. 28—(AP)—Surrender terms for Bulgaria probably will be handed to an envoy of that Nazi satellite in Cairo within a few days and armistice terms for Rumania are expected to be signed shortly in Moscow, it was learned here today.

Greek and Yugoslav interests are understood to have full protection in the terms the Bulgars, despite the Balkan kingdom's strange plea to be allowed to retain parts of those Allied Nations which Bulgaria has occupied during the Axis-Soviet war.

Trying other countries to turn against the Nazis as Rumania has done, the official communists party organ Pravda said Turkey and Iran must grasp the disastrous consequences of the criminal policies of their governments.

"Events are developing so rapidly", said Pravda, "that they leave no time for hesitation. The situation is quite clear. The Germans have no hope and he who does not break with them will share their fate."

Pravda's warning came after it was said that U.S. with Bulgaria, Pravda's warning seems aimed at her as much as at Hungary and Finland.

Rumania Ordered to Surrender

The Russian War Bulletin said other Soviet forces climbing westward into the Carpathians north of the Galati gap captured some localities and were fighting along the Transylvanian plateau, including Gomanesti, 60 miles northwest of Focsani, and Targu Ocna, Rumania's largest salt mining centre.

Other Soviet armies, their corps commanders and two major-generals, together with 100 soldiers, included the seizureness of the Germans' plight.

The remnants of 12 German divisions pocketed southwest of Chisinau, 140 miles northeast of the Danube pouring through the Galati gap, had been compressed into a small pocket and were being destroyed, the Bulletin said.

In night dog fights Rumanian drive the Russians have killed or captured more than 50,000 Germans and Romanians. This made 1,081,886 Axis troops killed or captured since the summer offensive started June 23.

FLAT TIRES RESULT FROM STREWN TACKS ON CITY STREETS

Carpet tacks continue to be strewn with abandon about the streets in the downtown section of the city resulting in numerous flat tires on motor cars, much to the chagrin of the respective motorists. On Saturday W. H. Brown, living on Bell Street, was a reporter, personally swept fully a handful of tacks from off the street in the Bonnie section of Campbell and Front streets. However, the tacks do not not clear the streets in sufficient time to save himself the embarrassment of a flat tire on his own private automobile, which had picked up one of the tacks prior to having been parked in front of his place of business. As in the previous cases when carpet tacks were found strewn about Front Street earlier last week the brand of tacks were new, indicating they had been recently purchased and presumably purposely strewn about the streets for the express purpose of puncturing tires.

Concern was felt today regarding the mysterious disappearance of a woman and her two young sons, who failed to return home after leaving to attend church service at the Pentecostal Church Sunday night.

Mr. Edward Strome, who resided with his wife and two children in an automobile trailer off Station Street, reported to police authorities, that his wife and two sons, six-year-old Jamess and three-year-old John Strome, had left Sunday evening to attend church. They did not return home Sunday night Mr. Strome added he had searched the city early Monday morning before reporting their mysterious disappearance to police.

Lt. F. W. Maund Wins Military Cross On Italian Front

Veteran of the training grounds of Britain and the Italian war front for the past four years, Lieut. Frederick Walter Maund, son of Mrs. W. H. Maund, North Park, Ont., has been awarded the Military Cross, according to information reaching his parents here today. The thirty-one-year-old officer is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Maund, Belleville, and another was the former Ethel Walton, who resided on Bell Street here.

Lieut. Maund, enlisted with the Royal Canadian Dragoons over four years ago and has been with that branch of the service since. He served in England for six years and three years and has spent the last ten months with the Canadian troopers in Italy. It was on that front that he won the coveted Military Cross.

Details of the action for which he was awarded the honor have not been received by the officer's relatives as yet.

He is one of three brothers who are in the armed services, all having enlisted in the RCAF, is stationed at No. 8 Repair Depot, and another brother, Flying Officer Maund of the air force, stationed at Sumnerside, Prince Edward Island. Lieut. Maund has a wife and son residing at North Bay.

Limit Number Of Local Farmers Going to the West

Despite the fact that almost 200 Belleville County farmers and farmers' sons have made application to go to Western Canada to assist in harvesting operations there, scarcity of labor in Belleville district counting factories will result in only a portion of this number actually going.

Announcement to this effect was made yesterday by Mr. H. H. Reed, manager, National Selective Service office here. With tomato canning factories in the Bay of Quinte district needing help badly, labor requirements in the Belleville area would have to be taken care of before any great number could be spared. Mr. Reed is committed to go to Western Canada to assist in the harvest, it was stated.

Signifying the interest being shown by district farmers in the harvest excursion is the fact that up until Saturday evening 191 farmers had made application to go west. Farmers wishing to go west must first get a written clearance either from the agricultural representative or National Selective Service stating that their services are no longer required in harvesting on their own farms. Selective Service officials are working in close collaboration with agricultural officials in connection with the movement.

"Farmers are showing great interest in the trip," Mr. Reed stated Mr. Reed, "but with 43 per cent of the provincial tomato pack being made in the Quinte district, canning factory labor requirements must be met first. It was estimated already taken up with authorities the matter of adding 4,000 more farmers to assist in the tomato pack."

Up to Saturday only four district farmers had proceeded to the West, while it was expected 35 or 40 more would go this week. It was estimated that the quota for the Hastings area would be held to a maximum of 50 farmers going West.

Kinsmen Club To Hold Dance For Fag Fund

These Kinsmen Kut-ups may have let the Kiwanis Kewpies down and also themselves, in that now memorable tug-of-war, but they have no intention of ditching out kindly treatment to the Belleville boys overseas, insofar as age.

So, to bolster the fund, that has been responsible for bringing contentment happiness to the lads now "cutting-up" in Normandy Italy and other war fronts, the local "Kut-Ups"—are staking their third annual rug-cutting convention at the popular Exhibition Grounds Park Pavilion.

According to President Matt (formerly the Lone Ranger, now the Masked Kut-up) Mahon, the Kut-Ups have been placed on the "Kinsmen" pachyderms gone berserk, and a flock of Scotsman Highland flinging to Cab Calloway rhythms—the jitterbugs.

Masters of this musical cuisine, who will delight the ball-room palates of the rhythm-bunny hunting public will be the Commodore Orchestra, whose no mean contribution to the fag-producing exercises will be their own musical services and the use of the Pavilion gratis.

All the kazes jump on Wednesday night at the Park Pavilion. Remember, more faces, more fags. More fags, more happiness for the boys who are now playing the ones. Matt Hitler and his puppets are dancing to—with no hesitation.

ORIGIN OF "CLINK"

The slang expression "clink" was derived from an old prison at Bankside, London, named The Clink.

Miss P. Roderick Wins Rotary Doll

The Rotary Twenty-Five Dollar Doll found a permanent home on Saturday night following the drawing for the handsome prize at the Canadian Children Fund of the local service club.

Miss Pearl Roderick, 56½ Alexander Street, who held the lucky ticket, was formally presented with the prize before a large crowd of persons gathered at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, an out-of-town visitor to the Carnival, was awarded fourth prize with the lucky ticket.

Blessed with ideal weather for the greater majority of the time, the Carnival catered to one of the largest crowds attending this annual function of the Rotary Club, and games and rides were well patronized, with the children in particular deriving much pleasure from the amusement facilities afforded them.

It is expected that a substantial amount will be derived from the venture, and the Crippled Children Fund will benefit accordingly.

President Orland Pinkston, Roberts Charity Committee, who had charge of the "Doll" sale of tickets, and other members of the Rotary Club, extend to the general public their wholehearted appreciation of the generous support accorded the Carnival during its stay here.

Delayed Payment On Income Tax Due August 31

With summer rapidly becoming a memory, and fall and winter with its grimness brightness to loom over the financial horizon, many residents of the city should be ready to do considerable over the weekend and found themselves free from financial encumbrances by Aug. 31, delayed income tax deadline on the balance of tax for 1938.

Some of the men of Mr. and Mrs. John Taxpayer family took advantage of the breathing space given by government, and thousands scaled down their income tax payments under the longer period.

But a lot remains who have to "tax in" with the final amount at the end of the month.

For self-employed who don't get their payments away for August 31, there is a fine up to 25 per cent of the taxpayers whose returns are filed in April—have been reassessed and will be sent back after Aug. 31 there will be an additional penalty of 10 per cent.

Next year, the penalty is being cut down to four per cent.

A tax collector has made the plea that taxpayers accompany their final payments with a letter with an identifying note containing their names and addresses in full and also pointing out any change of address in print since they filed their return.

Two Main Ideas Being Developed On World Security

Washington, Aug. 28—(AP)—British, Soviet and American proposals to the Dumbarton Oaks security conference worked today toward agreement possibly on three-way compromise—on the most effective manner of uniting forces for suppressing future aggressor nations.

As the informal preliminary talks went into their second week, it was learned that two principal ideas have been developed thus far. One is a Russian proposal for an international police force. The American delegation is understood not to be irrevocably committed to creation of such a corps but is backing it strongly with the argument it would provide a quick means of striking in any part of the world where trouble threatened.

The American delegation has suggested a plan by which each nation would commit at least a part of its national forces, including air and naval, to be used in accordance with the orders of the international security organization but at the discretion of the individual governments.

This American plan is understood to be tied in with a general principle that development of the international security system should be affected along lines of regional responsibility in the keeping peace.

There has also been some talk of organizing regional international bodies, attached to the world security agency, which would function somewhat in the manner of the pan-American union.

So far the conversations have been an agreement of views among the three delegations on the need for forces to be available for any national police work in such strength that any threatening aggressor would be able to match them.

There is also general agreement, it is reported, on the necessity of setting up a military staff committee under the world agency which would serve about the same purpose as that of the British-American combined chiefs of staff board now directing the war under general authorizations given by the British and American governments.

HARMON TO MARRY

Ann Harmon, daughter of Mr. A. P. Harmon, former football star Tom Harmon and movie actress Elyse Knox will be married here today in St. Mary's Chapel on the University of Michigan campus.

First in-First Out Plan Abandoned By Great Britain

London, Aug. 28. (CP-Reuter)—The "first in-first out" plan for the demobilization of British armed forces has been abandoned, it is understood, and "key men" in industry, national and personal needs are now considerations that will benefit.

The House of Commons and the whole country are awaiting a statement by Prime Minister Chamberlain on plan which Parliament reassembles next month.

A committee under Malcolm Macgregor, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Labor, has proposed a plan for the cabinet's consideration, the basis of which is that no man will be released until or unless he has a job awaiting him.

Under the plan various government departments would co-operate with industry and commerce to produce a balanced demobilization.

Men Outlined

The plan would work something like this:

1.—Instead of a schedule of releases by groups, there would be a list of priority occupations, which would offer first release from the forces. Most obvious industries on the list would be shipbuilding, aircraft and coal mining. Other industries would be added as circumstances change, when preparations proceeds.

Every miner or builder, who has been away from Britain longest in India or with the 8th Army, or in a particular unit, would have a higher priority than one who had put in all his service at home bases.

2.—Demands by the employers for the return of specified experts for fixing up a factory for resuming one that is closing would influence demobilization priority.

3.—Degree of "key man" responsibility; a married man with children would take a higher place than one without children or an unmarried man. Personal hardship cases would overrides these considerations.

Men from the less essential industries and those with particular skill would be among the last to be demobilized.

German Officers Held Responsible

BY NEDVILLE NORDNESS
(AP War Correspondent)

Paris, Aug. 28. (AP)— French resistance leaders expressed belief today that German officers left behind for every purpose were responsible for the murder, on the life of Gen. De Gaulle.

A shot was fired at the leader of the French Committee of National Liberation Saturday while he was driving from a square crowded by thousands of Parisians before the Hotel De Ville (City Hall).

The General never knew at the time, that he was fired upon in the crowd. Police arrested the suspected, but he certainly knew of the attempted attack, which burst on him as he was entering Notre Dame Cathedral to hear a prayer service for the liberation of the city.

A ring of guards surrounded De Gaulle at the Cathedral, and they searched through the crowd for the would-be assassin.

Members of the stricken government said they believed many Germans were left behind in France for the special purpose of killing De Gaulle and other members of the French government and leaders of the resistance movement.

The incidents took place during de Gaulle's triumphant tour of the city, which started from the Arc De Triomphe.

Could Not Be Carried Out

A message from the veteran Nazi 8th parachute division—one of three German divisions recently reported in action on the Adriatic sector—said orders for this unit's withdrawal to Metaurro line could not be carried out because of the terrific pressure exerted by troops of the Allies.

The withdrawal finally was effected only after heavy losses, the captive added.

Substantial gains were made by 8th Army troops further inland where Allied forces crossed the Maggiore river in the mountains and captured Pesarobrona on the main lateral road to Fano.

North and east of Florence the Nazi withdrawal into the gothic line continued. A British force pushing three miles north of the Arno river in the vicinity of Pontassieve, nine miles east of Florence, found the enemy covering his retreat with heavy cannon and machine-gun fire.

That the hills were hard to climb,

By the valley of rest as fair,
Some time, some day, we know not when,
We will meet our loved one there.
Sadly missed by her daughter Mary, son-in-law Max, and grandsons Ronald and Gerald. A38

But they little know the sorrow
Lies in our hearts concealed.

bombers extended their operations farther north and east of the Seine. Some trains that were blown up included Army supplies with ammunition or possibly flying bombs.

The air blows at the flying-bomb ramps, depots and supply routes have been believed responsible for the sustained respite that London has enjoyed for several days.

Early today, air activity over Northern France was restricted by bad weather. Fighters based on England and France flew about 1,000 sorties yesterday, 2,500 by tactical units helping the infantry and armor routed the German defenders of the German divisions. They unloaded thousands of tons of explosives and fragmentation bombs on Germans, vehicles and large concentrations near Rouen.

Allies Lose 36 Planes.

The day's score included destruction of damage to 1,000 locomotives, 1,100 railroad cars, 700 motor vehicles, 39 barges and 45 flak guns.

British and American heavy bombers kept up their two-directional bombing of German objectives in Germany. Oil plants were battered.

In all operations from the west yesterday, Allied planes destroyed 344 enemy aircraft and 22 on the ground. Twenty Allied planes were lost.

FAIR EXCHANGE

Old Forge, N.Y., Aug. 26 (CP)—One day's fishing failure each had been reported by Richard C. Mitchell, Oswego, who caught the legal limit but lost his wallet, and by William R. Wolfe, Kenmore, who caught the wallet but got no trout. But the pair met later and Mitchell swapped his catch for the $138 and gas ration books he had lost.

PRODUCTION UPTED

Accra, Gold Coast, (CP)—Considerable progress in vegetable growing has been made in the Gold Coast and this year's production from government farms is estimated at 1,000,000 compared with 300,000 pounds for the previous year.

Pacific Air Power Heightening Tempo Of Its Assault

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Aug. 28 (AP)—Hitching its power ever closer to Tokyo, Allied air power in the Pacific is heightening the tempo of its assault.

Reported during the weekend were some of the heaviest sustained bombings yet conducted almost simultaneously on a wide range of targets in the Bismarck Archipelago and Netherlands New Guinea.

Dozens of tons of bombs on Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands 760 miles south of Tokyo, were hurled by more than 150 tons on the Moluccas.

In these attacks, eight small Japanese craft were sunk or damaged and 11 enemy planes destroyed or damaged.

Supplementing recently-won airdromes on Saipan, Tinian and Guam, in the Marianas, is a newly-completed field on Middleburg Island off Sansapor at the northwest tip of Netherlands New Guinea.

Disclosure of the new airstrip, 320 miles closer to the Philippines than any other Allied base, came today in a communique announcement of a night raid on Middleburg by an enemy plane. Damage was slight.

Middleburg, taken July 30, is within 600 miles of Mindanao, southern Philippines.

Ground action flared east and southwest of Sansapor, American patrols, intercepting units of Japan's trapped 2nd army attempting to escape westward from Manokwari, killed 326 enemy troops and captured 196.

Appeals to Londoners To Bear Their Trials With Fortitude

London, Aug. 28 (CP)—Pope Pius XII has appealed to the people of London to bear their trials with fortitude and with "Christian sentiments of forgiveness, charity and mercy, so that God may reward what the world will admire—an example of magnanimity inspired by the spirit of Christ's gospel."

The Pontiff's message was brought to London by Msgr. Bernard Griffin, Archbishop of Westminster, who recently returned from a visit to the Vatican and the Italian battlefront.

"You and yourselves, beloved children," the Pope said, "were not the least of our anxieties. For you, yes, you also, have had to pass through black days in this most terrible of all wars, and those days are still with you.

"We have sympathized deeply with your affliction and when destruction and death were among you we prayed for you daily and hourly. . . .

"Our lively hope and our confident conviction is that you will work toward realization of universal harmony in Christ while in word and act, through prayer and personal sacrifice and the shining example of a sincere Christian life, you help those millions of noble souls who are your separated brethren to return to the fold and so make your contribution toward the establishment of the reign of Christ, the Prince of Peace."

POPCORN SHORTAGE

St. Louis, Aug. 26 (AP)—St. Louis faces the prospect of a popcornless world series, Blake Harper, concessions manager at Sportsmans' Park, says his supply is almost gone and if part or all of the fall baseball classic is played here, it will have to be without popcorn unless he finds 10,000 pounds immediately.

QUADRUPLETS BORN

Gainesville, Ga., Aug. 28 (AP)—Quadruplet boys, all apparently healthy, were born yesterday to the 22-year-old wife of an army private, Mrs. Charles R. Lee, who also is the mother of a three-year-old daughter. The babies weighed about three pounds each.

26 Persons Killed In Plane Crash At Scottish Base

London, Aug. 28—(CP)—Twenty-six persons were killed today when a large air transport crashed in flames at the Scottish base of the Military Air Base at Prestwick, Scotland.

The dead included seven of the plane crew, 14 passengers and five officials of the base, who were demolished. Soldiers and civil defence workers labored through the darkness to recover bodies from the wreckage.

The plane was inbound from an Atlantic crossing.

It was the second time within a week that a plane had crashed on a building. Last Wednesday 18 people were killed or died as a result of injuries when a United States bomber plunged on to the schoolhouse at Freckleton, Lancashire.

Over Half Enemy Forces in South France Liquidated

By GEORGE TUCKER
(A. P. War Correspondent)

Rome, Aug. 28 (AP)—More than half of all German soldiers garrisoning southern France prior to the Allied landings are believed to have been killed, wounded or captured in less than two weeks, and today the battered remnants were fighting a frantic battle in Rhone valley to escape a trap.

American troops have reached the Rhone Valley north of Montelimar, 100 airline miles north of Marseille, and have cut off the line of retreat of the German 11th armored division and other troops to the south, field dispatches said today.

At least 50,000 enemy front line troops were estimated to have been knocked out of the war in southern France to date. The German 11th division was being pressed from the south by other American units harassed by Maquis in the hills to the west and cut up by Allied artillery fire from the east.

The Germans were making a fierce effort to cut a way through to Valence, 25 miles north of Montelimar, it was said, but the Americans were confident of their ability to crush the breakout attempts.

The Germans were confronted by the additional menace of "Frenkel's task force" — the mobile column commanded by Brig.-Gen. Frederick Butler, which several days ago reached Grenoble, 70 miles northeast of Montelimar, and whose activities have not been reported since.

Kill Untold Hundreds.

The Germans were attempting to withdraw northward through the Rhone Valley along the river's east bank when a column from 14-Gen. Patch's advancing army fell upon them and in a series of rough encounters killed untold hundreds, a headquarters announcement said. Montelimar is about 100 miles north of Marseille.

It was estimated 18,000 of the battered German 19th Army have been eliminated. This defeated German force included elements of the German 11th Panzer and 198th Infantry divisions, which had been reinforced by scattered elements of three other enemy infantry divisions.

The loss of this force, which was announced simultaneously with the loss of the German 340th and 244th divisions at Marseilles and Toulon, means at least 50,000 German front line soldiers have been eliminated.

In indication of weakening enemy resistance was seen in the surrender of 1,000 Germans north of Grenoble. Headquarters said the Nazis threw down their arms when their commander ordered them to attack.

The total of prisoners taken in Southern France rose to 32,000.

On the eastern flank of the Anvil-backed Allied forces have reached the Var River and have spread out along its banks. The Var's mouth is four miles from the previous Riviera resort of Nice.

Bright Sunshine Greets N.B. Voters

Saint John, N.B., Aug. 28 (CP)—Casting of ballots in the New Brunswick general election began today when polls opened at 9 a.m., A.D.T. (8 a.m., E.S.T.). The polls will close at 7 p.m., A.D.T.

Early ballot returns gave promise of an ideal day for the voters to get to the polls. Officials predicted a good-sized vote, especially because of the three-party angle in the contest.

A period of about seven days will elapse between the counting of civilian votes tonight and the receipt of all returns from New Brunswick members of the armed services in Canada, Newfoundland, Labrador and overseas.

Instead of being announced parliament buildings, as received from various areas, the service vote totals for the provincial riding will be made public simultaneously when the complete figures have been reported to the special returning officer, Dr. J. Miles Otheon, at Fredericton.

U. S. COTTON CONSUMPTION

During the past 20 years consumption of cotton in the United States has never fallen below 23.3 pounds per person per year.

So This is Paris

Paris, Aug. 28 (AP)—(Delayed)—The American soldier's reaction to Paris was one long succession of oohs in—with gestures.

Paris really let down its hair and the latch strings were out for one and all with their sentiments, feelings, action in and out of traffic jams of bicycles with tinkling bells, hat and automobiles perched on their seats. It was somewhat unsatisfactory if a man looked the other way, but brass hats looked the other way for this was Paris.

Every block was jammed with handclapping crowds and soldiers were surrounded by handshaking, shoulder-patting crowds.

"It's a far cry from those hedgerows," said one private.

Paris Still in An Uproar 72 Hours After Liberation

By HOWARD COWAN
(Associated Press Correspondent Representing Combined American Press)

Paris, Aug. 28 — (AP) — Today—some 72 hours after Paris was liberated—the city is still in an uproar. Wild-eyed youths waving rifles and machine-guns and driving cavorting automobiles still roam the streets.

There are still sporadic outbursts of rifle fire and fag fights among the French themselves. The streets present no semblance of order.

Tanks which Brig.-Gen. Jacques Leclerc's French 2nd Armored Division drove into the city-city still are parked under trees which line the capital's broad avenues. Tanks are very fine in theory, of course.

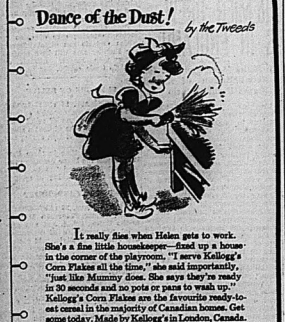
Many of them are reduced to shapeless pools of sawdust. Some are little-chewed and parts of long barricades blocking streets.

The majority of the Maquis and the F.F.I. one observer estimated, are level-headed patriots who are anxious to return to the task of restoring Paris and France to prewar productive existence.

A small percentage was described as the "rougher element" who do not intend to give up the weapons which the Allies dropped to them by parachute.

The situation is unpleasant. The Allies are shying away from the use of the guns which would expose them to the accusation of shooting Frenchmen.

Though he was absent from Sunday's parade, General de Gaulle and General Eisenhower when the Supreme Commander visited Paris yesterday. It is known that he asked Eisenhower to send two divisions of British and American troops, on parade through the city, and it is not unlikely that Paris soon will see a demonstration of Allied might.



But the Supreme Commander has given no indication he intends to take over the job of policing the city.

PATROL VESSEL SUNK

London, Aug. 28—(CP)—British and American light naval forces engaged eight enemy patrol vessels off the French coast yesterday, said one, torpedoed two and drove another ashore, the Admiralty announced today.

Off the Dutch coast, British motor torpedo-boats sank a German minesweeper.

Windsor, England —(CP)— The King conferred an ancient ceremony by accepting from the Duke of Wellington a silken Union Jack as annual rent for Strathfieldsaye estate in Berkshire. The estate went to the from Duke on condition he pay a token rent of a Union Jack each year.

It really flies when Helen gets to work. She's a fine little housekeeper—fixed up a house in the corner of the playroom. "I serve Kellogg's Corn Flakes all the time," she said importantly, "just like Mummy does. She says they're ready in 30 seconds and no pots or pans to wash up." Kellogg's Corn Flakes are the favourite ready-to-eat cereal in the majority of Canadian homes. Get some today. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

Hidden Wealth

The holiday season now drawing to a close attracted to Hastings County one of the largest crowds of vacationists seen here in many years. Inquiries for cabin, cottage, hotel and other resort accomodation were one hundred per cent in excess of any former year. The majestic grandeur of its hills; the rugged forest-carpeted terrain of its northern areas with its stream-lashed woodlands and its myriad lakes that gleam against a verdant setting like gems in a green casket, held a holiday lure that few could resist.

Accommodation was at a premium. Forsighted hostesses and holiday-makers arranged for reservations weeks ahead of their scheduled appearance. Those, and there are many, who inevitably leave such arrangements until the last minute, were disappointed. As early as the first week in July, the greater majority of county resorts were booked for the season. It was practically impossible to secure, as one disappointed visitor put it, "a puptent or even the room to pitch one," after that date.

Ninety-five per cent of the holiday visitors to Hastings County were Canadians. The small percentage of visitors from the United States is explained in two words, gasoline restrictions. The Canadian government allows them fifteen gallons of motor fuel, with their own allowances, could not take them very far inside Canada. Long trips were out of the question.

And by the same token, Canadians were prevented from taking lengthy sight-seeing tours of this country or the U.S.A. Vacationists who motored to their holiday spots, did so as a result of judicious saving of precious fuel during the months preceding vacation time.

It is indeed an ill wind that blows nobody some good. Gasoline restrictions are responsible for the elimination of the hedge-hopping tourist or holiday-maker, he who passes here a day, then goes on to seek fresher fields and pastures unseen; flitting hither and yon until the time comes for him to return to work.

But there is a silver lining to the dark cloud of disappointment that this type of vacationist—and for many others too. Unable to indulge in his favorite holiday habit, he has been obliged to spend his time in one place. And in the thorough and enforced vacation that thousands of Canadians have become aware of the beauty, charm, and holiday facilities of their own districts, that hitherto have gone unnoticed in the mad rush "to get away for awhile."

They have come to realize that under their very noses lay the things they formerly travelled miles to see and enjoy. An instance of this was seen in a lakeside village not far from this city. A business man who years ago, purchased a cottage on a lake some two hundred miles away, was content to spend his vacation at home this year, due to gasoline restrictions. He rented a cottage situated a scant two miles from his house. There he spent two weeks with his family, and discovered that "Why didn't some one tell me about this before? Has this actually been here all these years? We had the time of our lives." He has since added a laneway to his cottage, and intends building another in the immediate environs of his home village.

Statistics here show that the greater majority of the "friendly invaders" showed a distinct preference for a cottage or cabin on a lake with meal facilities near by. This, then, will be a new realization that vacations are as enjoyable if not more so, if spent in one spot, opens a new vista of business potentialities for the resort owner; and for those with an eye to catering to this lucrative tourist trade.

Travel in Canada will expand to enormous proportions after the war. It is quite likely that European trips will not be available for many years after the cessation of hostilities and with the almost certain lifting of gasoline restrictions, American eyes will turn northward to Canada and her attractive vacation possibilities.

Why not be ready for them, and the many Canadians who, through the new knowledge of what their own country can offer them, will holiday here? Many lakes of North Hastings are yet untouched. There is plenty of room at those that are popular resorts for expansion of tourist facilities. Tourists mean dollars. Dollars mean prosperity. There is little to be achieved by confining ourselves to the things that are, when the things that can be, are within our grasp.

A great military leader once attributed his many victories to the attack that he was always ready for any emergency. This would well apply to Hastings County. The immediate future will bring many visitors here, appreciative visitors who will be willing to pay for what is available for them. It would not be well for this county to disappoint them. Hastings has the natural facilities for an ideal vacation land, and a little effort on the part of her people will bring untold benefits to all concerned.

"That's gold in them that hills."

Horse More Deadly Than Mule

(Kansas City Star)

In connection with farm safety week the Kansas State Board of Health released some interesting figures. In the last 11 years 972 Kansas farmers have been killed in accidents as against 147 mine or quarry employes, 73 manufacturing workers, 184 construction workers, 267 transportation and public utility workers and 155 trade workers.

Grazing there are more farmers than any other kind of workers in Kansas, that still makes farming by far the most dangerous occupation in the state. And what is the greatest danger? Horses.

The breakdown shows that in 13 years 45 were struck by lightning, 46 were thrown while riding horses,752 gored by bulls, 89 lost their lives in runaway accidents and 105 were fatally kicked by animals.

Knowing the celebrated reputation for lively hind heels possessed by the mule, we plunged still further in the figures to determine the part that mules had in this list of accidents. Our surprise was immense when we discovered the following: Of all deadly fatalities there were from kicks by horses, 16 by cows or steers and only 15 by mules.

More Kansans were fatally injured by kicks by cows or steers than by mules, and there was only one mule kicker offenders in this category. It appears we are going to have to revise our opinion about mules. Evidently the mule always has had poor press agents, perhaps his publicity was such that farmers just naturally give a wider berth to that area immediately to the rear than they do to that of other critters.

War's Gift to Medicine

(Detroit Free Press)

Volunteers at the Jackson penitentiary in Atlanta are being used by American scientists in experiments with what they hope is a cure for malaria. Army and navy doctors and other medical men are reported optimistic over the future possibilities.

When the Japs seized the Dutch East Indies they cut off most of the world's supply of quinine, which has been the chief weapon in combating malaria, a disease that works havoc among people in the tropics.

War has its compensations. Among them is the stimulus it gives human ingenuity to devise new ways of accomplishing ends. Add this malaria cure, if it pans out, to penicillin, and you have two outstanding scientific achievements that will survive this strange era as boons to the entire human race forever.

Sugar Research

Research awards totalling more than $250,000 to various colleges and universities for scientific investigations of the chemistry of sugar and its role in the diet were recently announced by Dr. Robert C. Hockett of New York, scientific director of the Sugar Research Foundation, sponsored by leading members of the beet and cane sugar industry, says the New York Times. New industrial uses for sugar that will aid the post-war market for the product are being discussed by Dr. Hockett at a series of conferences at nine Western universities.

JUST FOLKS

TWO PRIDES

Who climbs above the dreary taste
Should never look with scorn
On those the need of men must ask
For burdens bravely borne.

Who once has sweated in the mill
His daily bread to get
Should long remember all who still
With toil, their tables set.

Who once has grasped the happy chance
That raised him to renown
Knows well how close the circumstance
Of being up or down.

Two prides there are which men beset,
And one's of wealth unearned.
The other's scorn of honest sweat
When fortunes tide has turned.

Great Courage of Trapped Airman Wins Admiration of Correspondent

(BY ERNIE PYLE)

On the Western Front. —(By Wireless).—We had sent one soldier to the nearest aid station as soon as we discovered the wounded British pilot, trapped for eight days in his plane. He had to drive about six miles.

Just a few minutes after the other soldiers finished tearing two holes in the side of the plane, the medical captain and three aid men popped through the hedge and came running.

The doctor knelt down and stuck up everything in a few seconds. He asked an aid man for morphine. The pilot willingly held out his right arm, and the doctor stuck a needle into the back of his elbow. The pilot never flinched, but looked on almost approvingly.

"You're in good condition", the doctor said to him. "This is just to make it easier for you when I start to pull out. We'll wait a few minutes for it to take hold."

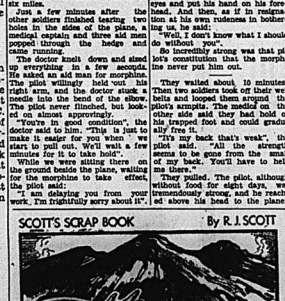
While we were sitting there on the ground beside the plane, waiting for the morphine to take effect, the pilot said:

"I am delaying you from your work, I'm frightfully sorry about it".

One of the soldiers, touched by the remark, blurted: "Good God, lieutenant you aren't delaying us. This is what we're here for. We're just sorry we've been so long getting you out".

The pilot momentarily closed his eyes and put his hand on his forehead. And then, as if to change the subject, he said:

"It's my back that's weak", the pilot said. "All the strength seems to be gone from the lower part of my back. You'd have to help me there."



They had pulled the pilot, although without food for eight days, was tremendously strong, and he reached above his head to the plane's

HARD TO TELL IN ONE INSTALLMENT

Sometimes, apparently in an attempt to be funny, you assume the role of being otherwise than a disgrace to your profession—that is, if you don't have the right to use the title of doctor. It might be well for you to examine the dignified character of Dr. Mumps column with your would-be humor, of which this suggestion of "pessimizing" infected tonsils is too typical. —(C. E. L.)

I have tried every feasible method in the years I have been grinding out this column before the readers of The Intelligencer to establish style you admire started his health column. One method recommended to me by many readers was enclosed editors was to just monkey around and say anything at all to get the reader's attention and then get down to the real crisp sentence or paragraph. This struck me as an excellent idea, but I have found in many instances the meat of the article was omitted (to make room for the introductory stuff) and the chaff was left. Of course that has many times caused me to attempt to be funny as you do, sir or madam.

By "pasteurizing" a focus of infection, a septic focus, in the tonsil or elsewhere, is meant the treatment of the infected area of tonsil tissue is subjected to a temperature that will destroy the infection, but not the multiplication of germs in the tissue, if not destroy the vitality of the germs. It is identical in principle with pasteurizing milk or other liquids. It is a radically new scientific explanation of the beneficial effects that have been claimed to derives from skilled diathermy—electro-coagulation—when applied at the hands of a physician skilled in the use of the apparatus. Often the marked relief or improvement in the general or systemic trouble which has been noted in the past is the experience after the first two or three diathermy treatments, long before the infected portion of the tonsil has been extirpated or destroyed. (E. L.)

There is a zone surrounding the point of coagulation where the passage of the diathermy current results as the temperature of the tissue to approximately 120 degrees Fahrenheit, a boiling point at which the albumin of the tissue cells is coagulated or destroyed.

Parisians Display Unbridled Joy

By MAURICE DESJARDINS

(CP-Via Transocean)

Paris, Aug. 26. (CP Cable).—For the last time in Paris, Germans have been watching a tumultuous demonstration of joy unheard by the liberated people of Paris.

After four years of odious occupation Parisians are still reveling on a show of sincere and unbridled joy.

Thousands upon thousands of happy people are massed along the boulevards from the Arc de Triomphe hour after hour: "merci, merci!"

One afternoon we saw Gen. de Gaulle pass here in a limousine and the cheers reached a new crescendo. Leaning out were two men who were seeing him for the first time cried like babies.

One wonders when the fierceness of this demonstration will die down. It shows no signs of doing so yet.

As we approached Paris we saw ten tired Germans in a horse-drawn jeep. There was a crowd around them and a well-dressed girl and young French girls spitting in one German's face. He just grinned sheepishly.

Maj.-Gen. Page Dies in Halifax

Halifax, Aug. 26 —(CP)— Maj.-Gen. L. F. Page, 80, general officer commanding the Halifax garrison command, died at the Naval Hospital here yesterday. He had entered the hospital several weeks ago.

Born in England, Gen. Page's army career began in 1881 when he was a trooper in the 33th horse.

He received many decorations. In 1911 he was granted a provisional commission in the same regiment and in 1912 his appointment was confirmed early in 1913. He retired this time as a lieutenant.

By the time he was in France with a Canadian unit, the 1st Battalion, his record in the First Great War was distinguished. He was wounded in action, mentioned five times in dispatches, awarded the Distinguished Service Order, and later two clasps to the D. S. O. By the end of the war he was a Lieutenant Colonel. In command of this military battalion in the 10th Canadian Infantry Brigade.

EDITORIAL STAFF
SPOHLING "MINNIE"

Brockville, Aug. 26 —(CP)— Minnie, the prairie mantis, has become the pet of the Record-Times editorial staff. Now she just keeps her supplied with freshly-killed house flies—her favorite dish.

HUGE SUNFLOWER

Kingston, Aug. 26 —(CP)— Mrs. Mike V. Wallis of this city has raised a challenge to sunflower growers. Her champion sunflower this year stands 26 feet five and one half inches from the ground. The plant's stalk is seven inches in circumference and the average leaf measures 18 inches by 12 inches. The centre of the flower, not including petals, is a foot across.

PREMIER DREW IS IN ENGLAND

To Make Arrangements for Rehabilitation of Armed Forces From Ontario

Toronto, Aug. 26 —(CP)— Premier Drew of Ontario is in England to "make arrangements in connection with the rehabilitation and hospitalization of the members of the armed forces from Ontario," Acting Premier Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, said in a statement issued at the weekend in connection with the Premier's arrival in London, England.

"Very considerable difficulty has been experienced in the carrying out the rehabilitation program and it was considered essential that arrangements be made in England so that all wounded or other members of the armed forces coming back to this province would have immediate knowledge of the rehabilitation opportunities open to them," said the statement.

"Arrangements are also to be made for closer contact with hospital cases. The Ontario government intends to take whatever steps are necessary to assure easier and more proper convalescent treatment for all those returning in this province."

In London Saturday the Premier said his overseas visit would last about two weeks and that he planned a tour of Canadian army hospitals in England.

In addition to making arrangements in which Ontario has direct interest, he President will hold conferences with British officials on Ontario trade affairs.

24 HOURS OF RELIEF

London, Aug. 26 (CP)—London and the southern counties enjoyed more than 24 hours of relief from flying bomb attacks without a single bomb in the London area during last night.

Canadian Nurses See Battlefront From Jeeps

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Forces in France, Aug. 28, (CP)— Four Canadian nursing sisters enjoyed an amusing but jeep tour of the front behind our front and no visiting dignitary has attracted more interest than they did as they drove over the battlefield, winding through columns of tanks and other transport on the dusty roads, looking over the ruins of Caen and other near-by towns and watching an artillery shoot the German obligingly staged.

In their smart, khaki uniforms and berets which have replaced their more familiar blue in France, Capts. Connie Browne of Port Williams Ont., Dorothy Lowe and Jessie Morrison of Winnipeg, and Sea Hunter of Quebec, were cheered everywhere they went.

"Blimey, wimmen", was the favorite expression of English troops working along the roads, while the Canadians, when they saw that the girls were from home, exclaimed, "A Canadian woman! it can't be true". They whistled and waved and the girls smiled and waved back.

Three French women, chatting by the roadside in one village, had by-passed, paused in their conversation when the jeep, with Lieut. Tom Kelly of Toronto, at the wheel, stopped to let some vehicles cross an intersection. They stared in amazement at the nurses, then smiled, then walked over to the car and each shook hands in turn. "Bonjour, les Francais", the French women said, and the nurses replied in their best French. "Bonjour, les Artillerie Active."

While Sisters Lowe and Morrison watched the German shelling a wood southwest of Caen, Sisters Browne and Hunter were driven through the debris-littered streets of the town and crossed a pontoon bridge to the other side of the Orne. They were probably the first Canadian women to cross the Orne and as they drove along a road between two rows of tanks, Canadian artillery started thundering away.

"Ours or theirs?" Sister Hunter asked and she was re-assured that they were ours. The German artillery wasn't paying any attention to that part of the road that night.

As the jeep moved through the flattened sections of Caen, Sister Browne surveyed the wreckage for a while and then remarked, "The Romans have nothing on us for ruins", adding, "theirs are older but ours are more thorough".

Their only comment when they got back to their tented camp, where they had arrived a few days before, was that they had enjoyed the drive.

"It was perfectly wonderful", they said.

Loss of Intellectual Freedom in Que. Blot on Province Says Bouchard

Geneva Park, Lake Couchiching, Ont., Aug. 28. (CP)—Senator T. D. Bouchard speaking to the Canadian Institute of Public Affairs here Friday night said that the loss of intellectual freedom in Quebec since the days of Laurier was a dark spot on the picture of the economic progress the province had made in the past decade. At least in one of our provinces, he said, the price of liberty of speech had gone up tremendously since the advent of the present war.

Other speakers at Friday's session were Maurice Le Montagne, professor of Economics at Laval University, Quebec City, and J. W. Buckley, vice-president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

Senator Bouchard said two groups existed in Quebec. The largest but less aggressive group favored the present form of government. The smaller group, "more active", tended to the creation of an independent states patterned on the totalitarian and racial form.

In other social fields— notably education, health, agriculture, industry and labor—progress has been marked in the Province of Quebec. The province was a pioneer in America in social legislation he said. The co-operative movement too has grown rapidly in the province.

Mr. Le Montagne said that Quebec's and Canada's post-war reconstruction could not be successful until economic democracy was achieved in Canada alongside political democracy.et At present Canadians living under "economic feudalism", he said.

Mr. Buckley told the conference labor should be given credit for knowledge and experience which increased production processes in many instances, contributing greatly to Canada's war.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

On a Widow's Remarriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am in my early thirties, and have been a widow for a number of years. Now I am to be married again.

1.—How should my announcements be worded? Should I announce the marriage ourselves, or should my daughter do this? Is a slightly formal style more correct, or should my own name appear in the announcement? And what would be the proper form for my name. . . with the initial?

2.—Should my stepfather give me away, or should I walk alone since I am a widow and do not want much fuss? I would prefer the latter.

3.—We are planning to have a small wedding, possibly in the library, and a small reception afterward for about twenty-five guests. Is it permissible to announce that should the reception be held in a public room or in the home of either or her family provide the luncheon or dinner, whichever the case may be, and also the cocktails, and champagne, should there be any? In other words, if guests order additional drinks without specific invitation from us, should we allow the check? I am asking this because we will not be present, having left by after the dinner, and I would not like to feel that I was responsible to leave a blank check to cover additional beverages.

E. N.

1.—If you and your stepfather are living together, Mother, the best form would be for him and your self to announce your marriage. Such announcements (omit the "s") are usually worded: Mr. and Mrs. John Paul Roberts announce the marriage of their daughter

Elizabeth Smith Norton

(Or, if you prefer, "announce the marriage of Mrs. Roberts's daughter".)

2.—This depends on your preference. Should you feel that ceremony may escort you, and, as the proper time in the ceremony, your father may give you in marriage.

3.—Yes, the bride or her family may for the reception in the home, whatever its type. And when the bride is host, she has the instances you outline, the payment of all beverages ordered by the guests after the couple have departed is always a problem! It's socially impossible for the bride's parents, mother or whoever is in charge of the party not to have additional drinks charged; and it's certainly unfair to expect the guests each to blanche to charge their drinks. If your mother and your stepfather are giving the reception after you have left, perhaps they can undertake to have a blank check to leave rather soon on their way. This, hosts have found out, is really the only answer to this problem of paying for drinks after the party. In any event, you definitely should not have a blank cheque. . . . Arrange with the hall still sent to you after the reception.

The Fruit Cocktail

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Should a fruit cocktail be eaten with a teaspoon, or with a fork, as in so-called oyster fork?

Marie

A fruit cocktail should be eaten with a teaspoon, more convenient for the fruit itself, and necessary to sip the delicious juice. Special forks are used for seafood cocktails; oyster, shrimp, crabmeat, lobster, and so forth.

The Marry-Go-Round

The Married Life

When what seems to be a perfect love-affair ends in a split, it is because an ideal pyramite has turned out to be a flop as a help-mate.

When a man gives up one girl for the love of another, he can't get her back; but when he deserts her for love of novelty or adventure, he is the butterfly type that can never be pinned down until he's dead.

So the Government has relaxed the rules for the making of can-opers! Oh well, thousands of jokes have been written poked at the "can-opener's wife"; but you never hear of husband carrying tinopeners hidden around in their pockets in these days of scientific cooking. Any young wife could turn out a meal in twenty minutes, which contains less beef and sugar but more vitamins and nutrition than that over which husband-mother toiled for two hours. Hail to the can-opener!

Slenderness a Good-looks Essential.

It is the desire of every girl and woman to own a pretty figure in the beauty parade. What are the requirements? Bones of perfect proportion, not too large and limbs are of harmonious measurements; firm, slender, beautifully sculptured, which means that the breasts are neither too high and firm, thus of graceful mold. A pleasing shape is sometimes an inheritance; some women come by it naturally. Many are inclined to take on weight, but has to contend with conditions by diligent regard for diet and by making exercise a daily habit.

Fifty years ago the average woman of thirty had either gone to seed or hippy. Now a woman of fifty who has taken good care of herself, has been consulting a doctor with Miss Hygeia, can sport a figure as slim, young and lovely as that of her daughter. We are learning to be about the laws of health—nutrition, exercise, relaxation, restful sleep. They not only keep the figure shapely, but they have a direct influence on hair, teeth, complexion, and indirectly on the disposition.

The simple styles of this particular year favor the well-formed carriers. Since girls went into uniforms, the tailored suit has enjoyed a big popularity. The skimpy girl does not put up a good front for a blazer, skirt and blouse, as it is tailored by the cross line between jacket and skirt. To wear it successfully, one must be of normal weight and proportions.

Fashion Flashes

NO DEARTH of smart and useful bags this autumn. Black suede is still a very pretty bag detailed with a large closing flap that, when open, reveals a big square mirror. The flap is framed in twisted gilt cord. Handles are of black suede.

Also arguing about the flattering qualities of the new hat. Smart, elegant-looking hat of emerald green velours trimmed with green velveteen. It is called the "Jockey" model, being black glycerined ostrich fancy, and the colowebby veil is held by emerald green velvet bows.

With pleasure it is noted that many designers have produced suits with an eye to the maturely women who just wants clothes that have a clean, tailored look. Grey worsted with grey and white stripe is used for a suit with a tunic-length jacket, worn with cardigan neckline. The stripes are used horizontally for the yoke and the deep pockets on the jacket. Black red on either side.

Navy blue has a casual look revals that hats have more trimming than in many years past. Just a simple little sailor model is caught draped and swathed pink tulle and finished with a green and white bows in gray, fuschia and black.

A fresh idea for jewelry used a year right through the day—almost every girl has a green and grey jersey outfrock fastened all the day down with green glass buttons and with a belt to set them off. Green is the fashion.

Novelty dyes lend additional interest to some of the new fur coats. Skunk, dyed to a perfect facsimile of silver muskrat, is used for a great coat made with deep, L-shaped border and wide sleeves.

MIGHTY SPIDERS

Natives of New Guinea twist large spider webs together and use them as fish nets.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Life With Aunt Virgie

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"People like you who write about making the best of marriage and how to live with in-laws, and dwelt upon the menace of a step-aunt, 'ft years old.

"Well, I announced my engagement to friends—some in horror, some laughing, and some in genuine friendship urged me to stick. Only Aunt Hetes believed it married Aunt Virgie. Owing to certain circumstances, which developed after my husband's family, he was brought up by this old lady who is no blood relation. She has been a widow for years, has ruled his every thought, word and deed, and first marriage, 'till the present time, when he's 40 years of age. I'd been a widow for nine years when I married him, fortunately had no children to add to my second matrimonial complication.

Aunt Virgie is very well-to-do and my husband has lost my respect by living entirely on the strength of her inheritance at her death. His two children who live in the same city are cringing to this old woman whom secretly they hate.

English Woman in London Branch of Bank of Montreal Has Made Many Friendships During 28 Years at Post

(By MARGARET ECKER)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 26. (CP)—Mailman for thousands of Canadian troops in Britain, is a little, twinkling middle-aged English woman whose post is a wire cage in the Bank of Montreal at Waterloo Place, London.

Countless Canadian visitors to England, pre-war, as tourists, students, Rhodes scholars and Hopkinson, as one of their foremost friends in the big, strange confusion that is London.

But Miss Hopkinson, perched on a long-legged stool at the cage, can see over her counter protests: "I have not time for that now." Or, "I like Canadians as I would like to have, and now they are here, nothing to it."

She is leaving the Bank of Montreal after 28 years of service and retiring to a cottage in Surrey.

"I've made so many friends here," she said wistfully, looking across the bank where Canadian men and women in khaki in turn were cashing cheques, depositing money and reading letters. "Canadians are so nice, I wish I could thank them for making my life so interesting."

An R.C.A.F. sergeant came up to her cage, and she greeted him with a smile. "I've a letter for you today," she said. "How did you enjoy that show I told you about?"

"It was swell," said the sergeant as he picked up the letter with the Canadian crest on it. "Thanks for looking after me".

The Personal Touch.

A Canadian lieutenant was next, and Miss Hopkinson didn't have to look into a ledger.

"Sorry, there's nothing new today", she told him. "How is your sister? She's been posted up north, hasn't she?"

"A Londoner can do a lot to help Canadians," she went on, when he had left. "I'm afraid most people haven't much time or patience these days, or I'd try to do what I can for the Canadians over here.

"When It's maximum effort you find almost everyone at the bomb dump."—Ricky, R.C.A.F. Overseas.

"I help them find a hotel, when I can. I tell them what shows are good, and the best way to get trains to Scotland—bound a church and a clergyman and that sort of thing". T. E. Roberts, the bank's assistant manager, explained that Miss Hopkinson has made the job a personal one. "She's never lost the personal touch. It's not a business atmosphere."

Miss Hopkinson has handed over mail that has linked Canadians with home for 30 years.

"I made some wonderful friends before the war," she said. "A great many Canadians came to see me every time they came to London, and now some of the same ones are back in uniform.

OTHER BALKAN

Moscow is believed fully informed of the armistice terms forwarded to Sofia. The terms were not disclosed, but it was believed that, besides demanding unconditional surrender, they called upon Bulgaria to give up all territories acquired in the war and turn over to the Allies all facilities needed against Germany. The latter presumably includes right of passage for Allied troops.

Neutrality Not Accepted.

There seemed little possibility that either London or Washington would be satisfied with the position of "complete neutrality" Bulgaria seeks.

"Bulgaria, with its record of greed and guilt, cannot slide gently into neutrality", said The Times of London, and other papers expressed similar sentiments.

Reports from Moscow said the Germans were doing their best to keep weakening Hungary in line by rushing defence construction workers to her borders, the Free Hungarian Council in London urged Hungarians to overthrow the present government and turn against the Germans.

There also were reports indicating Finland might be taking steps to break with the Nazis. One unconfirmed dispatch from Stockholm said Juho Paasikivi, Finnish negotiator, was in Moscow seeking terms.

northern French coast.

The 15th army lacks a single fully armored division and it is estimated there are probably not more than 15 enemy divisions east of the Seine and north of Paris.

Ready to Go Into Action.

Masses of Allied armor and infantry are ready to go into action against this last remaining German force standing between them and the Rhine. The Germans are expected to attempt a stand along the Somme and Marne rivers but it is considered unlikely they can hold the Allies there for any length of time.

Canadian bridgeheads were established across the Seine during the week at Pont De L'Arche and near Elbeuf, seven miles west. Medium artillery is lined up south of the river for use in case of heavy opposition. But so far the German rear-guard opposition has been light.

Seen Accelerated.

Storm boats took a considerable force of western Canada infantry across the river at Elbeuf, assisted with jeeps and anti-tank guns. Movement of men and material across the Seine will be accelerated once Royal Canadian Engineers have laid bridges.

In their precipitate flight from Normandy, the retreating Germans left masses of equipment. The approaches to the Seine are strewn with the wreckage of enemy tanks, self-propelled vehicles, guns and cars. In the Domaille forest south of Pont De L'Arche they abandoned a huge supply dump.

It was officially announced Sunday that the 3rd Canadian Armored Brigade has participated in the fighting in Normandy almost continuously since D-day. This announcement followed disclosure Saturday that the 4th Armored Division has been in action.

TRANSFER 2,500 WORKERS

Ottawa, Aug. 28—(CP)—To meet the shortage of harvest labor in Western Canada the Labor Department has arranged for the transfer of 2,500 workers from Ontario and Quebec, but "in spite of tapping all sources" the Labor situation in the heavy prairie harvest is "very serious," Labor Minister Mitchell said here Saturday.

JAPS EVACUATE MANILA

London, Aug. 28 (CP)—The German agency D.N.B., in a broadcast of Tokyo dispatches, said yesterday "the town of Manila is being evacuated" but the context of the broadcast indicated the evacuation was limited to civilians unnecessary to strictly necessary functions of the Philippine capital. Japanese fear of air attack apparently prompted the measure.

Parents Informed Of Fine Work Done by Son

It's not often that a major of a military unit takes time out from action on the fighting front to write parents of his unit members assuring that their sons are in the best of health, but apparently Major J. P. Peterson of the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders is an exception in this respect.

In action with the British Western Expeditionary Force in Normandy, since D-Day, Major Peterson recently wrote to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Campbell of Cox Hill, assuring them of the splendid job their son, Pte. Gerald Campbell, has been doing as a stretcher bearer and informing them that he was sending their son out for a rest period.

"I want to tell you just what kind of a job your son has been doing," wrote the major in his letter. "As you know he is a stretcher bearer and first aid man with his unit. I just can't find words to tell you what a magnificent job he has been doing."

"He and a pal of his, Frank Wheeler, have shown themselves to be just about the finest soldiers it is possible to imagine. Their job is calling for considerable bravery and complete coolness under fire. And when I tell you that Gerald has done an outstanding job since D-Day you will know you have a son of whom you can be proud. Personally I am very fond of him and am glad that he is with us. I have mentioned him in dispatches for his bravery, skill and coolness."

I hope this letter is not unwelcome, but I wanted you to know what a fine soldier Gerald is, and that he is well and happy."

Sincerely
Major J. Peterson.

Maj.-Gen. Hertzberg, R.M.C. Commandant, Retires on Sept. 3

Ottawa, Aug. 28 —(CP)— Maj.-Gen. H. F. H. Hertzberg of Toronto, commandant of Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont., will relinquish his post Sept. 3 when he reaches his 60th birthday, Defence Headquarters announced Sunday night. His first will proceed on leave, pending retirement from the army.

Gen. Hertzberg, appointed commandant of R. M. C. July 6, 1940, will be succeeded by Brig. D. C. Cunningham, Kingston, who was awarded the Distinguished Service Order for devotion to duty and coolness under fire during the raid on Dieppe in 1942.

Gen. Hertzberg is a member of a family distinguished in Canadian military and engineering circles. His brother the late Maj.-Gen. C. J. Hertzberg died on active service in India about a year ago. Both had served extensively in the First Great War and held senior appointments in the present war.

Gen. Hertzberg began his military career in January, 1900, when he received a commission as Lieutenant in the Canadian militia. He served throughout the last war with the engineers, being awarded the Military Cross, and the Distinguished Service Order. He was made a commander of the order of St. Michael and St. George.

He commanded the 1st Canadian Divisional Engineers, and from June, 1918, until March, 1919, commanded the 3rd Engineer Brigade, with rank of Colonel in July 1918; brigadier in January, 1934, and Major-General in December, 1938.

HUSBAND MAKES APPEAL

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)— As the search for the stranger-slayer of blond Mrs. Phyllis Newmark entered its third day, her husband appealed yesterday to an unidentified man, the last known person to be seen with his wife, "to come forward and help us."

The woman's body was found Friday in a clump of bushes on the ground of the American Museum of Natural History.

42 TONS DROPPED

Pearl Harbor, Aug. 26 (CP)— United States heavy bombers dropped 42 tons of bombs Friday on two airfields and other military installations on Two Jima on the Volcano Islands, Pacific fleet headquarters announced here last night. Truk and Yap Islands also were bombed.

NEW FRENCH GOVT.

Thurs the Supreme Allied General told civilians Parisians: "I am glad to come here to pay the tribute of the Allied forces to the indomitable spirit of Paris."

With him were Air Chief Marshal Tedder, Deputy Supreme Commander, Lt.-Gen. Bradley, commander of the U. S. First Army group; Lt.-Gen. Koenig, commander of the French Forces of the Interior; Brig.-Gen. Ledoux, commander of the French 2nd Armored Division, and Maj.-Gen. Barrow, U. S. 9th Corps Commander.

Gen. Eisenhower wanted Gen. Montgomery, Lt.-Gen. Crerar and Gen. de Gaulle to participate in the parade, but duty prevented their appearance.

German planes bombed Paris' suburbs Saturday night, and early yesterday the skies were aglow from the light of fires. The death toll was placed at 110, with 719 persons injured.

Germans Sent Over.

When the raiders came over, people were still in the streets celebrating, despite the battle which broke out Saturday afternoon when roof-top snipers started firing during the victory parade for Gen. de Gaulle.

Thousands of Parisians were thrown into panic as the parade broke up in wild flurries of gunfire along the foot-mile line of march. Several spectators were killed and dozens were wounded as the shooting spread, a short time after Gen. de Gaulle had aped into the Arc de Triomphe at the 45-mile-an-hour clip.

French patriots in the parade fired at roof tops from which French Fascist militia had sniped at them. Soon thousands of men of the French forces of the interior joined in the fighting, which extended rapidly throughout Paris.

Gen. de Gaulle's victory address was postponed.

33 Ways to Save

1 Clean Your Furnace

Have your furnace thoroughly cleaned before lighting the fire. Soot should be removed from the heating surfaces. Chimney and smoke pipes also should be cleaned. When burning Soft Coal, furnace should be cleaned every week. A soot deposit 1/4" results in a one-third waste.

2 Keep Your Furnace in Good Condition

Badly fitting doors and cracks allow air to enter where it is not wanted and either burn your fuel too fast or cool off the heated combustion. Refit the doors, cleanouts and dampers, and fill cracks with furnace cement.

3 Use Your Fireplace in Spring and Fall

Use your fireplace, if you have one, instead of lighting the furnace during Spring and Fall. It will take the chill off the house and shorten your furnace heating season. Close damper when fireplace is not in use.

4 Caulk Window and Door Frames

Many hardware stores rent caulking guns. For small cost you can save fuel by caulking the cracks between the brickwork and the window or door frames.

5 Use Storm Windows

By employing storm windows you can save much of your fuel. To be effective they should fit snugly. Put them up early.

6 Weatherstrip Doors and Windows

If your windows open too easily, use weatherstripping. Paper, rags, or cheap cotton batting can be used if regular weatherstripping is not available.

7 Seal Chimney Leaks

Seal all heat leaks in the heating system and the smoke pipe connection with the chimney. A little stove cement will do the trick.

8 Repair Insulation

Insulation on hot water and steam pipes and boiler should be repaired to prevent heat loss in basement.

9 Take Care of Hot Water Tank

An insulating jacket on your hot water tank will save heat. At frequent intervals drain off any accumulation of sludge through the tap provided.

10 Don't Let Taps Leak

Replace washers on taps when they leak. Use hot water sparingly.

there were no aeroplanes . . .

But now . . .

everybody does rush, and dad and the children have to catch street cars and trains and buses in the morning, and most of us have got into a very bad habit . . . we eat skimpy breakfasts . . .

So try serving big luscious bowls of Robin Hood Porridge. Tastes so good the kids will lick 'em clean. And they'll get the proteins and minerals children need.

WATSON PRACTICES FOR MONAHAN

After Jerry Monahan, the former Masked Marvel, came out of hibernation he immediately began planning new methods of wrestling attack and recently perfected what he referred to as the "Whipper Belt", which he hopes to apply with success against "Whipper Billy" Watson, the ladies' favorite, at the Rome Arena on Wednesday night. New Waterford has a few pet "whip holds" of his own, which brought him much fame in his mid-career. "The Whipper", but "Irish Jerry" says no man has ever withstood his new "neck whip" hold. Well, we'll see. To add color to this show Promoter Frank Tunney imported one Jack Kennedy all of the way from Georgia to battle that mad Mexican, Pedro Martinez, who has no ring acreage. TAM O'SHANTER TOURNEY WASHED OUT ON SUNDAY

Byron Nelson and Jug McSpaden Are First and Second in Contest.

PTE. WHITE THIRD

Chicago, Aug. 28 — (AP) — The $40,000 all-American golf show, the 18-hole finale washed out by an all-day rain yesterday, was set to resume at the Tam O'Shanter course today barring additional rain.

Promoter George May had cut out an anticipated attendance of 40,000 yesterday but he wasn't unprepared for the downpour—he had $10,000 in rain insurance, only $190 short of the first prize money in the 72-hole open tournament.

Byron Nelson, the lad from Toledo, O., shooter, expected to take care of that $10,000 ($13,462 in war bonds) top money today. He held a two-stroke lead with a 211 score at the 54-hole mark. Although Lord Byron wandered over par by a stroke in the final round Thursday his front position was undisturbed as Harold (Jug) McSpaden, also prepared for the downpour, had the $10,000 in rain insurance, only $190 short of the first prize money in the 72-hole open tournament.

Pte. Buck White of Greenwood, Miss., who lost to McSpaden in a 1943 playoff, pulled into a deadlock with Jug by pounding out a 69 Saturday.

Ken Hellemann of St. Louis led the amateurs into the final round of their championship match with 218, a stroke in front of Earl Christiansen of Miami, Fla. Billy Maxwell, Hicks of Hollywood, Calif., had a two-stroke advantage in the Women's division.

BATA BOMBERS DEFEAT TWEED

Blasting out a flock of runs in the early innings to establish a long lead, Bata "Bombers" went one game closer to the Inter-Intermediate "C" Eastern Ontario finals at Tweed Saturday evening when they came home on the long end of a decisive 16-3 score. The second game of the series will be at Bata on Wednesday evening.

With the Bata hitting prowess coming well to the fore to blast two Tweed hurlers, the batsmen also found the range on the ball to keep the home-towners off the score sheet until the last two innings. Jack Cuff, former Toronto softball hurler, curveballed the northern leaguers into submission, while Bata collected a long list of home runs and other extra base knocks off Tweed's ace hurler Cronin. Cuff got relief support from Armand rules limiting hits to short right and left fields to two bases, due to wind conditions, at honest down, it was stated.

Winner of the Tweed-Bata series will go right into the provincial C.A.S.A. finals against the winners in Western Ontario.

Bewildered St. Louis Browns RiseFromNear-KnockoutBlow To Earn Draw With Detroit

Limp Out of Motor City With. Lead. Cut. to 3½ Games

RED SOX TIE FOR THIRD

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Beaten almost to their knees, the bewildered St. Louis Browns rose from a near-knockout blow yesterday to stay out a draw.

Reeling from a 6-3 setback by Detroit Tigers for their fourth loss in a row and their ninth setback in the last 13 games, the Browns recovered their equilibrium to pound out a 17-4 nightcap victory over the Tigers.

The split enabled the "American League pace-setters to retain their 3 1/2- game lead over the second-place New York Yankees, who got no better than split with Washington Senators.

Boston Red Sox moved into a tie for third by a double victory over Philadelphia Athletics.

The Tigers must uncover another hurler to go with Hal Newhouser and Dizzy Trout. Newhouser gained his 21st victory before a Sunday crowd of 18,000 and moved off the mound, yesterday (though he was kicked for 13 hits, 9 coming in the Tigers pounced on Bob Muncrief for four runs in the ninth to win.

The Browns came to life in the nightcap, when the Tiger hurlers for six runs in each of the second and third innings and four in the seventh.

Yanks Miss Opportunity

The Yankees missed an opportunity to gain a full game on the Browns when they dropped the second game, 5-4, after winning the opener from the Senators 10-2. The nightcap win by Wilfred Lefebvre with two out and the bases loaded scored the winning run in the ninth. George Stirnweiss, Yankees' leading hitter, was stopped after hitting for 17 straight contests.

The Red Sox double win over the Athletics, 6-1 and 7-2, ended a five-game losing streak. Bob Johnson passed the Red Sox with two hits, three in the second game.

For the first time this season, St. Louis Cardinals failed to win at least one game on a Sunday, when they dropped the opener 14-6 to Pittsburgh Pirates and tied the second 1-1 in 10 innings, halted by darkness.

Mel Ott hit two homers as New York Giants won from Brooklyn Dodgers, 8-1 and 4-2, to increase their fourth-place lead over Chicago Cubs to 1 1/5 games. Philadelphia and Boston Braves split, the Phillies winning the opener 8-5 and the Braves taking the nightcap 4-3.

ORIOLES ON TOP

By the Associated Press

Howie Moss, Baltimore Orioles' star hitter, is just plain poison to Jersey City Giants. He really beat the Jersies yesterday when he blasted a three-run home run in the last of the seventh to change what looked like a 2-0 defeat into a 3-3 victory. The Orioles swept the twin bill, winning the first 13-2.

Howis was sold to the Orioles by the Little Giants last season.

The Birds raked Cliff Melton and Bob Henry for 10 hits in the opener.

The Orioles now enjoy a 2 1-2-game advantage over the second-place Newark Bears.

Buffalo Bisons could gain was an even break with Syracuse Chiefs, winning the first 8-6 and dropping the nightcap, 3-2. Ed Marlcan, one of three Bear pitchers in the opener, and Dewey Wolfgang were the two winning pitchers.

Buffalo fans were treated to a pair of tasty pitching jobs as Walter Wilson won his 17th in the first game with a four-hitter, racked up his sixth shutout in the finale, 3-0, against Toronto.

Montreal and Rochester split a pair of one-run decisions, the Royals winning the opener 3-2, the Royals the afterpiece, 2-1.

Toronto, Aug. 28 — (CP) — Maybe results of that all-star baseball game in Toronto won't show immediately. But it's going to mean a great deal in good will between the amateurs and professionals in the Queen City, and won't do the game a particle of harm.

It was the first time in more than 30 years the pures and the pads met on the diamond in Toronto, and though the amateurs took a beating, that was only to be expected. The idea wasn't to see if the amateurs could beat their salaried colleagues, but to bring the two groups together on the field of fellowship, etc., and raise a little more interest in amateur baseball sport. That latter it did successfully.

Other benefits will be seen in the future when the big brother professional club probably will be able to look to the sandlots for replacements, developed by the encouragement and interest shown in their doings in past years.

Comeback?

Dude Podan crown prince of Ontario jockeys, is rumored to be planning a comeback in the truck warfares. Dude hung up his riding togs at the end of the last year's racing season, and said he was through for good. Now he's getting confined his activities to galloping gee-gees the exercise pastime, and it just plumb got him. 'Tis said he has applied for permission to ride again.

Incidentally:

Just to show you're never too old to become a champion, Newt Byers finally captured the Saskatchewan veteran golfers championship at the age of 65 . . . It's no wonder the New York State Boxing Commission refused Katie Jenkins a second's licence. ALEMITES EVEN BALL SERIES WITH BELLEVILLE JRS.

Ernie Smith, Former C.O.D.L. Hurler, Fans Eight in Winning 11-8

Alemite crewed masters with the Belleville juniors in an exhibition baseball game played at the Alemite field yesterday afternoon. Last week the Juniors trounced the home team 11 to 5, but yesterday Ernie Smith's fast ball was bopping through with the much zip for the kids as the Alemites turned the tables on the Juniors to win 11 to 8. Now the teams are meeting in a third game to be played at the Alemite Field on Wednesday evening as a twilight fixture.

Sparked by the return to the game as an active player, the Alemite nine played stronger and hit the ball better when Art Young took a turn at first base for the "head-coaches". The winners got off to a rousing start in the initial frame when they batted four runs across the plate. They never to be headed. Strangely enough the first two batters for the Alemites nines walked and subsequently scored but Alemite got three additional runs in their half of the first, while the Juniors scored but one. Alemites scored three more in the fifth and added runs in every following inning until they racked up eleven. The batting order was according to the draw received by Secretary Keith Schreiber. Increased crowds are taking in the baseball games at the Alemite Field such Sunday.....Yesterday Ernie Smith's fireball was too good for the Juniors, who lost 11 to 8. Manager Ivan Hall is going to try a twilight game Wednesday evening at the Alemite Field, which Hall has been nearly scraped and wrecked until it looks like a ball field.....Ile it's baseball at 6.30 p.m. Wednesday, in case you're interested..... The fans can take in the game and be down town in time to watch Jerry Monahan and Billie Watson try to choke each other at the Rome Arena.

Softball Round-up.

This evening Johnny Boyle's Junior kids are playing the return fixture C.O.D.L. game versus "Dr. Clapper's Rankings" at Bridge-street.....The local juniors won the first game of the series 8 to 2, but still have a tough game on their hands tonight.....Skipper Johnny Boyle announced at noon he would start Bob Bunton against Clapper's crowd at Hastings.....Here at home the league game scheduled is a third and final tussle between the Mountain Dew and Bakelite nines, and the Bakelites, providing the Bombevettes will be nurses their usual "C" form. The Bata "Bombers", 1943 finalists in the Intermediate "C" series, are home for a real lickin' by the Bakelites after eliminating Napanee in straight games. The Bombers journeyed to Tweed Saturday to trounce the home team, but wound something like 16 to 3 so it looks very much as though the Bombers will take all of the Inter-Intermediate "C" softball marbles in the east again.

Remember When.

PEARO Numi, great Finnish middle distance runner, was disbarred from open competition for life by the International Amateur Federation Congress, at Stockholm, Sweden, ten years ago today. He was allowed to compete in his native Finland only, where he was cleared of charges of accepting monies beyond expenses on a tour.

Wanna Smoke?

Sure we all like the odd drag on a cigarette and it's much easier to get over here in Canada than on the beachheads of Italy or Normandy, or even right in France these days. However, we can all help send good Canadian cigarettes to Belleville boys overseas if we only proceed to assure helping this worthwhile cause a twilight fixture next Saturday night's Kinsmen dance at the Park Pavilion. Proceeds from proceeds is being given to the Kinsmen "fag fund" to send cigarettes to Belleville boys serving overseas. You can enjoy a dance as well as helping provide fags for our boys.

Agree on Umpires.

After considerable wrangling, that is customary whenever Belleville and Kingston are engaged in softball playdowns, the Kingston Ordnance and Belleville SACO "Marines" finally agreed on the same two umpires who officiated in the first game at Kingston, which means Red Townsend of Belleville will be calling balls and strikes in their third and final meeting between these two strong clubs this morning evening here with "Banger" Jordan, former Trenton and Kingston player, calling 'em on the bases. Both clubs agreed these two arbiters did a fine job last week in Kingston and naturally they were re-engaged for tomorrow's go-off.

Reviewing the Ordnance-Marine game you'll find the Kingston "Soldiers" failed to score from the second inning in, while Red Peoples' Marines had to battle an uphill fight and come from behind to win the hard way. They had to be up to all old Belleville custom, which thrills the fans to say the least, when winning the hard way is nerve wracking on the pitcher, so let's hope the locals reverse matters Tuesday night for a change.

Around the Town.

According to the Ontario Provincial Women's Softball Union draw Belleville has been drawn against Waterloo winners, who happen to be the Westclox team this year..... Russ Kitchen, who pitched a lot of good baseball for the Pests a decade or so ago, is president of the Peterboro Ladies' Softball League..... The Provincial ladies' draw sends Belleville to Peterboro on Wednesday with the proposed second game here next Saturday afternoon..... In the event of a third game it will be played here on a twilight fixture next Saturday according to the draw received by Secretary Keith Schreiber..... Increased crowds are taking in the baseball games at the Alemite Field

ADMISSION 25c — GAME CALLED 6:15 SHARP

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 688

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A good magician makes the most of a good hand. Give him the most powerful bridge player his only a fair hand, available in support, and with them into places where they can do the most good.

An opening bid of two in a suit is a forcing-to-game signal. Because of this, there rarely need be a hand for that purpose. And the other opening of two is the no-trump should not be used to show no tricks.

To use an opening of two no-trump as a signal, where would it be most useful? Surely not to show a five trick hand, because an opening bid of one is used to show that. To make a game in no-trump takes nine tricks. With three tricks, partner would respond by a bid of one. So, an opening of two no-trump should not be used to show no tricks.

A two-to-a-suit opening requires partner to bid with no tricks. An opening of one asks partner to bid with three tricks. So, what conclusion does that make you come to? Really you don't, as a two-no-trump opening should ask partner to bid with one to two tricks. Therefore, a two no-trump opening should be a signal to show seven or eight no-trump tricks.

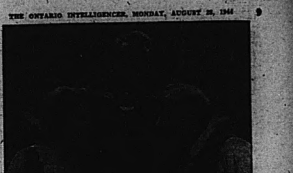
Maybe I have used too many words to tell you what I have been driving at. But I hope it has accomplished my purpose; to tell you what is shown by an opening bid of two no-trump; and why.

If you do, as I am sure you will, it is sufficient that you know what all those words add up to. It is for an opening bid of two no-trump shows a hand containing seven or eight no-trump tricks.

Take a look at this hand:

♠ K Q 6 4
♥ K Q 4
♦ A Q 6 4
♣ 5

This hand contains eight no-trump tricks; two aces, two kings, four queens. Open this hand with a bid of two no-trump.



If you know why, it gives you confidence in knowing when.

Jimmie Gleason Meets Match in Dorothy Ann Seacombe

Jimmie Gleason, who is currently playing in "Once Upon a Time" the Columbia whimsical picture starring Cary Grant and featuring the lovely Janet Blair at the McCarthy Theatre, is a veteran of both stage and screen. It thus comes without saying that he is an expert at detecting and counteracting any attempt at scene stealing. He must have been there, he admits, when even he has had his difficulties.

"One of the worst spots I was ever in to try and hold up my legitimate end of the laughs was in "Here Comes Mr. Jordan", Gleason opined on a Columbia sound stage during the filming of "Once Upon a Time." "And that wasn't because Bob Montgomery was trying to get what didn't belong to him," he quickly added. "It was just the nature of my role.

"If you remember, I played the manager of a deceased pug who came back to earth. Unless you've played with a ghost you won't know what I mean.

"Of course," mused Jimmie "when I think of it, it is much, much more than playing in a show with a dog or cat. You know what show stealers they are. But a guy has a chance with a dog, and through experience and a knowledge what to do to try and minimize their scene stealing."

Children are another form of scene stealers which Jimmie has encountered many times. When a cute baby comes on the screen (and we mean baby there's not much to be done about it. However, young actresses are another trial which defies even an actor's art.

Counteracting the audience effect of actresses trying to steal a scene by a judicious crossing of legs to expose a delicate knee cap is also an old story to Jimmie. But in "Once Upon a Time" he admitted that he had run into a real pusher. For the first time in his lengthy career he was in a show in which one of the principal roles was played by a caterpillar, a dancing caterpillar at that.

"Now what does a guy do to outshine the like of that?" asked Jimmie ingeniously. "Suppose it's a dame and gets the idea to show a little leg' act? I can't watch and counteract all those knees at once. It's sure got me worried. And don't fool yourself, brother, the rest of the cast feels the same way."

AT THE BELLE

"TWO GIRLS AND A SAILOR"

Check your cares at the box-office, folks, when you buy your tickets for "Two Girls and a Sailor," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's colorful, tuneful new musical hit at the Belle Theatre.

You'll find outstanding performances by three of the most popular youngsters on the screen today — Van Johnson, June Allyson and Gloria deHaven—all of whom seem headed straight for stardom, in this story of two sisters who fall in love with a mysterious "somebody" who quickly manages to fulfill all their hopes for a large scale canteen for servicemen and sends them orchids in the bargain. Johnson is the young sailor, and the Misses Allyson and DeHaven play the stage-dancing sister act.

You'll find comedy by Jimmy Durante—the "Schnozo" himself; and Gracie Allen whose One Finger Piano Concerto is a classic of its kind. You'll find songs by Lena Horne, Carlos Ramirez and Virginia O'Brien. You'll find serious music by Jose Iturbi and his sister, Amparo Navarro, and Albert Coates, the world-famous symphony conductor. And you'll delight in the manner in which Harry James and his Music Makers and Xavier Cugat and his orchestra "give out" with all kinds of songs you'll be humming again and again after you've left the theatre.

Under the astute direction of Richard Thorpe, and with the renowned production touch of Joseph Pasternak, "Two Girls and a Sailor" emerges as a delight to the eye and ear. It's sheer entertainment from start to finish. So make a date now to see "Two Girls and a Sailor."

A Pete Smith specialty "Home Made" and the latest Capitol Pictorial News Will be exhibited on the same program. The engagement ends on Tuesday.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Are These Our Parents?"

A forthright indictment of the older generation for at least a share in the blame for the current wave of child delinquency, is presented in "Are These Our Parents?" the highly interesting Monogram drama which comes next to the Capitol Theatre. The picture is filled with dramatic incidents and depicts a number of true-to-life situations which deserve the thoughtful consideration of many parents.

Helen Vinson is seen in the starring role, and gives a convincing portrayal of a mother whose social activities blind her to the gradual decay of looking out for her-fiend-strong daughter. Excellent performances throughout are contributed to a cast which includes Lyle Talbot as Miss Vinson's business adviser; Ivan Lebedeff, as a former lover; Noel Neill, as her daughter; Richard Byron as the latter's boy friend; Anthony Warde as the boy's bagpipe-playing father; Addison Richards, as a juvenile officer; and Emma Dunn and Ian Wolfe, as an old couple who befriend the youngsters when they are caught in murder attempt.

The story details with telling effect the various steps leading from innocent fun to criminal dangerous, and which finally reduce the young girl to the status of a hardened criminal.

For your further enjoyment the Capitol Theatre has selected three shorts of riotous comedy, Shemp Howard, Billy Gilbert, and "Slapsie Maxie" Rosenbloom in the hilarious comedy "3 of a Kind." See it and be guaranteed to make you laugh from start to finish.

Citation Which Won Lt. Douglas Chant The Military Cross

Following is the citation of Lieut. Douglas J. Chant, C.A.C. who was awarded the Military Cross recently for distinguished conduct in Italy:

"On the morning of the 26th May, "B" Squadron of the Governor-General's Horse Guards was ordered to protect the left flank of a Canadian Infantry Brigade during the attack on the Hitler Line. From the moment "B" Squadron crossed the start line, Lieut. Chant led his troop forward under continuous mortar and shell fire and over an exceedingly difficult terrain.

During the advance, the troop was held up by an 88 mm anti-tank gun and, finding it impossible to bring his own force to bear on the target, this officer directed the fire of one of our own 6P 106 mm guns onto it with the result that the enemy gun was destroyed shortly after. Lieut. Chant then moved his tank forward over a crest where he spotted and destroyed an enemy machine-gun post, billing six of the occupants and taking 13 others prisoners. At this same point he cleaned out a house of enemy who had been causing considerable trouble to our troops.

In the afternoon of the following day, "B" Squadron was placed in support of a Canadian Infantry Brigade. Lieut. Chant having crossed the river, immediately established a local liaison with the West Nova Scotia Regiment and then proceeded to clear out several houses which had slowed up considerably the advance of the Perth Regiment. On returning across the river this officer discovered that one of his tanks had broken down in the river bed. Although under shell fire he immediately arranged for the towing of this tank by his own and succeeded in recovering it.

Throughout this action, Lieut. Chant showed outstanding powers of leadership, initiative, determination, initiative and unselfish devotion to duty and his inspiration to his men and were largely responsible for the continued advance of the infantry whose flank he was protecting. Without his support the momentum of the infantry battalion attack would have been slowed up considerably and conceivably might have been stopped.

Woodsmen Tell Of Discovery Of Wrecked Plane

Chicoutimi, Que., Aug. 26.—(CP)—Credit for the wreckage of an aircraft discovered three weeks ago by two woodsmen continued today after the men, Arthur Tremblay, 38, and Roland Maltais, 30, both of Grands Fonds, Que., fond of camping across the plane in the forest around Lac des Aigles, 25 miles from the St. Lawrence River between St. Simeon and La Malbaie in Chicoutimi County.

Tremblay and Maltais brought back a piece of the wreckage and later turned it over to "officer personnel of the Air Force station at Bagotville, Que., who asked them to return to search for the plane.

They said they first discovered the plane Aug. 7 and two days later returned to the area but failed to locate the aircraft. Two trips were made later, this time with airmen from Bagotville, on Aug. 18 and 23 but still without result.

Tremblay and Maltais left the search party then but the airmen are continuing the hunt, accompanied by a fire warden, Ulysse Girard or St. Simeon." Tremblay and Maltais rested yesterday after the long search but expected to return shortly in another effort to locate the missing plane.

NELSON TARGET OF BLAST

Washington, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Chime-bound Donald M. Nelson was the target of a biting new blast at Congress instigated that when he returns he may not remain long in his chairmanship of the war production board.

The new attack, close on the heels of Charles E. Wilson's sharp criticisms when he resigned as executive vice chairman, was made by rubber director Bradley Dewey, saying that remarks Mr. Nelson made about the rubber program constituted "typical Washington sniping".

WOMEN OF BRITAIN KNIT FOR EUROPE

London, Aug. 26. (CP)—An urgent appeal has gone out to British women to help clothe the children of occupied Europe and the government is making available special supplies of wool and other material to facilitate the task.

Clothing factories whose labor is fully employed on direct war and essential home needs cannot meet the estimated demand and spare time help from women is asked. Women's organizations are undertaking to co-ordinate the effort.

The Truth about QUEBEC TEXTILE WAGES

Latest figures from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics on earnings in the cotton yarn and cloth industry are a clear and complete answer to irresponsible charges about Quebec textile wages. Dealing with per capita average weekly earnings paid on or about March 1 this year, the government statistics for this industry show that Quebec cotton workers get:

(1) More than the average Ontario cotton worker
(2) More than the average Maritime cotton worker
(3) More than the all-Canada average.

Dominion Textile Company wages paid at that date are higher than the Quebec average. The figures are:

CHAPTER 5

"Miss Randolph?"

My first impulse was to say exactly that. I was Hazel Randolph of the Kentucky Bullfinches and Washington she'd a great big pot o' pretty oh's it. It offset but I couldn't. Not with the desk clerks darting straight at me, and the colored doorman's eyes bugging out as if he were in the last throes of some violent thyroid disturbance.

I nodded. "I'm Letitia Randolph."

"Sergeant Roger Hornblow of Randolph Field is calling and is medically at the Keith Residence, Miss Randolph," the officer said, and still did not smile.

I suspect, I thought sickly, I'm suspect. "Did man thinks I murdered Pamela Keith!

"I'll be right along, officer," I said, and headed in the opposite direction with the definite object of getting Dad to stoops as a backstop for me.

"Stop this way please, Miss," the officer said.

I stopped.

Trailing along behind the cop like a disgraced kite, I entered the Keith drawing-room a long 'room, illuminated with theatrical subtlety from the heavy gold drapories to the exquisite Phillis Bottana rug. I saw that all of the dinner guests were scattered here and there, looking lost and separated from one another in that vast, luxurious environment. And yet I knew that the mysterious crime which had taken place behind the thick wood hedge such a short time before had bound them all together in a grim pact that no space could possibly eradicate.

Marvin and Elsie Bustace were sitting close together on a petit-point love seat. Marvin's face was almost as white as his waving hair, and Elsie looked far from "young-ish." Poor, sodden-faced Elsie who had clung to Pamela's apron-strings, even when she knew in her heart that Marvin and Pam were more than just about other. Pamela had been the one person who could introduce her to the right people.

And there was Doctor Wayne Courtney standing at the window, smoking a cigarette. Mr. Courtney and Gladys Newcomb sitting close together on the sofa, not talking, but sitting, looking stunned. Gladys' cool, blonde beauty was very, very beautiful. There is no word to describe Gladys's voluptuous charm. She simply has ample sort of female that commercial artists always choose for mattress advertisements. But there was something about Gladys' mouth I didn't like. It was thin, cruel, vindictive.

And I knew she loathed Pamela Keith, and had since Pam had married Howard Keith, years ago. Naturally Gladys' loathing had increased by leaps when Pamela had come along and taken Lake Cranmer away from her. You might hear up under the table talk of Miss Sam Iron, but, but when she does it again, it's hard to take. And looking at Gladys I wondered if she had taken it over-far after all murdered Pam!

Earle Pinse was lounging in a violently red chair, lost behind the smoke-screen of his pipe. I crossed in front of him, close enough to his chair alongside the south wall, sat down and tried to think. Someone had Peter Gibson gone? Had he been clubbed—repeated representative of the law bearing down on me, and taken it on the hard? Why? Didn't he have any oral hardware with brass-buttoned gentlemen?

Who was the murderer lurking in this room? Could the prowler have been a wounded Sommore Jones? Or powerful. . . well, the Countess? Indeed she might have mustered packed monstrously under her 210 pounds. But how could the prowler have been in want of these dinner guests? Still, when I'd gone upstairs to get my wrap I might have spent more time than I realized looking for my evening bag. Someone might have slipped out on the grounds ahead of me. Dinner was completed—when I'd come back down, Pamela was in the drawing-room.

Then I wondered if anyone had thought to notify Lake Cranmer of his fiancee's tragic death. Pamela had had a reservation on the midnight plane to to Lake. He was probably expecting her, waiting for her. If this hideous crime hadn't occured, Pam would have been in Philadelphia by now. Someone ought to notify Lake. I thought. . . so why not me? I told the officer what was on my mind, and presently I put in the call.

It was the hardest thing I'd ever done, telling Lake about Pamela.

"Oh, no, Letty," he said over the telephone and, though over a hundred miles separated us and it wasn't televised I was using, I could visualize, the disbelief in Lake's dark eyes, the sagging on his slender, handsome face. . .When I went back to my chair, I was feeling all over, and a little sick at heart.

I was grateful that Reginald was passing coffee, and when he got to me I spilled my cup and drained the hot liquid quickly. Then I asked for another cup and as Reginald poured it, I got a really good look at him. His pupils were dilated, and there was a muscle jerking tensely along the line of his jaw. I was still studying him as he moved on to Gladys Newcomb. His face changed subtly and I was as sure as I am that Hitler is doomed that Reginald was trying to give Gladys a message. He seemed to be trying to expect Gladys to say something to, but I had a feeling she couldn't help him in that moment for she just looked away from Reginald, her shoulders set, her face averted—and did not look up again.

Reginald left me before Elsie Bustace. Elsie was evidently quite nervous for she was fluffing the neckline of her dress and making way for some air-conditioning. Inadvertently however, this brought her bosoms interested Reginald—and instantly he was out the Reginald of the basement room with its Paris post-card.

Ah, new and chill thought shuttled back and forth through my head. Had the murder—and I was sure motivated by primitive passions? Had it been premeditated, backward through lost centuries. I saw Cro-Magnonish penis fighting their women around by their hair and smashing them over the head with those vicious looking clubs that cavemen wielded. Had Reginald, aroused by something Pamela had said or done, I clamped my hands together and tried unsuccessfully to shut out such hideous human retrogression.

"Miss Randolph!"

I almost dropped my coffee cup, and looked up, looking up had the face that was blazing down into my own.

"Sergeant Hornblower would like to see you in the library now, Miss Randolph," the officer said.

I put my cup on a small French commode and got up obediently. My legs felt like rubber-bands beneath me. In this drawing-room, lapsing sort of way I followed my guide into the pine-panelled library room where a giant in plainclothes sat behind a desk. Sergeant Roger Hornblower of the Washington, D. C. Homicide Squad! A great hulking bulk of a man with a round face, polished eyes like old mahogany, and a little rim of black hair circling his bonedome. As I walked slowly up to him, those eyes narrowed, and I saw a little flicker of interest or intensity in them.

"Miss Randolph?"

His voice wasn't actually loud. But in my feeble condition it seemed almost bellowing. My knees buckled and I sank to a chair. "Yes-s-s-s-s-s. I'm L-Letitia R-Randolph."

Sergeant Hornblower rose politely to his towering height as I wobbled uncertainly to him and shook hands with his great hand impersonally indicated.

"You discovered Mrs. Keith's body, did you not, Miss Randolph?"

"Ye-s-s-s-s."

"I will not shout it, please. Everything you can remember. It's often the small, inconsequential thing that leads us to the murderer, you know."

I didn't know. This was my first murder. I began concentrating. Profoundly. Wondering what to tell, what not to tell. Finally I started to speak and when I finished I sat back heavily in the chair and wiped my damp forehead. I was so tense when Sergeant Hornblower asked enormous thrust, I started as if someone had stuck the business end of a pin up under me.

"Say that again, Miss Randolph," he said, and his voice was disarming. "Now tell me. Do you know of anyone who might have wanted to murder Mrs. Keith?"

I thought fast, ever. Marvin Bustace? People had said Marvin was ga-ga about Pamela, but his afternoon I'd seen him looking at her as if he wanted to kill her! Elsie? Maybe. But Elsie was clinging to Pamela for social reasons—anyone else'd been fool to find out what was going on. Victor Curtis needed Pamela out of the way so he could marry Sandra. . . and Sandra the other way around. Doctor Wayne Courtney. Pamela's first husband, might be one of Pamela's former lovers and he'd returned to Washington after a fifteen-year absence, motto especially on old friend, but to murder Pam. Preposterous, possible. Gladys Newcomb. Well, she had plenty of reasons, all right. First Pamela took Richard Cranmer from her; and recently Pam had annexed Lake Cranmer. Reginald Weil, what was going on between Reginald and Gladys Newcomb? Had Gladys killed her book, but did she hate Pamela enough to murder her? And Earle Pinse? Pam hated him but did he hate her? Peter Gibson! He had materialized suddenly on the scene of the murder. That looked bad, all right. . . but was it really?

I wore my brain-cells down to a nub, thinking, and I made up my mind I would tell Sergeant Roger Hornblower nothing. Actually I didn't know anything, did I? And I reasoned that, if I send him back looking on a wrong scent, I might cause an innocent person to head for the hot seat. I didn't want to spend the rest of my life dodging Homblower's calls and wrestling with a sick conscience.

I shook my head slowly.

"No, Sergeant, I can't think of a soul who wanted to murder Pamela Keith."

Sergeant Hornblower was red, it seemed to me that noe of them could be guilty. I couldn't point a finger at a single real suspect, and I knew Sergeant Hornblower must be stumped, too.

Then Marvin Bustace and Elsie Bustace and Earle Pinse had started à bridge game right after dinner and had been hard at it when they'd heard me scream. Then there'd all been rushing out to find me standing beside Pamela's murdered body. Peter Gibson had been near the bridge table, reading the evening paper. Though all of them had been in the room for a few seconds or so, at one time or another, no one had been alone long enough to murder Pam. Only long enough to get a drink of water, powder a nose or sharpen a pencil. Gladys Newcomb said she'd been powdering her blond-gold roots and trying to nap off a headache. My screams had awakened her.

Sandra and Victor Curtis both swore they'd been in the country club all evening, never once out of the other's sight—and I'd felt sorry for them, thinking how Hornblower would check that out. Of course he would happen when he did.

Peter Gibson said he was staying at the Charlton-Arms hotel. He was in Washington on business, a New Yorker—and he'd been wandering around on the hotel grounds smoking, when he'd heard me scream.

Truthful tod Hornblower that he had been exhausted after his day's work, and with the debut and the dinner. So shortly after ten, turning over his duties to one of the armored brutes present, he had gone to his basement room to bed. . . and that's when Pamela Keith's body was found, however, was the only one who knew Pamela Keith knew the house and was, perhaps, the only person in Washington provided, of course, he wasn't the murderer!

Reginald threw some additional light on the case, however. He told Hornblower he'd been telephoning from Philadelphia around 9:30 and—as a result of Mrs. Keith's conversation with Mr. Cramer—Reginald's own telephone call he made a record, when the midnight plane. I remembered Lake's call, of course, and he'd phoned me, but the next thing Reginald said was news to me and had happened after I'd left.

There had been another call, just before o'clock. It was a man's voice, Reginald said. No, he could not remember the name. He'd before and, after he'd handed the telephone over to Mrs. Keith, he had gone back into the drawing-room to finish serving coffee. It was then that when Mrs. Keith left the house, but it was shortly after that ten o'clock that. He was going down to his basement room and it was when he noticed Mrs. Keith in the solarium door which leads to the patio. She had apparently been taking a breath of fresh air there, but wasn't surprised really to see her get out into the night. Yes, it was odd Mrs. Keith had gone out with no cloak since the night had been cold. Did she look frightened? He hadn't noticed.

TO BE CONTINUED.

The War Today—
Situation on Eastern Front Presents Great Possibilities

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

The great military trap continues to close with accelerated speed about the desperate Germans, crushing in toward the doomed Reich both from the freshly erupting Russian front and from the speed-hopping armored columns of the United Nations in the west.

The only question that remains is how long the already-beaten Nazis can stand off utter collapse. The Allies are rushing in an effort to turn the trick before the bad weather of late autumn arrives to impede offensives.

There are three Major Allied operations which are especially worth watching. These are the great northward turning movement growing out of the battle of the Seine and Paris, the sensational Russian drive into Romania, and the fresh assault against the Vistula line north of Warsaw by the Red army.

Allied supreme headquarters confirm that American troops east of Paris have swung northward and reached the Marne River—famous battlefield of two great wars. This means the Western Allies are well set to carry out a flanking movement against the Germans north of the Seine River and along the coast of the English Channel.

The Hitlerites must begin their great withdrawal northward toward Belgium and their own frontier quickly or face disaster for the already greatly weakened forces of their 15th army which is holding along the line of the Seine and guarding the channel coast opposite England. As a matter of fact, disaster hangs over them anyway, for in their retreat they cannot escape the eagle eye of the vast Allied air-fleet which will chop them to pieces by scores of thousands as they flee. Their chances of carrying out a successful rear-guard action to protect their retirement are growing more slim daily as the Allied position improves.

The situation in the eastern theatre presents momentous possibilities. The great Red drive into Romania has already smashed the defenses of the famous Ploesti gap which is the gateway into the rolling plains of the Danube basin. When the Muscovites broke through that gap they breached the whole Balkan Rear and made it untenable for the Germans to hold this great peninsula.

Equally important is word that the Russians again are smashing at the Vistula front north of Warsaw with the idea of flanking the Polish capital. This city is the anchor of this powerful defensive line to which the Nazis are clinging for dear life. When that Vistula line cracks, short order will have nothing to shield them from the Red storm.

R.C.A.F. Attacks Nazi Submarine In Bay of Biscay

Ottawa, Aug. 28. (CP)—The crew of "L for London", Wellington Bomber attached to the R.C.A.F., demon squadron of Coastal Command, attacked a German submarine in the Bay of Biscay recently and circled the area long after it had submerged but saw no trace of it, the R.C.A.F. announced.

WO. Jack Frase of Markham, Ont., wireless air gunner, jumped to the rear turret and scored repeated hits as the plane passed over the subs conning tower. His Fred 400 rifle.

The submarine's Red drive into Romania has already smashed the defenses of the famous Ploesti gap which is the gateway into the rolling plains of the Danube basin. When the Muscovites broke through that gap they breached the whole Balkan Rear and made it untenable for the Germans to hold this great peninsula.

Fear Possibility Of Rat Incursion

(By JAMES McCOOK)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Edmonton, Aug. 28. (CP)—When public health officials have nightmares these days it is rats from the prairie gopher which carries plague germs.

In such a meeting they see danger all Canada. The fear that it will occur spurs the Alberta health department, headed by Hon. W. W. Cross, in its campaign to keep rats from becoming established in Alberta. Nothing can be done about the gophers, native to the plains and flicking a carefree tail at man's best efforts to exterminate them.

John H. Brown, public health entomologist, said today that arrangements are being made for a complete survey to show what rats—if any—are in Alberta. From the Atlantic the rats have travelled as far west as Saskatchewan and they have slunk deep into British Columbia from the Pacific coast. But a limited survey undertaken recently by Alberta officials indicated the pests had failed to gain a foothold anywhere within the province's borders.

It is taken for granted that Alberta cannot be immune from the rat invasion any more than any other part of the world, but the reasons for keeping them out have unusual urgency.

Mr. Brown's travelling laboratory, kept moving over the Alberta prairie throughout the summer, has definitely areas in which gophers are afflicted with bubonic plague.

Given Wide Berth.

When plague-ridden gophers are found warning posters are set and limits of the area advertised. Residents of the district guide themselves accordingly and are careful not to touch gophers they shoot or poison. Because of the danger of infection, the bounty formerly paid by the province for gopher tails has been abandoned.

The gopher is an animal of the fields and does not seek contact with man. Rats are different. If they become established in Alberta they "are likely to pick up plague infection from gophers somewhere. And, equally likely, they will transmit the disease to man as they crawl about his possessions.

The check on gopher plague infection has been maintained for six years and Mr. Brown said the preventive service thus provided has been valuable in protecting the health of persons in the limited areas where diseased gophers have been found.

Deaths due to the plague have been few—only one has been reported in recent years—but the possibilities always have been alarming to health authorities. The plague comes in three forms, the worst the pneumonia type. That is the "Black Death", which has killed millions in the past.

Mr. Brown said educational work will be aided by a motion picture now being made by the government which is to show the danger of handling gophers and other rodents because of the disease they may carry.

Broader Export Markets Needed

A recent authoritative estimate shows that in the neighbourhood of 80% of the export business Canada is now doing belongs in the category of temporary, abnormal wartime trade, with about 20% in the category of normal and permanent trade. On this foundation of 20% Canada must rebuild the whole structure of her export trade for the future.

● It is clear therefore that Canada must broaden her export markets in peace time. Canada has always depended for her prosperity on export trade.

The war has merely made this truth clearer and more graphic.

Full employment and prosperity have been a by-product of our war effort. We could not have avoided a result so inevitable. We are utilizing that prosperity to achieve Victory.

But prosperity is an end in itself. After the war we must maintain it. That means a search for new export markets when those created by war have ceased to exist.

The Dominion Bank, one of the Chartered Banks of Canada, will continue to render the widest co-operation in furthering Canada's export trade after the war.

CHATEAU-THIERRY, SOISSONS FALL TO YANKS
PLOESTI OIL FIELDS IN SIGHT OF RUSSIANS

American Columns Only 100 Miles From the Border

Troops of 1st Canadian Army Within Sight of Rouen

By JAMES M. LONG
(AP War Correspondent)

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Aug. 29 (AP)—Driving deeper into American troops captured Chateau-Thierry and Soissons today in whirlwind advances which carried them near French soil where their fathers fought to within 70 miles of Belgium and 100 miles from the German frontier.

On the Seine northwest of Paris the Canadians smashed forward from Duclair to D'Aizier in two-day head over the river to within sight of Rouen, their objective of Aug. 31.

South of the Canadians' rapidly expanding bridgehead the British and American bridgeheads were welded into a solid front of 35 to 50 miles when the forces which crossed at Mantes and Vernon joined hands in assault front was pushed 11 miles north of the Seine, almost to the Route-Paris highway.

Near Forest of Compiegne.

One American column plunged 16 miles northeast of Soissons to Cuvergnon, These U. S. 3rd Army units were within 15 miles of the forest of Compiegne where the First Great War armistice was signed and where Hitler forced his terms on France in 1940. The straight-line distance is 70 miles north of this American force.

The junction of Soissons and Reims took place 10 miles east of Meaux. Crossing on bridges captured at La Ferte Sous Jouarre that force continued driving up-stream and across several others were reported to have reached Chateau-Thierry, 25 miles away, where American troops won a historic victory June 37, 1918.

The whole Allied 21st Army assault: ace east of Paris was developing today to within 20 miles of Epernay and Vitry—the back door to Verdun—and within 35 miles away from the First Great War siege citadel of Reims. It was a mop-up day in the Falaise gap and the scarred battlefields of some 30 years ago.

A Reuter's news agency dispatch from 3rd Army Headquarters said Vitry had been captured. This would put the Americans across the Marne-Rhine Canal 100 miles from Paris and a little more than 50 miles from the Belgian and German frontiers.

Slashing toward the Belgian border 75 miles away, other American units which reached Cuvergnon were 20 miles from Compiegne. Still others were 10 miles from Soissons.

Compiegne, 37 miles river which flows between these two cities links with the Aisne and the Aisne-Marne defensive chain in Northern France which, if the Germans could flank any stand Field Marshal von Kluge might hope to make on the Somme to save the already-menaced flying-bomb belt.

Canadians Closing Loops.

The clean-up of the last three German pockets south of the lower Seine seemed likely in a matter of hours as the Canadians pushed in tighter and Allied planes maintained day and night attacks against bomb, machine-gun and rocket-fire destruction over the attempts of the enemy to ferry his troops to safety.

Gen. Montgomery's jet flank gave no indication of bunching on in a swift follow-up of the German flight in disorder across the Seine and in greater disorder still to the Somme.

Some military observers said a steady push of the Canadians to the Seine seemingly was rousing Montgomery's forces to the makers of forming an overwhelming force before a breakout attack.

The threat to the Seine-Marne front east of Paris where the Germans still were unable to get any real force into action, enemy troops were reported in retreat over every flight north of the lower Seine suggesting that the Nazis were determined to exact their vengeance bombing allies to the last minute.

In Paris the last Nazi resistance was being mopped up in the northern and eastern suburbs. It was disclosed today that the clearing task was conducted by the American 5th Corps, including the 4th Infantry division and the French 2nd armored division.

The Americans' close-in attack on the great port of Brest at the tip of the Breton peninsula continued but here were no detailed reports on the extent of gains.

Chief Associated Press Staff First Correspondent in Paris

By HAL BOYLE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Bamboulitte, France, Aug. 29 (Delayed)—(AP)—Americans recovered Paris today.

I was privileged to be the first correspondent to enter the city.

"Paris," said Whitehead, immediately he was surrounded by a surging crowd of correspondents and photographers, "is unbelievable."

Whitehead answered as many as he could in a few seconds and then sat down at his typewriter.

In exactly 45 minutes, he pounded out a 1,500-word account of the capture of Paris. It was the first eyewitness story of one of the most historic days of the war.

(Whitehead's story reached Canada and the United States through normal commercial channels Friday morning.)

GERMAN TROOPS BEGIN MOVING OUT OF BULGARIA

Anglo-American Armistice Terms Received in Turkey for Relay

RUSSIA INFORMED

London, Aug. 36 (CP)—Reports that the Germans have started withdrawing all troops from peace-seeking Bulgaria coincided today with Istanbul dispatches suggesting that Anglo-American Armistice terms already have been communicated by Allied diplomats there for relay to Sofia.

The Moscow radio, quoting the Bulgarian news agency, said the Germans were beginning to move out of Bulgaria and asserted the withdrawal "would be completed within a few days."

"Disarming of German troops crossing the Bulgarian-Rumanian frontier is going on," the broadcast added.

Istanbul advices, meanwhile, told of a flurry of diplomatic activity, including an hour-long conference yesterday between the United States and British Ambassadors, Lawrence A. Steinhardt and Sir Hughs Knatchbull-Hugessen.

It was believed in Istanbul, these sources said, the ambassadors might have received from Washington and London the terms which will be offered Bulgaria. Yesterday the Allied armistice penetrating as far as Metz and Strasbourg had in consultation with the European advisory commission, would be ready for dispatch to Bulgaria within a few days.

Also apparently linked with the Bulgarian situation was the news that Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav M. Molotov had conferred in Sofia, P. N. Kirasnov, had arrived in Ankara yesterday. Stories relating to Kirasnov were quoted as saying Kirasnov was returning to Moscow, presumably to report.

Russia is not at war with Bulgaria, but has been kept informed by London and Washington of peace negotiations.

A Bulgarian domestic broadcast reported today by the United States Office of War Information said Germany has ordered the Bulgarian government had rescinded all anti-Jewish measures.

HOME OF KRUPP ARMAMENTWORKS AT ESSEN BLASTED

Rail, Road Transport From Seine Mouth To German Border Pounded by British

WEATHER SPOTTY

London, Aug. 29. (CP)—Sweeping over Northern France throughout the night, British Bomber Command Bombers blasted enemy rail and road transport from the mouth of the Seine to the German border in continuation of the Allies' remorseless attack to halt all movement between the Reich and the Western front.

Other squadrons, armed with "Tallboy" bombs, bullets to two-ton bombs, heaped new destruction on one of the last Seine crossing points at Nantes to Nazi remnants upstream from Rouen. Still other Mosquitoes blasted the Germans city of Essen, home of the Krupp armament works.

The weather continued spotty over France today but it was no worse than yesterday when more than 800 Americans, Canadian and British Germany rail, highway and river transport in five countries, Tedder announced.

It was disclosed meanwhile that the Allies have made full preparations for the air defence of Paris, which Hitler has proclaimed "open" between 25 to 30 German. Jubbs but has not been related whether the Germans have put into effect. Sunday night dropped only scattered bombs on the French capital but it was revealed, and the death toll of civilians in the Paris area yesterday was 17 with 45 others wounded.

Yesterday's attacks on the city's suburbs smaller in the estimation of 36 of its candidates yesterday on the eve of municipal elections. Returns available early today.

Election of 18 Progressive Conservatives in the remainder of seats in the 48 seat house was held today, while the C.C.F. group failed to gain election for any of 16 candidates it put into the field. The available returns pointed to about 29 of the C.C.F. standard bearers retaining their deposits.

F. C's Fail to Gain

The Liberals snatched seven seats that had gone into the Conservative column in the previous first vote, time election in 1940, in which the Liberals took 39 against 19 taken by the Conservatives. The standing at dissolution was Liberals 39, Progressive Conservatives 16, vacant 7.

The Progressive Conservatives, under Hugh Macklin, failed to gain a seat anywhere. They lost four in York, two in Geneva and one in Restigouche. The results in the other 41 seats were unchanged from the last election.

Thirteen of the province's 17 ridings many of which have three and four seats—fell fully into government column. The Progressive Conservatives carried four. There were no split results among the C.C.F. The Liberal candidates were in York, Kent, Victoria, Moncton City, Gloucester, Restigouche, Northumberland, Charlotte, Queens, Kings, Westmorland and Albert.

The Progressive Conservatives swung Saint John City, Saint John County, Carleton and Kings.

All contests were hotly contested re-election, with Premier Mc-Nair topping the list with 13 men on the York County, though the count was still incomplete there. Progressive Conservative Leader Mackay rolled up a majority of 1495 in Kings. In York Premier McNair's majority was 369 with 16 of 103 polls to be counted.

Leaders Vote Out:

C. C. F. Leader J. A. Magridge, in search of public office for the first time, was defeated in Saint John City, where the four C. C. F. candidates trailed four Progressive Conservatives and four Liberals. The four C. C. F. men in this riding made one of their best showings of the province.

In French-speaking Madawaska, Victoria and Restigouche counties, C. C. F. candidates beat out the Progressive Conservative and Liberal candidates, but Liberals—only riding where they accomplished this. Like the C. C. F. party Hugh Macklin, the leaders of the other two groups were leading their followers to the polls for the first time. Premier McNair, 55-year-old lawyer, who became government head, when Premier A. A. Dysart accepted a county judgeship in 1940, campaigned on the nine-year-old record of the Liberal Government and a 31-point manifesto outlining future policies.

Flt. Lt. Gordon Farquharson, Corbyville, Awarded D.F.C.

Veteran of the German aerial blitz of the island of Malta, and since D-Day assisting in the disruption of Nazi communications in France, Flight Lieutenant Gordon Farquharson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Farquharson of Corbyville, has been awarded the D. F. C. It has been announced by R. C. A. F. headquarters at Ottawa.

Mentioned frequently in war correspondents' news stories for his high prowess in shooting down German planes, the Corbyville fighter pilot has a credible list of enemy planes to his credit. He is with the City of Oshawa squadron.

Speaking with newspapermen today the tanned and rangy Canadian's modest account completely supplies what told of the award. He refused to discuss his exploits, but indicate to us that he was elated "for a decoration," she said.

Born in Corbyville, Flt. Lt. Farquharson enlisted in the R. C. A. F. four years ago at the age of 19. He went overseas more than three years ago and proceeded directly to Malta to assist in the defence of that island.

LIBERALS SWEEP INTO POWER IN NEW BRUNSWICK

Obtain 36 of the 48 Seats With Progressive Conservatives Winning 12

C.C.F. FAILS

Fredericton, Aug. 29. (CP)—Liberal forces were in New Brunswick's legislative assembly today with at least seven seats added to the result of general election polling that saw Premier McNair's government retain a majority of the legislature's voting number for the third time in the last nine years.

The new government party under Premier J. B. McNair, decisively out-scoring the Progressive Conservatives and C.C.F. and routing the C.C.F.'s first major try for office in the Province, obtained in election of 36 of its candidates yesterday on the basis of unofficial returns from returns available early today.

Election of 12 Progressive Conservatives in the remainder of seats in the 48 seat house was held today, while the C.C.F. group failed to gain election for any of 16 candidates it put into the field. The available returns pointed to about 29 of the C.C.F. standard bearers retaining their deposits.

F. C's Fail to Gain

The Liberals snatched seven seats that had gone into the Conservative column in the previous first vote, time election in 1940, in which the Liberals took 39 against 19 taken by the Conservatives. The standing at dissolution was Liberals 39, Progressive Conservatives 16, vacant 7.

The Progressive Conservatives, under Hugh Macklin, failed to gain a seat anywhere. They lost four in York, two in Geneva and one in Restigouche. The results in the other 41 seats were unchanged from the last voting.

Thirteen of the province's 17 ridings many of which have three and four seats—fell fully into government column. The Progressive Conservatives carried four. There were no split results among the C.C.F. The Liberal candidates were in York, Kent, Victoria, Moncton City, Gloucester, Restigouche, Northumberland, Charlotte, Queens, Kings, Westmorland and Albert.

The Progressive Conservatives swung Saint John City, Saint John County, Carleton and Kings.

All contests were hotly contested re-election, with Premier Mc-Nair topping the list with 13 men on the York County, though the count was still incomplete there. Progressive Conservative Leader Mackay rolled up a majority of 1495 in Kings. In York Premier McNair's majority was 369 with 16 of 103 polls to be counted.

Leaders Vote Out:

C. C. F. Leader J. A. Magridge, in search of public office for the first time, was defeated in Saint John City, where the four C. C. F. candidates trailed four Progressive Conservatives and four Liberals. The four C. C. F. men in this riding made one of their best showings of the province.

ALLIES NEARING GOTHIC LINE ON ITALIAN FRONT

Forward Elements of 8th Army Within Three Miles at One Point

FIRM BRIDGEHEADS

By NOLAND NORGGARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, Aug. 29 (AP)—Forward elements of the British 8th Army, advancing along the entire eastern front, had fought to within three miles of the Gothic Line at one point to within three and a half miles of the mountain-top fortifications of the Nazis' Gothic Line, Allied headquarters announced today.

A communique announced infantry and armor had pushed forward throughout the sector with Polish troops driving to within sight of the town of Fano and establishing a line on the southern bank of the Metauro River, 15 miles inland either units punched across that stream.

It appeared, however, the enemy voluntary withdrawal has ended and the Nazis would themselves into prepared defences on which thousands of men have toiled in recent months.

The United Nations radio in Algiers said Allied 5th Army has announced his Allied 5th Army has taken a total of 47,000 Nazi prisoners in the Italian campaign.

Anchored at Pesaro.

The forward defences of the Gothic Line are anchored at Pesaro by the Adriatic coast, and then follow the lateral road inland to the 100-foot peak of Monte Calvo in the hills north of Urbino and 17 miles due south of Rimini.

Fresh German Allied units have established a firm bridgehead over the Arno River within striking distance of the Gothic Line outposts.

Apparently fearful the Allied command was preparing to strike across the Arno at a number of points the Germans called upon their carefully-hoarded Air Force to bomb and strafe seven bridges in the Arno Valley west of Florence.

The Poles found Nano heavily booby-trapped. Headquarters said 36 mines were removed from one house.

Hitler's Obsession On Robot Policy Costs Him Army and France

New York, Aug. 30 —(AP)— The BBC said today that German insistence on flying bomb attacks deprived the German Seventh Army in Northern France of protection by air and had cost more than 30 trained men in each division, and wounded for every man, woman, and child slain in England by the weapon.

Noting that the Germans diverted manpower and materials in the production of flying bombs that might have gone into fighter planes, the broadcast declared that Adolf Hitler's "obsession" with the weapon "has cost him a fine army and lost him France."

School of Cookery Closed

Guelph, Aug. 29 —(CP)— After four years of operation during which more than 3,000 have graduated, the R.C.A.F. School of Cookery here has been closed, it was announced by officials of the R.C.A.F. last night.

122,000 GERMANS KILLED, CAPTURED IN FALAISE TRAP

More Are Added From Disorganized Enemy Retreat Across The Seine River

5-DAY FIGURE

By JOHN F. CHESTER
Associated Press War Correspondent

British Headquarters near the Seine, Aug. 30—(AP)—Allied troops killed or captured 122,000 Germans in the great Falaise entrapment, British and Canadian headquarters disclosed today, and still more thousands of Germans will be added to the toll from the disorganized enemy retreat across the Seine.

The Falaise pocket alone 50,000 killed and 32,000 captured, a third of the latter taken by British, Canadian, and 1st Canadian armies through successive entrapments in the Falaise area up to Aug. 25.

The armies since that time have swept on, pinning the shredded remnants of Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt's army against the lower Seine, and taking a new heavy toll. The figure was announced after five days of counting prisoners.

Even more huge bag has been made during the last three days and will swell the troop count to above 100,000 by the last three remaining pockets in Seine River bridgehead, it was said.

British troops fighting across the Seine east of Vernon have repulsed seven German armored division from Norway and there was speculation about the weakening of the Norway garrison.

Last Gasp Assaults.

Enemy rearguards have been fighting stubbornly against British troops pouring across the Seine east of Louviers and at Vernon, but their efforts today have been a last-gasp assignment. Men captured yesterday said they had been told that two days, that they were short of ammunition and that they could expect no further support except for their own mortars.

The men of Lt.-Gen. Dempsey's British 2nd Army advanced within three miles of the Forest of Lyons before bridgehead. They have moved forward on a 200-mile front from positions inside Northeastern France of the main Carpathian ridge to the Baltic Sea, Berlin announced today.

In this general area, the remnants of Von Kluge's army have been scattered by elements of the German 16th Army, which is fighting in the area between the Seine and the Belgian border in the Pas de Calais area, and by the German 1st Army in bomb platforms.

The fronts bounded generally by Giat officers that the Nazis were engaging northwest France as rapidly as possible in order to be able to escape an even larger and more deadly trap in the Lorraine sprung by the swift American drive north-east of Paris.

All Danube Delta In Russian Hands; Rush for Constanta

Column Knifes 15 Miles Inside Hungary-Held Transylvania

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Moscow, Aug. 29 —(AP)— Swift Russian drives through Rumania approached the great oil centres at Ploesti and the capital of Bucharest today as Soviet army pounded a 75-mile stretch on the Danube and another knifed 15 miles inside Hungarian-held Transylvania.

Hungarian and German troops were reported massing in Transylvania, the 10,843-square-mile section of Rumania which Hitler gave to Hungary in 1940. The modern Russian push pierced the main Carpathians gave the Red Army the good base town of Brassov on a railroad and highway.

(The German radio said the Russians rushing in from all sides had captured Buzau, 40 miles northeast of Ploesti and 40 miles from Brassov. Buzau is a rail and road junction 60 miles west of Tulcea, the large Danube port which the Russians captured last night.)

The entire Danube Delta was in Russian hands and troops which pushed through the wide front were reaching the Black Sea port of Constanta and the roads leading to Bucharest from the east and northeast.

Capture Large Fields.

The Russians captured a large field on the Danube and another on four new ships were arriving on the Danube and Black Sea coast between Russian lines, flying the Red flag.

Already the Ploesti oil field derricks, north of the city, were in sight of Russian troops. Tanks, trucks and motorized infantry on the plains before the Rumanian capital reported by the city of 650,000 feeling out German resistance.

Other Russian deep in capitulated Rumania edged within 45 miles of Brasov, 15th city of the Kingdom with 61,000 people, and seriously menaced any German garrison might have for a stand.

Nearer to Hungary.

The Red Army was moving forward on a 200-mile front from positions inside Transylvania south of the main Carpathian ridge to the Baltic Sea, Berlin announced Soviet and Rumanian troops had captured Tulcea, the

MOTOR CAR STOLEN FROM PARKING SPOT

DEVELOPS NEW PLUM

Mr. G. A. Britton, College Street is "plumb" happy over the result of his latest experiment with the merging of the characteristics of the blue plum and the common green gage.

The "results" were brought to the offices of the Ontario Intelligencer yesterday afternoon, and startled the staff members with the deep blue luscious fruit.

Tapering in almost a point, the new plum is juicy, with a deep red flesh, though a very small stone. It is as large as a small egg. The skin above mentioned is of a deep blue, ranging purple in the ripening process and is attached to a stem.

This information is automatically broadcast to the Weather Bureau during the flights.

The mechanism complete with two parachutes, one of green fabric and the other red silk, was released from Buffalo at 11 a.m. Monday and dropped on the Britton farm at exactly four p.m. It was discovered by Mr. Ted Redner who today forwarded it, as per enclosed instructions to Buffalo.

His Worship then meted out a one-month sentence, to take effect of the previous remand issued last week.

Sherman Brady, stirring, appeared charged by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board with having been found in the illegal possession of loose gasoline coupons. Mr. LaFrance, of the W.P.T.B. who prefered the charge, asked for a week's enlargement after Mr. Brady intimated he had reasons for possessing the coupons. His Worship advised the accused to obtain the advice of a solicitor before resuming the case.

POLICE BLOTTER

Arthur Horton, 217 Coleman, Street, reported to the police the recovery of a tricycle in the river and notified Chief Ponton. It was taken by the police station for safe keeping.

Police in Eastern Ontario are seeking a man, who, they say, gives the name of R. T. Flanders, and who is wanted on charge, of false pretenses. The modus operandi employed is that of the man representing himself as an employee of a paper company and after obtaining hotel accommodation tenders an alleged worthless cheque in payment, police here were informed today.

Credits Policeman

The new swimming pool which has been erected on the York River here in Bancroft, the first ever to be erected in this village, is deserving of a great deal of credit as the local Provincial Police Stanley W. Palmateer along with a few good sportsmen made the project possible by their untiring efforts in putting such project across which was done by voluntary offerings from outside firms, local merchants and local and outside individuals. The pool contains a well laid out having erected three different sized diving boards which are erected on cement and stone foundations. The west bank of the river is gracefully curved with a stone wall capped with cement and on the extreme south end of this curbing is a life sized model of the Canadian Beaver in its natural colour being erected overlooking down a tree. This is moulded from cement. This most attractive ordinary work is the art of a Mr. Ciana who lives near Bancroft and is a native of Switzerland wherein he learned his trade. Also on the grounds are two slides for children, rest rooms and dressing rooms, concession booths. In all it is a fine asset to this village and the local citizens will long remember Mr. Palmateer and his ardent workers in making this pleasure spot for the children and the adults possible.

Prizes for the various events of the afternoon were donated by the merchants of the village.

Anecdotes of Outstanding American And Canadian Personalities Theme Of Interesting Address At Rotary

A deeply retentive mind, lined with a deep vein of memory, rising from its fullest recesses a store of reminiscent gold mined the Rotary Club of Trenton here on Monday.

The speaker was Dr. A. H. Redmond, retired Peterborough who periods United States pulpits for fifty years, thirty-eight of them in Boston, before retiring from active life to reside in his beloved Prince Edward County.

Anecdotal gems, learned and exchanged through many a long friendship with outstanding personalities of the United States and Canada, formed the theme of an address that gave a rare insight into the lives behind the public scenes of many international greats.

Dr. Roblin knew and classed as friends United States presidents; writers; lawyers; authors; lecturers and humorists.

He spoke of the "most outstanding after-dinner speaker of America," Chauncey Depew. He knew Irvin Cobb, well-known author, humorist and related amusing incidents of one of America's foremost men of letters.

"Oh, yes," he smiled. "I knew many outstanding Canadians too. Sir Wilfrid Laurie, Sir John A. Macdonald, (Hear, Hear' from Jimmy Bennett) and I remember Dr. Roblin, Sir Wilfred Laurier, Lord Bennett, and a gentleman by the name of William (Bill) Mackenzie, King." (HEAR, HEAR' from Mack Robertson).

He spoke of the rare humor of Samuel Langhorne, (Mark Twain) and of that internationally known author's works mentioning particularly a book he wrote concerning Christian Science.

Brilliant luminaries such as Clarence Darrow, famous criminal lawyer, and Nelson Littlejohn, "the greatest cross-examiner in the United States," were numbered among Dr. Roblin's friends.

He knew personally the late Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson former presidents of the United States, and related the behind-the-headlines story that separated them as friends after terms for all time.

Henry Ward Beecher, styled by the speaker as one of the "greatest pulpit orators of all time," and Phillip Brooks, Bishop of Massachusetts were among the great churchmen whom Dr. Roblin knew.

"These were great men all," he said. "Not yesterday's men of straw, each in doing extraordinarily things. Men in the air, on the sea and on the land, are doing things that stir us to the very centre of our nature, proving that the common man possesses a greatness of soul."

He illustrated this point with a human interest story of a strong timber-runner, who dying, surprised the family by asking, personally, that he had not enlisted the weakest man during his life.

"It is great to know these great men personally," Dr. Roblin concluded, "but it is also great to know the soul of the ordinary man, for it is in the ordinary man's work being done by the Rotary Club.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Fred Ward, of the Picton Club, and appreciation of his address was expressed by Rotarian Lloyd Hicks. Visitors were welcomed by Rotarian Wm. Ellis, President Elmiston of the Picton Club, Past President R. Armgarde Wilson and Secretary Rotarian Mackeen of the Hallebury Rotary Club, who was presently appointed public school inspector for South Hastings. President Orland Pickston was in the chair.

Liberal Victory Means Upturn In Party's Fortunes

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Aug. 29—(CP)—A Liberal victory in the New Brunswick Provincial Election yesterday was hailed today by Liberal Party spokesmen in the capital to mean an upturn in the party's fortunes generally. They said they agreed such an upturn was sorely needed.

Liberal governments are in office in only three of the nine provinces—Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick—Liberal members in coalition factors in coalitions in British Columbia and Manitoba, but in Alberta, Ontario, Saskatchewan and Quebec their political opponents hold the reins.

The 296 federal seats are distributed among the provinces as follows: Alberta 17; British Columbia 16; Manitoba 17; New Brunswick 10; Nova Scotia 13; Ontario 82; Prince Edward Island four; Quebec 68; Saskatchewan 21 and the Yukon one. The Liberals now hold 183 seats.

On the basis of provincial seats won by Liberal candidates in elections in the last five years in proportion to the legislature totals, the Liberal share in a federal election would be approximately as follows:

Alberta, none; British Columbia, seven; Manitoba, seven; New Brunswick, seven; Nova Scotia, nine; Prince Edward Island, three; Ontario 14; Saskatchewan two and Quebec 30— a total of 79.

Not Exact Guide.

Election authorities said, however, that provincial election results could not be taken as an exact guide to the federal voting trend.

They cited Alberta, where the Social Credit victory on Aug. 8 might be taken to mean the Liberals no longer had substantial support in that province.

Actually, the Liberals entered no candidates in the provincial campaign and the party threw its strength into the Independents, who represent an amalgamation of Liberal and Progressive Conservative forces.

In the federal election the Liberals are expected to run under their own party banner, and Liberal spokesmen recalled that in the 1940 Dominion voting the Liberals presented the strongest opposition to the Social Crediters and elected seven of the 17 members from Alberta.

Defeat in Three Provinces.

In elections within the last 18 months the Liberals were defeated in Ontario, Saskatchewan and Quebec, while they retained a majority in Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick. Social Crediters succeeded in their bid for re-election in Alberta.

Liberals take comfort from the realization that no one opposition party appears to be preparing for country. Progressive Conservative efforts for election failed in Saskatchewan and New Brunswick, and succeeded in Ontario. The C. C. F. won in Saskatchewan, but failed to repeat in Alberta, Quebec or New Brunswick.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King has said the election will not be held before the end of the year but before the statutory expiry of the term of the present parliament next April.

R.C.A.F. Crews Bag 3 U-Boats in Ten Days

Reykjavik, Aug. 29— In ten action filled days prior to the air-sea battle in which the late Flight Lieutenant D. E. Hornell of Hamilton, Ont., won the Victoria Cross, his comrades on R.C.A.F. Coastal Command bombers attacked three U-boats and sighted a fourth.

Two of the submarines were known to be sunk and the third probably destroyed. The fourth escaped after flashing "sub sighted" back to base.

The Canadians, who were moved from an eastern Canadian airport early in 1944, have piled up a record of operational reports since arriving at Iceland. In addition to the attack in which Hornell won the first V.C. awarded to an R.C.A.F. flier, the squadron has dropped depth charges on six submarines in close range gun battles. Four aircraft were lost in these actions. But in two cases, the Canadian fliers knew that in losing their aircraft they had destroyed a submarine.

His Name in Water.

Wing Commander C. G. W. Chapman, Fredericton, N.B., was awarded an immediate D.S.O. for a dogged attack in which he made "tuna" over a diving submarine. Badly damaged but still dangerous, the enemy shot him into the water by Atlantic on the last "run-in." Three airmen died of exposure before the crew survivors were picked up nine hours later.

Surviving members of the Chapman crew included W.O.2 J. J. C. Bervvin, previous air-gunner, Montreal. Those who died of exposure included Sgt. H. D. Leathers-dale, flight engineer, Jarvis, and W.O.2 Frank E. Reed, wireless air-gunner, Leamington.

On the third run, to photograph the victim skirling under the waves with stern at 30-degree angle and with 10 German sailors already in the water, another U-boat was seen got the range and riddled the air-craft with great holes.

Chapman brought his two-motored amphibian down gently in the water. Then the pilot dinghy was put overboard and filled with rations, cameras and the crew's treasured evidence of the sinking. A heavy sea washed burst over the dinghy and it sank.

A Liberator swept overhead and dropped an airborne life and raft-kit. They fell too far away, however. Another aircraft dropped an air-borne lifeboat, while the Liberator and a Sunderland flying boat circled overhead. Seas were too heavy for the flying boat to set down.

Nine hours after the attack, a high-speed rescue launch pulled alongside, guided by radio directions from the aircraft.

Lt. D.F.C., Disappears.

A few days later the crew of FO. Lawrence Sherman of Yarmouth, N.S., and Vancouver, B.C., culminated a 19-minute gun duel by ramming the submarine with well-placed depth charges. Sherman was awarded an immediate D.F.C.

Out on patrol a few days later he sighted another submarine but never was heard from again. Members of Sherman's mining crew included FO. Gordon Besley, co-pilot, 4 Hewitt Ave., Toronto, and Sgt. J. E. Bennett, 37 Oak Ave, Toronto.

The crew of "T for Tommy," skippered by Flt.-Lt. Robert E. MacBride, Wopdstock, N.B., also sank a U-boat. Among the crew were FO. W. C. (Bill) Lawrence, navigator, Galt; FO. Gordon Dewitty, 169 Bathurst St., Toronto, and Flt.-Sgt. G. W. King, wireless air-gunner, Kingston.

Five Canadian survivors, presumably the gun crew blown from the deck by the explosion, were seen in the water. The sub left an oil patch a mile long and 400 yards wide.

25 NAZI GENERALS KILLED

2. Every employer must report on Schedule 9 to the Registrar for his Mobilization Division, concerning any employee found not to possess documents as referred to;

3. Every employer is required similarly to check the documents held by each male employee newly engaged between May 1st, 1944, and August 22nd, 1944, and to report to the Registrar for his Mobilization Division by August 29th, 1944, on any such employee found not to possess documents as referred to;

4. Any male employee here referred to, is required by the Regulations to present his documents to his employer for purposes of inspection;

5. Penalties are provided for any employer or male employee who fails to comply with these Regulations.

By an earlier order, employers were required to check the documents held by their male employees, and to report by May 1st, 1944, on doubtful cases as well as cases where employees did not possess documents. The procedure for the present continuing check, although being notified to employers in "Notice to Employers and their Male Employees", which is now being issued, is identical with that set forth in "Employers' Guide", which covered the check made before May 1st, 1944.

Employers are asked to remember that they do not report on men who do possess the necessary documents—only on those who fail to present documents for examination, or where there is doubt that the document presented actually proves good standing.

The employers of Canada co-operated very satisfactorily on the first check, made up to May 1st last. This co-operation was decidedly helpful, and is very much appreciated. Further co-operation is now extremely requested.

Schedule 9 and details as to documents which prove good standing are available through the Employment and Selective Service Offices.

Inter-Club Friendliness

At recent outdoor functions sponsored by service clubs of the city, an outstanding feature has been the co-operation given the operating club by members of the other organizations. These services have been given voluntarily, and whole-heartedly.

In a town not far from this city, this spirit of co-operation between the service clubs is conspicuous by its absence. In fact, social contact was so strained that business men greeted one another frigidly. Wives of members of the different clubs approached the point where they refrained from the usual social amenities when meeting on the street. And all this, because policies of the clubs differed on certain matters of community interest.

This is definitely not the case here. In fact, this city might well be proud of the fine atmosphere of comradeship, and mutual respect that permeates the service clubs. It is indicative of a fine community spirit, and a willingness to help others in an effort to benefit the city and its residents as a whole. One of the outstanding service club activities here is the annual inter-club banquet where members of the three organizations meet, mingle, exchange views and generally fraternize. And they leave the banquet table with a fresh outlook on community life, a desire to aid one another to the best of their ability and above all, with a better knowledge of the objects and the work he represents. It is a great step toward paving the way to bigger and finer things for the betterment of Belleville. So long as this spirit exists, the present high standard of community service will be maintained.

The Farmer's Wife, Also Helps

At various times during the past few years many tributes have been paid to the farmers of Canada for the splendid production they have given to the raising of food. They have done this under heavy handicap of labor shortage and in a lot of cases with insufficient equipment. Even children of tender years have performed more than their share in this vital work.

However, we think the farmer's wife deserves a larger share of the tributes for her part in the war effort. It is no easy task to prepare wholesome meals for a hungry family particularly in a sweltering kitchen during an unusually warm summer such as we have experienced. Not only does she do this but she also assists, but often assist with the milking and other outside chores which were formerly done by the head of the family and whatever help was available.

Yes, indeed, the work that mothers do is a vital one to the welfare of the family and those who work in the fields and the home. Well she is one of Mother's contribution. As they toss up sheaves from some nearby field they can sometimes see her at the woodpile gathering up chips in her apron, preparing the fire to hot and quick, to heat the stove but not the house too much.

Later when they hear the dinner bell they hurry to the house for a quick wash-up and a peek in the kitchen where they are not disappointed for in tempting array are dishes heaped with steaming vegetables, a platter piled high with meat, bowls of milk are ready for the children, bowls of sliced cucumbers and tomatoes, hot biscuits in golden array with a plenitude of butter alongside and over on the side table all tempting pies that simply oone with the richness of their contents.

Mothers on Canadian farms know the value of good food and plenty of it but preparing it is not easy for the large majority do not have the conveniences those of us who live in the cities are accustomed to. But they do their work uncomplaining, yet satisfied in the knowledge that their families are well nourished and by means of that well able to perform the strenuous work called for on farms. In this way they are contributing their full share to the war effort, and we think their contribution is worthy of more notice than has been given.

The Bumblebee

(From the New York Times)

The bumblebee is a fellow of good American traits. He's a sturdy, blocky chap, with six legs, one pair of big wings, a secondary pair of smaller ones immediately behind them, and two short antennae. He has a chunky head and shoulders, a very narrow Victorian waist, and a plump rear section.

There's a narrow band of yellowish fluff around his head and a wider band around the lower part of his body. Across this wide yellow rear band are two narrow, wavy stripes of black. He's a strikingly handsome boy-next-door type, as he buzzes his steady, methodical way from flower to flower.

Bombus isn't a trouble-maker if he is accorded the ordinary democratic privileges of the Bill of Rights. He believes in freedom for himself and grants it to others —if they permit him to attend to his own affairs.

When irritated he strikes quickly and determinedly; his objective is often the face and eyes. His weapon is formidable and efficient—two slender shafts tied tightly together, culminating in a needle-sharp point.

Bombus is a good worker, though he keeps only a few days' supply of honey ahead. Some unfathomable instinct tells him honey is not needed for winter. He is a great friend of the farmer, as he is one of the few insects that have the tools to fertilize the red clover. Big, independent and hard working, he goes about his business and sets a commendable example of initiative and free enterprise.

Confound Their Politics!

(From a letter to the Toronto Telegram)

Sir:—Is it not time to restore the second verse to our National Anthem? It was deleted from the hymn books and school books before the war at the request of a weak-kneed and chameleon crowd who were afraid it might insult the Germans (of all people). But to my mind it is the finest prayer for victory that was ever written. The verse follows:

"O Lord our God, arise
Scatter his enemies,
And make them fall;
Confound their politics,
Frustrate their knavish tricks,
On Thee our hopes we fix,
God save us all."

The aforesaid timorous crowd seemed to think the word "confound" was swearing. What it really means is "confuse." So, I say, let us restore this prayer to our National Anthem and let us sing it as if we meant it. —F. WATT.

The Lady Won

(Saturday Review)

A little old lady with a serious ailment who had been unsuccessfully for a prominent doctor by a mutual friend was finally dismissed as completely cured. In parting with the distinguished physician, she told him that his services had been of a sort that couldn't be fully paid for.

She continued, "I do hope you will accept as a token from me this purse which I have made myself." The doctor replied very coldly that the fees of a physician must be paid in money, not merely in gratitude, and he added: "Presents maintain friendship; they do not maintain a family."

"What is your fee?" the woman inquired. "Two hundred dollars," was the answer. The woman opened the purse and took from it two fifty-cent pieces. She put both three, handed two to the discomfited physician, and left. . . .

QUESTIONING

What wrongs have bred this fear of men
In living creatures, great and small,
That they will flee from even me
They sight the mildest of us all?

The cardinal will hush his song
Or leave the corn which I bestow
Thé instant that I come along
As if I were his bitterest foe.

Why this instinctive fear of man?
And was it so ere guns were made?
When first the human race began
Were all things else of it afraid?

Was there a time when man could pace
The woods and fields in light of day
And not a creature quit his place
Or take to flight or haste away?

Has man so foully dealt with bird
And beast and all things wild and free
That let his footsteps but be heard
Instinctively from him they flee?

Semi-Conscious Pilot Remembers Wedding Anniversary When Rescued

(By ERNIE PYLE)

On the Western Front—(by wireless)—You may not be wondered how that British pilot happened to be found after lying for eight days unnoticed, trapped in his wrecked plane.

Well, as I told you, a bullet had clipped the balls of his right-hand forefinger, clear to the bone. He had put his cream-colored handkerchief over them to stop the bleeding. As the wound dried, the handkerchief stuck to his fingers, and to pull it off would have been painful. It still stuck to his fingers all through the ordeal of getting him out; it was still clasped in his hand as the ambulance jeep drove away with him.

To go back, through the days of his waiting: he had been shot down, chiefed right hand stuck through a little hole in the plane's side, moving it slowly back and forth.

Just after I had stopped that day to talk to Lieut. Ed Sasson in the field, two mechanics from an armored division came down the road in a jeep. They were looking at the wrecked plane as they drove along, and suddenly they saw this slight movement. They stopped and went over to make sure, and they found inside there one of the brave men of this war. That's when they came running for us.

The two boys to whom this British flight lieutenant owes his life are Sergt. Milton Van Sickel, of Brainard, Minn., and Corp. William Schinke, of Gresham, Neb.

At last we had the pilot out of the plane and on a stretcher under the wing. The doctor cut with scissors and started cutting away the clothes. It must be hell in those cockpits in flight, for the pilot wore nothing but short trousers and a blue shirt.

The doctor cut off the pants and then the shirt. The pilot lay there naked, his body a man of magnificent physique.

The soles of his feet were large and reddish, but the rest of his body was a round hole as big as an apple. . . . But in our astonishment there was no deterioration of flesh around it. The wound was effectively healing perfectly. The leg wasn't even burned, as he had told us. What had caused it he made no effort to explain in the plane?

We turned him over and then we saw. His back was burned by spilled gasoline, from his shoulders to the end of his spine. It was raw and red.

He had been forced to lie on it all the time, unable to move. At last reports he had only about his leg threatening gangrene. We could see the little blue-green mouldy splotches. That was what we had smelled. He didn't know about that. The odor had developed inside his little cubby-hole so gradually that he hadn't been aware of it. He was shocked by the smell of fresh air, but he still didn't know about the other. He knew he could only shoot his leg.

I don't know what the doctor really thought. The pilot was obviously in wonderful physical shape, considered from every angle, and the doctor told him so. But he looked a long time at that gangrene on the back, and then they temporarily bandaged it.

As they were working on him, the doctor asked if the pilot had a wallet or anything in his pockets. He had been in his hip pocket. The doctor took the blood-saturated pants and cut the wallet out with a pair of scissors. From the other pocket he cut a silver cigarette case.

"That's good, old boy," the pilot said, "I'm glad you've got them safe."

He asked him if he had a wrist watch. He said yes, but it had fallen off and was probably in the sand. Where he had been flying, he couldn't find it, and finally gave it up.

* * *

He lay on his stomach on the stretcher that we had laid out under the wing, with his head turned to one side. His face was on a level with mine from a canteen. A soldier held a canteen cup and gave it to him. It dropped through his fingers onto the wet grass, and became mud. I lit another cigarette and put it in his fingers.

Then he began to drag, and put his head down on the litter and closed his eyes. The morphine finally was taking him. He knew he never did put him out.

The doctor's hands were up almost to his fingers. An officer said, "This going to burn him." He started to pull it from between his fingers. But the pilot heard and lazily opened his eyes, looked at the officer, and with his thumb pushed the cigarette farther out in his fingers. Then he closed his eyes again. He lay there for a few minutes like that.

Then again he rolled those great eyes and looked at me.

"What date did you say this was?" he said to him.

"That's wonderful," he said. "My wedding anniversary is just three days away. I'll be back in old England for it yet."

I'll bet you that everybody said sure, maybe you will.

The medics were all through. They covered the naked pilot with a blanket and carried him to the road. Everybody there in the world loved the man who had the heart to do so wonderful.

As they put the stretcher down in the gravel road, waiting for the jeep to turn around, one of the armored division soldiers leaned over the stretcher and said with rough emotion:

"If you've been a German you've been dealt five aces, pal, but you British have got guts!"

Invasion Reporter Returns to Canada

Louis V. Hunter, CP War Correspondent, Is Home After Covering War on Five Fronts

London, Aug. 29 (CP)—One of Canada's most travelled war correspondents, Louis V. Hunter is returning to Canada after more than four years during which he has served as a Canadian Press war reporter in Britain, France, Africa,

Louis V. Hunter, Canadian Press war correspondent, who returned to Canada after more than four years overseas. He has covered fighting on land and air forces fighting in Sicily and Italy and flown over Europe on a bombing mission.

Hunter, first invasion correspondent to return to Canada, has reported five phases of the war since he left Toronto for overseas on the Prime Minister's flight in July, 1940. Germany's aerial blitz on Britain, which told Canadians of the speed-up in aerial warfare in the following year, the sweeping time and war-surveyed visits with the Royal Canadian Air Force overseas from March 20, 1943, to Nursing Sister Brenda Fraser, now at her home in Woodstock.

Hunter almost realized a longcherished ambition when he set out on Jan. 16, 1943 for a bombing trip over Europe. Bad weather in Britain forced back when two of the four engines failed over Denmark.

Then on the next year Hunter went to North Africa at the time of Cassino and Anzio and was present at the Canadian troops into the island. He was present at the surrender of the Italian fleet at Malta on Sept. 11, 1943, and later wrote the story of the surrender aboard the battleship, the mainland. He returned to England last January 1944 to prepare for his invasion assignment.

Hunter was the first Canadian correspondent entitled to wear the 1939-43 Star, awarded to him last March.

CALCIUM, PHOSPHORUS AND VITE

Preservation of the characteristics of youth, higher average level of public health throughout the life cycle,... the highest degree of natural immunity, an adequate fund of reserve power to tide over emergencies and strains . . .

The Medical Research Council of Great Britain studied the nutrition of all classes of people in England for many years and concluded (1) that prevention of tooth decay requires several times the amount of sunshine vitamin D (which, you get if you expose your skin to direct sunlight or diffuse daylight) required to prevent rickets in children and blood; and (2) that the amount of calcium needed to insure maximal activities (I call it vitie) at any age is parallel with the amount of calcium and phosphorous required to maintain the most vigorous health at that age. . . . Sherman quotes Leitch as authority for the statement that his diet for calcium and phosphorous, and if the daily intake of both elements is adequate with no rails or balance between them is not likely to be wrong.

Adds Sherman: The importance of an adequate daily intake of calcium and phosphorous is to shape and strengthen to prevent rickets, spinal curvature, weak or pigeon breast (bulging arches, potential flatfoot), failure development of teeth, excessive decaying and decay of teeth, and to promote growth, there are a good many foods containing both of these and early adult life that are due to calcium deficiency or unbalance in the pamphlet "The Calcium Story," available on request if you include stamped envelope bearing your address.

A food supply may appear liberal and varied says Sherman (Chemistry of Food and Nutrition, Macmillan, 7th), and yet unless milk and green vegetables are well represented it may be calcium-poor.

Hence the "ordinary mixed diet" of Americans and Europeans, at least in many cities in cities and towns, is probably more often deficient in calcium than in any other essential element.

And that's only the half of it . . . the younger half. Insufficient vitamin B-complex calcium and vitamin B1 intake, I am convinced, accounts for many of the everyday complaints or infirmities of people who were young when you and I were young myself.

WEDDINGS

BATEMAN—HAGERMAN

Salem United Church was the setting for a pretty summer wedding, on Saturday, July 27th, at 2 o'clock, when Rev. Mr. Bell united in marriage Mary Ethel Hagerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hagerman of Harold, to Pte. Wilbur Bateman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bateman, Picton.

For the happy occasion, evergreens and shaded lights made the church a most effective floral background. Miss Blanche Eagle of Belleville, played the wedding music and gave several selections during the ceremony. Miss Ethel Hagerman, daughter of the bride, was the soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a lovely picture in the long gown of white sheer and floor length veil, falling in graceful folds from her headdress of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Miss Alta Hanna, of Stirling, as maid of honor, wore a charming dress in pastel yellow faconne and matching shoulder length veil caught to her hair with dainty flowers in varying shades. A bouquet of Talisman roses completed her costume.

Bridesmaids were Miss Helen Jeffrey, Belleville, and Marguerite Jeffrey of Forest Hill, Toronto, cousins of the bride. They were frocked alike in turquoise crepe with matching shoulder length veil held in their hair and carrying old-fashioned bouquets.

Mr. Don Bateman, brother of the groom, from Toronto, attended as best man. The ushers were Mr. Lorne Hagerman, brother of the bride, and Mr. Scott Bateman, brother of the groom.

Following the bride's parents was the scene of a reception following the ceremony. The bride's mother chose a Royal blue ensemble and corsage of red roses. The groom's mother wore mauve and white flowered crepe complemented with white accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses.

The wedding dinner was served to the honored guests by eight girl friends and cousins of the bride.

The grooms' gift to the bride was a chest of silver. The bride's gifts to her attendants were gold neckpieces and bracelets. The groom's gifts to his groomsmen and ushers were leather billfolds.

GOMAN—ARBUCKLE

Wearing a long gown of white lace over corded taffeta, Miss Betty Pauline Arbuckle was united in marriage to Wyrtar Christian Goman, B.Sc., in a pretty ceremony performed at 1.30 p.m. on Monday at the Anglican Church of St. John the Evangelist, Bridgeport.

Given in marriage by the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Arbuckle, Bridgeport, the bride was attended by Miss Ann Goman, sister of the groom and Miss Betty Jean Arbuckle, sister of the bride, as bridesmaids. The wedding ceremony for his son, assisted by Rev. F. L. Lee, Rector, was performed by the church.

Mrs. Evans presided at the organ console. Mrs. G. J. Comish was soloist.

The bride's gown was made with a low, ruffled yoke of organdy and a full skirt which terminated in a train. Her trailing veil was gathered at the temple to a cluster of flowers. She carried a Colonial bouquet of red roses and white streamers.

Maid of honor was Miss June Arbuckle, bridesmaids were Misses Mildred Bertram and Ann Goman, and Margaret Washburn. All four attendants wore identical floor length lace frocks in pastel shades of blue, pink, green and yellow. The gowns featured ruffled U-shaped necklines and short puffed sleeves. They carried Colonial bouquets of roses and cornflowers, each tied with ribbon streamers to match the frock's color.

Mr. Ian A. Goman, stationed at Brockville, was his brother's best man. Ushers were Mr. Ralph Thornton of Toronto, and Rt. Bergen of this city, and P.O. William Schmidt, Picton, a cousin of the groom.

Her corsage was of pink roses.

PICTON

Tomato Canning In Full Swing In P.E. County

Picton, Aug. 20 (Special)—Tomato canning is in full swing in Prince Edward County, with the peak of the ripening this week, though ripening has been delayed by the cool weather. There is a shortage of men available, either for work in the factories or picking tomatoes, but, as during the past week, many have been pressed into service. Anyone can take more peelers but on the whole, all are well staffed, Director of Service, a large number of workers from Hastings County and Ottawa are also in Prince Edward Co. as a result of this action, an anticipated shortage of labor seems to materialize. Factories co-operated by providing accommodation and the wages are attractive.

Though the yield is below that expected earlier, there will be a big pack as there is an increased acreage. Those engaging pickers are paying ten cents a bushel.

Fire has broken out in a pile of coal at the Napanee yards here. Last weekend, firemen extinguished the fire but it broke out again yesterday. It is expected that the pile will have to be removed in order to save the coal as the water does not permanently extinguish the fire.

Sam Wells, who is holidaying here, was speaker at the Kinsmen Club last night. He told of his experiences as a prisoner of the Japanese.

Record Tourist Season.

The tourist season is gradually drawing to a close with the time for school re-opening near. It has been a record season with local resorts unable to fill the great number of applications received. The tourist trade has grown rapidly in the past few years and it is understood that for next year a large number of new cottages will be erected.

Merchants are making plans for the observing of a Saturday half-holiday, but as yet no definite plan has been agreed on. The Chamber of Commerce at a meeting last night suggested that each line of business meet and agree on certain hours.

. . . PLEASE THINK OF THE MEN IN UNIFORM

Long Distance lines are heavily loaded, especially during the evening hours when the men from the Trenton Airport are off duty.

Present facilities cannot be extended to any extent. Over 90% of the output of factories making telephone equipment is devoted to vital war purposes. All telephone users are urged to make as few out-of-town calls as they can, particularly during the busy evening hours.

If you must place a Long Distance call—

1. Please do not telephone between 7 and 9.00 p.m. when the lines are congested.
2. When you must use Long Distance, always be brief — plan your talk in advance.

On Setting an Informal Table

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

Our club is sponsoring a group of table-settings in a table-setting competition to be held in the Kingsmouth House in our city. I have been chosen to set an informal dinner table, and since the judging will be done on a very strict basis to have every detail exactly right, I regard this assignment as quite a honor. In the contest, but also as a check-up on my own table-setting habits, as well as a reminder whom I want to teach to take over when I move-on.

Reader.

When you set an exhibition table, you must not only try to achieve a lovely personality for your table, but you must be extra "correct" and accurate in every detail, from A to Z.

For the covering of your informal dinner table, you may use a colored cloth or novelty linen cotton cloth, but you will find this a somewhat difficult problem, particularly since the crease must run only from the head to the foot of the table. So I suggest you use your table-pads, cutting them to size; white or colorful place mats are also correct, but carefully pressed at home and carried flat in a long box. For the centerpiece, choose a low fruit, perhaps reflected in a mirror plateau, or interestingly arranged flowers in a low bowl, using your color highlights. Plank your dinner plates, one inch from the candlesticks (double or triple ones are correct), and place your forks between the candlesticks and the plates on the long side of the table. Then add your canisters of mints or candies, of a color to harmonize with your color scheme.

Now for the individual covers, which, if properly arranged, run inches from plate-centre to plate-centre. Beside the main fork of each, you're setting the table, place plate in centre of each cover, and follow these rules:

1.—Knives at right of plate, cutting edge toward plate.

2.—Spoons at right of plate, and to right of knives. (Exception: Infusal spoon, proper for small soup plate; proper for small soup spoon, for cream soup cup.)

3.—Forks at left of plate. (Only exception is oyster fork, which should be placed at right of plate, and to right of knives and spoons.)

4.—Place silver pieces in the sequence in which they are to be used: the one to be used first farthest from the plate.

5.—Place silver pieces on an even line with the lower edge of the plate, and all about one inch from edge of table. (All silver pieces precisely parallel to one another.)

6.—For informal dinner setting, place butter plate just above the tip of the meat fork. On it, and either parallel with it or with the edge of table (better than as one pleases), place the butter individual butter knife. Place water glass at tip of the knife, about three inches above butter knife; and if you wish to have a wine glass, place it somewhat below, right. Put napkin, carefully folded, at left of plate, on dinner plate, or, if you wish to indicate that the guests will be on table when guests are summoned, to left of forks.

8.—Place a pair of salt and pepper shakers, one between each (small glass salt dish with tiny spoon) for each two persons.

Nothing is to be permitted at your table, place open cigarettes, for a few cigarettes in small ash trays, beside or above each cover, and one large ash tray, an attractive match-book.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Self-Revealing Girl Loses Caste

Reserve is a quality of charm that should not be under-estimated. It is to be cultivated by the girl who is inclined to be outspoken in her views who will listen. We've all come in contact with confidence-sharing persons who believe that their affairs are as interesting to others as they themselves. They may also have high rating when you first meet them, but as soon as you are on friendly-terms with them they unload their family ghosts and skeletons and make one feel uncomfortable.

If they're young, they tell you about their quarrels with the boy friend, or their fiancee's jealousy. When these girls marry, find romance fading, they dwell upon the short-comings of the husband. He is stingy, or he stays out nights, or doesn't understand his wife, and life is pretty dreadful. What a pity one say. Others feel sorry for the husband, because his wife has not had enough to keep her from troubles and disappointments herself.

This universal sisterhood is chasing after beauty, but the sisters overlook the point that beauty has a twin sister named charm; you aren't charming when you complaining.

No woman is interesting, much less charming, who cackles endlessly about her family, her health, her clothes, her children. She is, in fact, a bore. The girl out of time comes forgets that she is 'attractive to the eye, because she is so trying to the ear. What matter the lovely complexion, embowed locks, cute skirts if one wants to turn and run when Gabby appears?

Here's the rule for the reporter that every woman should have a certain dignity, which, after all, is a product of culture and self respect. This does not mean that she should be a touch-me not type or march through life in a state of austerity. Quite the contrary. A cultured woman is friendly, she is friendly to the world in general and the ten next door. She loves gaiety of spirit as much as she hates depressing influences.

There will be more arrivals at the beauty goal when women accept the fact that good looks must be backed up by intelligence, good manners and an endeavor to be entertaining. A good rule: use the old head. Learn new lessons daily by observation. "Sometimes a bad example proves to be a good one. "Please, dear Lord, Don't let me be like that."

Fashion Flashes

MANY MORE long skirted dinner dresses appear in today's fashion picture than was the case last Autumn. Green crepe, pin-tucked all the way down to give fabric interest, is used for a long slim frock with wide, square neckline and short sleeves. The fabric is plain for wide draped panels that fall at the side in an enormous sash.

Still popular is the skirt-and-blouse dress. A navy crepe skirt has a black faille skirt with a very generous side flare and a matching cummerbund to take them. The top is of diagonally striped gold and white satin blouse, with very wide, Round, high neckline.

Feathers are flying on to the new hats in great abundance. Oak leaf green felt is used for a pretty Directoire bonnet. Several bright red and bright green ostrich plumes give color and added height.

Fur better one or two really good handbags than a slew of cheap, badly made bags of poor material. Black is used for the most part, the centre portion draped and shirred onto two enormous simulated tortoise-shell bracelet handles that form the ends of the calf at each corner

A new note for dressing up simple but fine suits — and dressing up for afternoon and evening — is the sparkling glove. Black antelope makes a short glove, the same is true except for the thumb—entirely covered with multi-colored sequins.

The Marry-Go-Round

"A woman can marry any man she wants to marry," says a popular philosophy, "but it is up to her to make the right choice" . . .

Many a lovely old theory has been exploded, long ago, in spite of Bernard Shaw's "Candida" and "Pygmalion." An attractive girl can marry almost any man—if she sets her mind on him. She can make a play and is over-anxious to marry, that is rubber-stamped and has to be hacked into the shape she wants, male.

"Making the right choice". A girl would make a better job of it if she knew what she were allowed to do the choosing. But when a girl gets the man of her choice, which lots of girls do it is nearly always because his subconsciously chose her first.

Nine times out of ten a husband is something that just happens to you, like a summer cold, and they say you, like a summer cold, and they say you, like a summer cold, and they say

Pitching Promises to be Decisive in Stretch Drive

CARDS WIN AGAIN

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

World Series talk was legitimate business in Top American League clubhouses today after a routine post-season planning session in Commissioner K. M. Landis' office but the four contenders were more interested in vacuum-cleaning the bushes looking for another starting pitcher.

If there was a footloose hurler in the minors who could win in the big show, operators of St. Louis Browns, Boston Red Sox, New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers would be much interested.

Pitching promises to be the deciding factor in the stretch drive when the Browns and Tigers will likely jump the gun.

Boston took over second place by virtue of Tuesday's 6-4 win over the Athletics, but Cleveland, only one game in the Harridge Loop yesterday, Red Barrett, who relieved Jim Bagby in the fourth inning of his eighth win at 3rd Ebb Zuber's expense. The Red Sox pitchers walked 12 men but left 14 New Yorkers stranded in a six-hit effort.

St. Louis Cardinals, who have nothing more serious to do than get ready for the opening of the series at Sportsman's Park, Wednesday, Oct. 1, came up with three runs in the last of the ninth to shade Cincinnati, 3-2. Mort Cooper notched his 20th win of league triumph and 19th of the year with the help of Kenny O'Dea's two-run pinch homer. Harry Gumbert was the Cincy loser.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS

Toronto, Aug. 26—(CP)—Repercussions of the new services sport order are being noticed in numerous centres, making the athletic picture for the coming months just that much more indefinite.

When the servicemen were barred from playing with or against civilians in anything except garrison leagues or exhibition games, it upset the applecarts of numberous teams which were banking heavily on the aid of uniformed talent.

One case in point in the Winnipeg Blue Bomber football organization, which was forced to close up shop when they lost their athletes to the service. That's a blow to the Winnipeggers, but it can't be helped. Then on the Pacific Coast, hockey prospects are said to be quite dull for the coming winter, due mainly to player scarcity among the civilian population.

The one good feature about the whole thing, though, is the added freedom given the services for games within their own bounds. In most centres, good leagues can be formed with service talent available, and they'd provide good competition that should be crowded with fan appeal.

The services want to encourage sport among the sailors, soldiers and airmen—and the fans want all the sport they can get—so there shouldn't be too much trouble making everybody happy if the thing is gone about properly.

Incidentally:

Winnipeg's football problem quite possibly may be solved by Lieut. Pritz Hanson, himself a Western Big Four artist of varied accomplishments. Hanson now is sports officer of Military District 10, and claims he has a dozen or more former Eastern Canada and U. S. College football stars available for a team—if he can find someone to play against . . . Add brother actor Vic Love of Dauphin, Man., will join brother Bobby on the Ottawa Generals line-up this winter . . .

None of the Armed Forces seem to want Gordon Gellatly, 300-pound former lineman with Edmonton, Calgary and Vancouver football teams. He was turned down by the Canadian Army on the grounds he was too big, and the U.S. forces also had none of the expected love for the fat man.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

New York, Aug. 26 (AP)—The regular baseball season, and the weekly match play provides a true test of golfing ability, leaves this corner cold...The argument against match play is that a player can stow a couple of bad ones in for a 3 and still win....But in a 72-hole medal tournament, the guy who rules a round that way still has three chances to make it up, so what's the difference. After expending a lot of thought on a scoring system that would give credit both for match-play victories and medal scores, we found no way of making allowances for the ability to win when the chips are down, and it's human fallibility that makes golf interesting.....Any good mechanic could devise a machine that would shoot better than Byron Nelson, but no one would put up $10,000 prize money for it to win.

He'll Whistle For It.

Bill Hells, who takes his money out of oil and puts it into horses, has a 3 year old by the name of Hells Whistle....When Bill was shoving off the horse's tricks to a group of visiting newspapermen the other day, one sour scribe, wisecracked: "If he ever wants to win a race, he'll have to stand at the finish line and whistle."

Yes, "The Wily" packs 'em in and how the ladies go for the Toronto star. No wonder such will be the case Wednesday night when Watson meets "Jolly Jerry" Monahan at the Hume Arena. However, Watson can afford to take too much time out to accept the admirations of his fair sex followers or he may find himself flat on his back gazing at the rafters and with Monahan astride him. After all Monahan's new "neck whip" hold hasn't failed him this summer. There are two preliminaries including Pedro Martinez, the mad Mexican, on the program.

SQUIRES STILL ONE GAME UP ON HASTINGS NINE

Play 3-3 Draw With That Team in Hastings on Monday Night

PLAY THURSDAY

Columbian Squires are still one up in their junior O.A.S.A. playoffs with the Hastings junior, the result of the 3-3 draw played at Hastings on Monday night. The Squires had to come from behind to knot the count for in the eighth when Hastings' crew was leading by two to one but they fell apart in the field and before the smoke of battle cleared the Squires had evened the count on the game. Umpire Bannon called the game at the end of the eighth as it was too dark to continue. Rain caused a late start of the pastime but the diamond was in first class shape despite the downpour. Hastings won the toss for the third game if necessary and the last game will be played at Hastings on Thursday night.

The Squires went out on top in the second frame when after two were out Cullen safely and Moher was safe on an error Hunter hit to score Cullen. The Hastings team went one up in the same frame when Griffin walked, Quigley hit and Coughlan was safe on a fielder's choice, Griffin scoring and Wes knocked Quigley home. The same team also scored one in the third on three singles. Bunton at this point was removed for Don Boyle, who tied the opposition in knots for the remainder of the contest. The Squires were held off the score sheet till the eighth, when Wardhaugh walked and Rollins was safe on his hit to left. Bunton hit to score Wardhaugh, Fitzpatrick hit to fill the bases and Rollins scored on a fly ball. Two were left stranded.

Bunton struck out three and Boyle seven while Hunter whiffed one. Bunton also walked one and Boyle two while Hunter walked three. It was a well played game with Hastings kicking in with two fast double killings. The lineups:

Belleville Squires: Donovan lf, Wardhaugh 2b, Rollins 3b, Bunton p, and lb, Fitzpatrick c, Culkin cf, Moher ss, Hunter and Adams rf, and Boyle lb and p.

Hastings: Walsh 1b, Wilson ss, Fyfe c, Hamilton 3b, Griffin cf, Quigley 2b, Coughlan rf, West lf, and Weber p.

A big Buck Indian soldier had just ordered a ham sandwich at a drug store counter and was paying the bill when the slice of bread when he turned and said to the waiter:

Kingston Version.

In his report on last Friday's Ordnance versus Marines Intermediate O.A.S.A. playdown, the Kingston scribe forgot to mention much about the fight, the fans were treated to, but confined his descriptions to an attack on Umpire Harold Bawden. However, we see the Kingston reporter refrained from making any comment on the work of Umpire Marks of Kingston, whom the Ordnance "soldiers" refereed to be not up to par. At any rate, third and final game here tonight.

Regarding the fight, the Kingstonstone City reporter said: "It is an unresolved mystery as to when the eminent Mr. Bawden doesn't attract much attention to his umpiring....Kingston fans will never forget her him vividly.

In the sixth inning Atanas crashed the ball into centre field and raced to third, when he was astonishment he was declared out by Mr. Bawden of the eagle eye, Bawden proclaiming that the runner had not touched second base.

After the game it was learned that there is no truth in the report that Mr. Bawden and Mr. Atanas will appear jointly in that new play "Touching All the Bases." .... And judging by the marks made by some of the irate invaders it is feared that when they appear in Belleville next Tuesday Mr. Bawden will be forced to remain in the stand so that he can get a better view of the bases.

Reliance at Bat.

With the Belleville Ladies' Softball League playdowns far from completed the Reliance girls team, Whitby champions for 1941, are responsibility of representing Belleville in the Provincial Ladies' Softball Union and will journey to Petrboro for the first game of the Provincial Union playdowns Wednesday. Hats off to Tilly Donihee and the Reliance Sports Committee for taking on this project that will give Belleville fans an opportunity to compare the class of softball played in this city with that played throughout the province. The second game of the series will be played here Thursday afternoon.

In the meantime the third play-off game between the Universal gals and the Mountain View "Rumble-seats" were rained out last night and will be played either Wednesday night or Thursday of this week. After all it's getting along to September and the evening's are getting cooler for softball.

Juniors Tied.

Johnny Boyle's Belleville "Squires" came from behind to tie "Dit" Clapper's Hastings kids 3-3 at Hastings last night, the game having to be called in the eighth on account of darkness. However, had the homesters kept on time in starting mayhap Boyle's boys wouldn't have to make a return trip on Thursday night. Bob Bunton started for the Squires and after giving up three runs was touched by Don Boyle in the fourth. Boyle not only blanked the Hastings kids for the remaining five innings but contributed a batting like seven.

Belleville Squires lost the toss in the event of a third game, but after last night's game the Squires kids can't there'll be no further matches after Thursday as they'll be too busily enjoy the Labour Day jaunt. It seems there was some kind of confusion in the Campbellford and two of the local squad assumed the role of "castaways" with the result they were left behind when the final round-up came for the return trip. However, a good time was had by all and the Squirts are all hoping they can win the series. Incidentally Boyle's boys had to score two runs in the last inning to come out with a 3-3 tie.

Remember When.

The first women's marathon swim was staged at Toronto's Canadian National Exhibition 25 years ago today. Martha Norelius of New York established home in front of a large field over a ten-mile course to win the $10,000 prize money of the day.

Trouble-shooters.

With, men like Jerry Monahan, Wesley Marlatt and Bob Wagner all on the same grappling program Wednesday tomorrow night apparently Promoter Frank Tunney had thoughts of inciting to riot in mind when he rounded out this card. On every bout appears a ring ruffian of the first water, whose rassilin' antics can always be questioned. Perhaps the No. 1 trouble-shooter is none other than the mad Mexican, Pedro Martinez, who is about on a par with Jerry Monahan as the most the ever-popular Billie Watson in the battle of whips" as the main attraction.

Mike Corrigan's Team Wins Deloro Bowling Title

Marmora, (Special.)—Mike Corrigan's team won the Deloro Bowling Club's championship for 1941 by virtue of winning the finals in which F. Tench's team was the only other finalists. The first game went to the Corrigan team, the score being 1,000 with the bowling of Corrigan, Brown and Leal being most conspicuous. The Leal team won the second game by the score of 1,016 thus coming within four points of tying the total score round. In this game F. Fletcher 3, C. Wells and M. J. Corrigan supplied the bowling features. Each member of the winning team—T. Hilson, F. R. Wells, W. Brown and M. J. Corrigan was presented with a miniature silver trophy. Six rival teams finished up the ten game regular schedule as follows:

	W.	Lost
F. Leal	7	3
Lt. Corrigan	7	3
C. H. Buskard	6	4
J. M. Hemphill	4	6
W. J. Corrigan	4	6
H. A. Burwash	3	7

Since only four teams could qualify for the play off series an elimination series between the three teams tied for third place became necessary. Sanderson being eliminated in this series, Buskard and Hemphill were left to join Corrigan and MacLeod in the semi-finals. Corrigan eliminated Buskard while Leal did the same for Hemphill.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 467

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

An expert is a very clever guy whose complicated mind can't be in your way. But keep our tricks simple and you will see that no good rule need be a mystery.

An opening bid of two no-trump is a signal to show a hand that contains five or eight no-trump tricks. When ace seven enough and when should you have eight tricks for that opening?

There is absolutely no need to complex or confusing tables to determine such things.

Mister Hoyle's method, even a palooka can handle it as correctly as an expert.

Count one trick for each high card; that is, each ace or king or queen. If you have eight of them and no more, you have what it takes for an opening bid of two no-trump.

If, however, you have four sure tricks among them, you need only seven high cards to open with two no-trump. Such tricks are:

Ace, one; K Q, one; A K, two.

If figure born yes, skip the rest of this. Because I am going to slip in some mathematical reasons. And they are interesting only to those who can add and subtract.

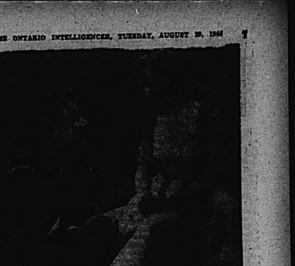
There are only 12 high cards in a pack. But there is a 13th trick theoretically, the idea that four sure tricks has the control of all four suits. That side should take the Mex.

With seven high cards and the above player may assume that he can take eight no-trump tricks. Consequently, even high with seven sure tricks expect to do as well as eight high cards.

Pick up a hand like this:

♠ K 10 8 6
♥ A 10 4 3
♦ A K 5
♣ A Q 6

This hand has seven high cards, four of which are sure tricks. With one hand, the opening bid should be two no-trump.



What computer rules conceal, the Horse Sense rules reveal.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Are These Our Parents?"

"Are These Our Parents?" the Monogram child delinquency drama which opened on engagement at the Capitol theatre last Sunday midnight, presents in colorful fashion a picture of a present-day trend in American life which is nothing less than startling. The story, in its details, demonstrates that the parents are responsible in much of the waywardness of the younger generation, and that delinquency begins at home.

Helen Vinson is starred, and heads a cast which is uniformly excellent, including Lyle Talbot, Ivan Lebedeff, Jill Esmond, Richard Tyron, Emma Dunn, Addison Richards, Anthony Warde and many other competent players. William Nigh, as director, and Jeffrey Bernerd, as producer, have combined their talents to film an entertaining picture which presents a problem and a means of its solution. The production should prove an important factor in combating an era of juvenile crime which to a large extent is based on misunderstanding.

In the story, Miss Vinson keeps her young daughter in boarding schools for the simple reason that she's pretty presence at home interferes with her parent's social activities. Rebelling, the daughter visits a notorious night club, is arrested, and after escaping falls in with a straight-laced boy, whose father, however, has fallen from the path of rectitude. Trouble will ensue but somehow to a realization of the dangerous situation she has brought about, the daughter gets on to further excesses, until finally she and the boy are framed by the law, suspected of murder. How the problem of these conditions is eventually brought to a solution makes a story of absorbing interest.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Forest Rangers"

Telling its thrilling love story in fiery flaming Technicolor against the powerful romance of America's pioneering timberlands, "The Forest Rangers," will open on Wednesday at the McCarthy Theatre with Fred MacMurray, Paulette Goddard and Susan Hayward heading the star-studded cast. Others on the stellar list include Lynne Overman, Albert Dekker, Regis Toomey, Pallette, Regis Toomey and Rod Cameron.

Directed by George Marshall from a story by Emmett Lavina Strabel, author of "Reap the Wild Wind," this lusty drama of the great outdoors glories the men of the U.S. Forest Service, the intrepid rangers who guard one of the nation's most vital natural resources, our forests. Plentifully supplied with comedy and exciting adventure, "The Forest Rangers" is headed for its musical numbers, including the title song, "Timber," "High Jangle Jingle," by Frank Loesser and Joseph Lilley and "Tall Green Trees Where," by Loesser and Frederick Hollander.

"The Forest Rangers" is one of those rare films that just had to be made in Technicolor to bring out the colorful and eye-filling timbered scenes and the thrilling forest fire sequences, said to be the most exciting and spectacular fire scenes ever filmed. Technicolor cameramen, working with Rangers of the Forest Service, ranged over most of the Pacific to get actual fire shots.

Made with the full cooperation of the Forest Service and with the Governor Supervisor of Three National Forest, as technical advisors, "The Forest Rangers" tells the story of District Ranger Don Stuart, played by Fred MacMurray. Don, a society beauty from the East and marries her, then starting a series of laughs, thrills and romantic situations that keep the film moving swiftly right down to the last flicker. It's a big picture, in every department—in size, background and story.

The 2nd feature attraction presented at both Hughes is "Men on Her Mind."

NEWARK BEARS WHIP SYRACUSE

By the Associated Press

Newark Bears may have relinquished the International League lead to Baltimore but the Orioles will have to fight to stay on top.

The Bears with Danny Reynolds leading the attack clubbed their way back to within two games of the league leaders as they whipped Syracuse last night, 8-5. Reynolds, whose grand slam home run won a crucial game for the Bears last week, maintained his base-clearing tactics by blasting a triple with the sacks loaded in the sixth inning.

The blow was the high spot of the sixth, during which Newark scored eight times to chase Hod Lisenbee from the mound and win the game. In addition to his three-run triple, Reynolds slammed another single and Jeggar and young Don Johnson fanned nine for his fifth win without a loss.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By The Canadian Press

With The R.C.A.F. in England, Aug. 20 — Thirty-five Mosquito planes destroyed at night is the record of the R.C.A.F. Intruder Group squadron, one of Canada's highest-scoring night fighter squadrons, now flying Mosquitos.

The cannon-armed "Mossies" are flown by German bombers, fighter bombers and night fighters amongst their kills. The invasion record is held by Sqdn. Ldr. L. A. March of St. John's Nfld., and his navigator, Flt. Lt. Hampton of Leslie, Sask., who have collected a Ju. 88, a Ju. 188 and an Me. 410.

It took just 34 rounds of cannon fire for PO. G. T. ("Porky") Edwards of Lethbridge, Alta. (315-11th Ave. N.) to shoot down his first German, a Ju. 88 over the Normandy beachhead. This 22-year-old Cougar squadron pilot was chasing another plane when the Ju. 88 swooped past overhead, and Edwards picked on him for his target.

One of the most successful pilots in a night fighter reconnaissance squadron in Britain is a young Canadian, Pilot Officer Lloyd Wilson. He has been flying on the dangerous night fighter-reconnaissance and topographic reconnaissance ever since he was wings. His home is a dairy farm near Peterborough, Ont. Gibson is noted even among his experienced colleagues as a cool and daring pilot who has flown scores of reconnaissance missions against heavily defended targets.

Hollywood and Here

By RYE BOSSEN

The life of Shakespeare will come to the screen through the pen of an American writer, Ben Hecht. The Bard lived in hasty times and among gay friends. His story should be a great one and it is to be hoped that it doesn't get off the Elizabethan path in being brought to the screen.

It all brings to mind the story of the Hollywood producer who saw a fine stage play called "Romeo and Juliet" and enquired after the writer. On being told his name and that he was an Englishman, the producer wired his British representative to obtain a contract for the writer's works.

"Shakespeare dead," was the reply via cable.

"Sorry," the producer wired back. "Send flowers."

Indoor woods were created by Samuel Goldwyn for the making of "Wonder Man." Danny Kaye's next film. California molds down the production inside and a set resembling Central Park, New York, had to be created. On it are 100 trees, shrubs, a bridle path and several thousand square feet of grass—all under a single cover. . . . Newest suggestion for Comedian, producer of dreams coming from Professor Arthur L. Phelps, who don't mingled with John Grierson's idea of Dominion films to be made in New York or Hollywood. . . . Professor Phelps doesn't see why we can't "do a gem of at least a minute," for which the government would pay. It's an interesting suggestion, although Hollywood, in spite of its many years of experience, has never discovered a formula for film gems of any kind. It's unlikely that Canadian film producers know that secret either.

. . . .

They needed 350 extras for "Hollywood Canteen" and couldn't get them so the producer next move over to the real Hollywood Canteen that service-men are leave could make some extra dollars by appearing in the film. That brought 254 soldiers to play soldiers . . . more than 1,000 Italian theatres are now showing the same film as Canadians see, a David Niven, with the British Army, dated his letters "Stockholm. Neutrality." He recently wrote a friend that "this is the biggest production I have ever been in. And all in Technicolor! How are the colors?" . . . Cary Grant, Laddi, discharged by the army, no sooner completed John Ford's new "Yes, Virginia, It's the Mast" when he was ordered back for more training. Seems he's in the army again. . . . The song soldiers have been demanding from home during the war is "White Christmas." It was sung by Bing Crosby banged it across the hit line. . . . Jean Davis and her husband, Dr. Willis, have been married for 18 years. Seems like a novelty to stay married that long in Hollywood.

. . . .

Thirty years ago Arthur Treacher, the film butler, and Sydney Greenstreet, "The Fat Man," did a song-and-dance together in London music halls. . . . Mary Astor's role in the 100th or tenth motion picture to use British Columbia scenery as a background. Now there is talk of complete production in the future. John Davis, who manages Britain's largest theatre chain for J. Arthur Rank, has been touring Canada and examining the possibility of establishing film studios on this side for Old Country film makers. Such studios will probably be located in Canada's Pacific coast province because of its proximity to California. . . . There were 696 feature films shown in Canada last year, the average theatre using 18 annually. British Columbia citizens spent an average each of $4.57 in movie entertainment during the year and Ontario came next with $4.57.

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER 6

Reginald was dismissed then, and the other servants were questioned. But they knew nothing important. Then quite suddenly the library door banged open, and I was sitting on the edge of my spine again, trembling.

Sergeant Hornblower, actually charged into the drawing-room. He looked at all of us with his polished black eyes and said: "I want your addresses and telephone numbers. I've done all the questioning I'm going to do tonight. You may all go home now. But remember — be available in case I need you."

He and his suite filed out into the hall, and then I realized that while we were being questioned, newspaper reporters had been working like mad to get into the house. For the minute Reginald opened the door I could hear the excited babble of their voices, questions being hurled and photographer's bulbs popping. The front hall widened suddenly and often, as if by lightning, and I saw Reginald flatten himself against the wall. Evidently he didn't want his picture in the newspapers.

I pressed myself in search of my evening bag, which had been left somewhere in the high mass-confusion of a house earlier in the evening. I was down on my hands and knees, peering under the dining-room table, when a voice said: "Let me help you."

I sat up on my heels...and looked straight into Peter Gibson's smiling face. "This isn't a game," I said, "I'm looking for my evening bag. I lost it."

Women ought to be made like kangaroos," remarked Peter, "then they'd have a place to carry all their junk. Here you go, let me help let it!"

"I don't know," I said, and together we searched. But we did not find it and finally Peter called a taxi. When we climbed in, I noticed that a couple of detectives were combing the grounds for clues, and several policemen were keeping the morbidly curious away from the scene of the crime.

Peter, polite as we rode to the hotel, silent as we walked down the long corridor to my suite. I broke the silence.

"My keys were in that evening bag," I said. "I'll have to ring for Mother. She'll have to get up and let me in."

"Don't bother," said Peter, "I'll brass.rim of the knocker, the sound booming along the hotel corridor and awakening a number of guests. Peter was staring at me thoughtfully. Even in his sober state, you didn't do it, did you?"

I was too tired for a snappy comeback. "No," I said wearily, "I told you I—"

"Of course not." He frowned. "Confound it all! I knew something like this was going to happen. I shouldn't have asked Fanelle to introduce me to you."

"Confound it all!" I quoted. "Why confound it all? Does that mean I find you simply irresistable and will never have another moment's peace or joy here on?"

"Something like that," he smiled and then, all at once, his face was grave and I was being kissed. Hard. For the first time I was kissed by Peter Gibson yet. There were too many questions still hanging in midair for me to answer him bly...not liking to be a push-over in any event. I counted little black sheep with curly white tails leaping over a white fence; then I saw great bland billous-eyed rams and wolves in sheep's clothing. But it didn't do any good, it would take more than fence-jumping sheep to knock Peter Gibson out of my girl's conscious or subconscious mind. "It's all wrong," I thought wearily, blously—a gal ought to be hard to get. Yet presently I got my arms around Peter Gibson and kissed him right straight back!

Just how long Mother and Dad had been standing there watching their only daughter make a sap of herself I don't know. But when I finally got my lips turned and saw them in the open doorway.

Mother, complete in her nightly Eskimo outfit, slipped off one mule, her jacket and Dad in the shortest night-shirt in existence. However, I made the introductions with as much aplomb as I could muster under the circumstances, and while Peter looked a little as if he had fallen down a dark stairway head-first and hadn't quite come to, he bowed smartly from the waist before Mother, and shook Dad's hand warmly.

It didn't seem to occur to either of my parents that they looked like fugitives from a psychopathic ward.

Mother said: "What on earth happened, Letty? I woke up a few minutes ago and when I looked at the clock and realized you were still out, I was positively horrified. I called the Keith house and a policeman—a policeman, Letty—answered. Then Sergeant Hornblower came to get into the house. For the minute Reginald opened the door I could hear the excited babble of their voices, questions being hurled and photographer's bulbs popping. I called the Keith house and a policeman—a policeman, Letty—answered. Then Sergeant Hornblower came to get into the drawing-room, just as if I were your mother, in the afternoon. Instead of down. We hurried into a group around the radiator; then Peter and I told what had happened to Pam Keith. Murdered!" shuddered Mother.

"Why I can't believe it, Letty! Who on earth did it?"

"That's what we—and the police —would like to know," said Peter.

"I thought it was strange Doctor Courtney came back to Washington after all these years," declared Mother. "He never did forgive Pamela for walking out on their marriage. His was madly in love with her and I remember a tale of what a difficult time his parents had with him when he was small. He hogwild for nearly a year; then he settled down and finished medical school—and, of course became a famous surgeon. Perhaps he went to bailing Pamela all these years."

"How about Luke Cramer?" mused Dad. "He was engaged to Mrs. Keith but I certainly saw him the other afternoon in the cocktail lounge at eight and asked me to come and I'd said, "Sure I'd like to, fine, fine."

After Reginald directed me to the blue-and-gold guest room adjoining Mother's and I began to unpack my two bags, I telephoned Luke Cramer at the Mayflower. Clem had asked me to write 700 words and I knew that when I'd stumbled across Pamela Keith's murdered body, I should have done so and had sent the article off by messenger. I was wonderful, I'd thought. I'd done a good job and if so, what would come of it. Maybe I'd get to be a real reporter!

Luke's wife, Red-Head," Clem said, enthusiastically. "I've got the jitters. I'm so jumpy I keep looking around my office chair to see if anyone is sneaking up on me. Maybe you can write us that."

When I hung up, I was glowing. Maybe you can write! The words kept ringing in my head. I began whirling about the room in delight; then remembered that I was in the house of mourning, a house of tragedy. I dropped in my chair and found the maid staring at me disapprovingly.

"Is Miss Sandra awake?" I asked when I recovered some poise.

"Yes, Miss Randolph," she said and I went over to the door that connected my room with Sandra's and knocked lightly. There was no answer so I banged again. No answer. My heart stood still!

The next time I should knocked Sandra's door down and a small, far-away voice said, "Come in."

Sandra was lying back against black and silver pillows, her golden hair twisted up into three loose curls on the top of her head which heightened and potential beauty. Her lovely blue marabou bed-cape was around her shoulders and socks on her big feet. Beside her was the food untouched. She was almost pallidwhich got it across to me and, as I went over to her, she put out one of her hands and took the rough mine in it, hard.

"I can't tell you how sorry I am about — everything," I managed thickly, for Sandra's wan little face hurt me.

"You're so good to stay with me, Who are you?" her voice was shock. "Everyone's so good." She bit her lower lip, and it suddenly came to me that Sandra's father should have been with her a few days. They had planned to fly to Florida this morning. Mary Lewis had been sent by a congressman and his wife for two months but now the police would let them leave town and they have no place to go. Every hotel in town is full. You know how it is in Washington now," I felt responsible for her. Luke had telephoned this morning. He's on his way here now.

"I should have stayed with you last night," I said, looking at Sandra's circled eyes that she hadn't slept at all. "I was—added it was—but I was thinking of anyone but myself. You should have asked me to stay, Sandra."

"I was added too, Letty. I still am."

Pop was leaning back in his private chair on his way to the sporting page and me said, I hope you notice you're reading comfortably because of my virtues.

So I am, by gollies, pop said. This lamp has apparently decided to work again. A lamp is like a woman, you never know what it's going to do next. That's why every lamp is feminine in French, la lamp. Well, I'm glad la lamp has made up her mind to give me a little more service, he said, and me said, I dont doubt you're glad, but the lamp had very little to do with it, I mean it. Clem thought I'd screwed in a new bulb and if so, what would come of it. Maybe I'd get to be a real reporter!

ROLL OF QUISLINGS CALLED London, Aug. 29 —(CP)—The American broadcasting station in Europe (ABSIE) last night began calling the roll of quislings in Nazi-occupied countries, those who will stand trial with German war criminals.

French Troops Drive Thru Nimes

Rome, Aug. 29 (AP)—French troops of the 7th Army, in sweeping across France, reached Dess and drove through Nimes, pushing to within 20 miles of Spain's buffer to help wipe out the battered German 19th Army already cut off in the Rhone Valley, front reports said today.

Surprise thrust far to the north, beyond Nimes, a city of 68,000 population 14 miles beyond the Rhone, was French columns moving 70 miles along the Rhone in a drive toward the French-Spanish border.

Other French columns, operating west and northwest of Avignon for at least 30 miles to the Toulouse area, control of a kingdom north of which the Germans and Vichyites are battling against the Americans north of Montélimar, some 45 miles from Avignon.

The flying column under the command of Brig.-Gen. Frederic Butler which reached the Montélimar area Friday, after inflicting whatever punishment on at least one force of 15,000 German troops, killing many and capturing many others and remainder, continued to spread out through the valley region.

Reports from there said roads were strewn with destroyed German transport and other vehicles.

500 Bottles Whiskey Stolen From Store

Toronto, Aug. 29 —(CP)— More than 500 bottles of Canadian rye whisky were stolen from the Ontario liquor store in Central Toronto by a ring of thieves who also battered a large hole through a brick wall with sledge hammers, it was learned today. The liquor, at bottle prices, was valued at $6,000.

The Liquor Control Board of Ontario Board reported the retail price of the stolen liquor exceeded $1,500.

Police said the thieves battered a hole large enough to pass a case through the wall. They then left the job of making the hole took at least an hour for the wall was one foot thick.

Neighbors questioned by police said they had not heard any noise during the night. The store is close to a railway line and police believe the thieves worked while trains passed.

Forty cases were said to have been taken and loaded on a truck. Police believe the thieves took part in the robbery and are being aided by Liquor Control Board employees in their search for the burglars.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 29 —(CP)—Sizable losing declines were scored by the industrials and both mining groups at noon today on Toronto Exchange and the western oils held firm. Trading was quiet and only 362,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours.

The industrials registered a pronounced degree of strength in the steel, building, food, liquor and bank groups. Senior oils and papers held steady. Gains of a half-point came out for Hiram Walker, International Metals A, Consumers Gas and United Fuel A.

Strong spots in the golds included Wright-Hargreaves, Teck Hughes, Upper Canada, Malartic Gold Fields, Cochenour Willans, West Malartic and Macassa.

Nickel was a slightly stronger base metal and smelters was off 1/4.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 29. (AP)—Conservative stocks still were in command at stock market today and, while scattered peace issues advanced briefly, many leaders suffered from neglect. Belief the Allies were on their last laps was that their fall would find the home front not fully prepared for turning to normal operations remained the main argument against buying and investor caution. Trends were closely near the fourth year. Candidate stocks were quiet and soft.

Selling cost most of the time were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, U.S. Rubber, Northern Pacific, Westinghouse, International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft, South Porto Rico Sugar and U.S. Gypsum.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 29 —(CP)— Prices were steady on all grades on the opening Toronto here up to mid-session today. Calves, hogs, sheep and lambs were steady.

Prices reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle, choice steers and heifers $14.50-15.00; common and medium $9-11; cows $7.50-8.50; bulls $8-8.50; stockers $8.50-9.50.

Calves: $12.50-$14.50 for choice, others downward to $7; grass calves mostly $6.

Hogs, $17.65 for Grade A: sows $13 dressed.

Lambs $12-$13.50 for good ewes and wethers, $13-$12.50 for bucks, $6-$8 for culls.

Sheep: $3-$6.

Order Limits Sale Of Fluid Cream To June Level

Ottawa, Aug. 29—(CP)—Effective Sept. 1, distributors in approximately 80 of the principal markets in Canada may not sell more fluid cream for purposes of butterfat in any month than was sold by such distributors during June, the Prices Board announced today.

J. H. Olive, administrator of Dairy Products, said in a statement the order was issued because of the necessity of stabilizing the supply of butterfat and to help prevent further diversion of milk and cream from production of butter and cheese.

He said total demand for dairy products now exceeds total supply and steps must be taken to ensure that available supplies are distributed in a manner best suited to the various food needs of the Canadian people.

"In January, 1943, the sale of whipping cream was prohibited and all cream sold was limited to a butterfat content in accord with the corresponding months of 1942, and the quantity of butter in stock on Aug. 1 was 40,000,000 pounds, short of the quantity held at the same date last year.

"The trend in the consumption of butter and fluid milk is up, and with prospects for production during the remainder of 1944 distinctly less favorable, the proposed action in connection with sales or cream for purposes of butterfat is necessary. The record prolonged drought in Eastern Canada where a large percentage of the milk is produced, brought about a marked decline in milk production, and the lack of rain in many areas has seriously affected feed supplies for dairy herds."

The new restrictions do not apply to sales by a farmer to a dairy, creamery, distributor or manufacturer of dairy products or to sales between distributors or manufacturers.

Following are the areas in Ontario to which the new order applies:

Ontario — Belleville, Brantford, Brockville, Chatham, Cornwall, Fort William, Galt, Guelph, Hamilton, Kingston, Kitchener, Lindsay, London, Niagara Falls, Oshawa, Ottawa, Owen Sound, Pembroke, Peterborough, Port Arthur, Sarnia, Sault Ste. Marie, Stratford, St. Thomas, St. Thomas, Sudbury, Timmins, Toronto, Welland, Waterloo, Windsor and Woodstock.

His broadcast communique also said a Polish battalion formed in Yugoslavia had participated distinguished itself in Bosnia."

Belleville, Aug. 29 (CP)—Premier J. R. McNair of New Brunswick, in a statement issued today on the result of yesterday's general election that saw his government returned to power, said the outcome was "a vote of confidence in New Brunswick's people."

"Our program," he said, "is one of vigorous development of our natural resources and our industries, designed to obtain lasting prosperity by using this program of development, you have turned your backs on those who have been preached too long concerning the problems of this province. Christmas Parcels Must Be Mailed Before October 25

Ottawa, Aug. 28 (CP)—Postmaster General Mulock announced today that Christmas gift parcels to members of the armed forces in the United Kingdom and France must be mailed this year before Oct. 25, and parcels for troops in more remote theatres of war must be mailed between Sept. 15 and Oct. 10.

Parcels for the Far East, India, Burma, Ceylon etc., must be mailed by Sept. 15. Gifts for the Middle East area—Egypt, Iran, Iraq, Syria, etc., must be posted by Oct. 5. Deadline for parcel mailings to the central Mediterranean forces has been set at Oct. 10.

Col. Mulock said in view of the rapid progress of the war the dates set might possibly be subject to change.

The authorities urged that parcels be kept below the maximum weight of 11 pounds as a greater number of parcels could be shipped. Careful attention to correct addressing and proper packing of parcels also was urged.

Member Enters Prohibited Areas, He and Wife Fined

London, Aug. 28 (CP-Reuter) — Britain's "battle of the beaches" — conflict with authorities over prohibited areas—reached a new stage today when a Conservative member of parliament, Sir Herbert Williams, was fined 10 guineas (about $46.50) for entering the prohibited area of a beach. His wife was fined five shillings.

Sir Herbert, who was alleged to have told a detective that members of parliament were out to stop "this tyrannical conduct," gave notice of appeal.

Holidaymakers were reported recently to have balked in defiance of regulations after seeing soldiers bathing and since then the government announced more sections of the beaches would be opened.

Low Temperatures Set New Records Across the Line

New York, Aug. 28 (AP) — From Wichita to Boston the United States shivered in September low temperatures yesterday.

It never got above 65 in Kansas City, the third day in a row that the thermometer had set a record for a low maximum. And a mark that had stood for 66 years in Charlotte, N.C., fell chattering when the mercury dipped to 54.8.

Fires were lit in North Georgia (low 59), and in Indianapolis (56), while fall clothes were trotted out on New York's fifth Avenue (57). Boston had a low of 53, Des Moines and Detroit 52.

The queerest quirk came in Kansas. Not only was it cold, it was wet. And on these normally hot, dry Kansas plains cold and wet are two adjectives usually out of place this time of year.

Streams which in many a Kansas August won't run a cupful a month are gushing from bank to bank, with flood stages reported.

Lloyd Douglas of Toronto, Canadian Commissioner of Baseball, has been named director of the playoff.

AMERICANS 38 MILES FROM BELGIAN BORDER

Baltic Ports of Konigsberg, Stettin Blasted

Two Great Allied Wings Slicing Up Northern France

Nazi Command Announces Withdrawal From Rouen

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
(Ap War Correspondent)

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Aug. 30, (AP)— American steel and infantry thrust to within 38 miles of the Belgian border today, nearing Laon and rolling up the Seine remnants retreating from the Aisne River, while along the Allied front to the west the British Second Army Command reported enemy withdrawal from Rouen on the southern object of the present 1st Canadian army drive.

Earlier, headquarters reported the Canadians had already reached Rouen, three miles southeast of Rouen, but there was no immediate confirmation here of the fall of that former German stronghold.

The German garrison had destroyed Rouen's port facilities before they left it.

Meanwhile British troops carved their way at one point 30 miles north of the Seine northwest of Paris and the sea, driving on the Somme-bomb coast.

Two great Allied wings were swiftly slicing up Northern France. Near the east end of the battle line, the U.S. 3rd Army, rolling forward toward Paris from new bridgeheads over the Aisne at Soissons and Pont-Arcy-Berry-au-Bac, or seat, struck within two miles of Laon, 38 miles from the Belgian border. The Belgian border was but 38 miles ahead of them northeastward, and more than a mile an hour.

Other units of Lieut. Gen. Patton's army pressed on to Montaigu, 18 miles southeast of Laon, and 12 miles from Sedan, one of the Nazi break-through into France in 1940.

East of Paris the doughboys cleaned up Vitry le Francois on the Upper Marne. It is 96 miles from the German frontier and 40 miles from Verdun, Site of one of the First Great War. They closed on Chalons Sur Marne and pushed on. Other headquarters said, without confirming reports Chalons had been taken.

Enemy Line Being Cut Up

Germans, Co-passed and cut up by lightning armored strokes, were being killed or captured in great columns in a great area northeast and east of Paris.

The German also declared today that all the 7th Army remnants had been pushed back across the Seine from the disastrous traps in Seine from the disastrous traps in Normandy. Allied communiques said German armies still were trapped in two big loops of the river.

British forces advancing 30 miles north of their Seine bridgehead at Vernon captured Longchamps and Malmontel.

The Americans and British over the Seine were driving into a 25-mile front, driving northward toward the Pas de Calais, hoping for wrecking any German hope of a stand on the Seine River.

Outflanking Le Havre

The strategic port of Le Havre was rapidly being outflanked.

With the battle for Southern France nearing completion on the two great Allied invasion forces liberating France now stood only 300 miles apart. The distance had been narrowed by an American push 15 miles beyond Sens, southeast of Paris, to Pissy.

Allied troops were cleaning up the northeastern outskirts of Paris and advancing on the northwest toward an early junction with the forces already over the Seine.

The bridgehead over the Seine in the Elbeuf-Oissel area, 10 miles southeast of Rouen, was expanded until now it almost touches the British. A blazing would form a solid Canadian - British - American front over the river.

The battle for Brest on the tip of Brittany peninsula continued against stubborn resistance.

Bradley Is Given Equal Status With Gen. Montgomery

By WILLIAM FRYE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Aug. 30 —(AP)— A new command organization in France giving Lt.-Gen. Bradley equal status with Gen. Montgomery as an army group commander was reported today to be nearly ready for formal announcement.

Such a command change previously was reported by correspondents at General Eisenhower's headquarters. The report was received critically by some in Britain, however, who interpreted equal status for Bradley as a "demotion" for Montgomery. In the original invasion organization, Montgomery, not Bradley, had the command of all British troops but also was under command of all Allied ground forces.

After publication of these criticisms, the command was issued at Allied Supreme Headquarters Aug. 16 which said:

"It is officially stated at Supreme Headquarters that announcement of General Bradley's command of the 12th Army Group in no way affects the position of General Montgomery as over-all commander of all Allied ground forces in France under General Eisenhower."

Persons close to those with the situation said today, however, that the British criticisms were unwarranted and that the change had been inevitable since Gen. Eisenhower took his headquarters to France and assumed personal command of the operations.

British Troops Reach Chindwin R.

Kandy, Ceylon, Aug. 30. (CP) British forces driving into Western Burma in pursuit of Japanese troops retreating from India reached the Chindwin River yesterday at Hewmale, an Allied communique announced today.

Parisians Emerging From German Occupation With Chic Unshattered

By MAURICE DESJARDINES
(CP War Correspondent)

Paris, Aug. 30 —(CP)— The people of Paris still form long queues for bread but they don't look starved. Three days of the German now and they know food is being rushed to the city by all means available to the Allies.

During the triumphal entry into Paris the other day one laughing Parisienne was asked how she had managed to get a new hat for the figure.

"Only to make the Boche mad," she replied, "but thank God he's gone, it was getting monotony to have to do it any longer."

She wore a trimmer skirt with a daring slit revealing the shapely thousands of others she was riding a bicycle.

Behind the gaiety, of course, half-hysterical scenes as Paris was liberated.

On the Boulevard Raspail our jeep was surrounded by a group of lads of the French Forces of the Interior, who had been stalking the Germans in the area. Just then six motorcycles roared by followed by a car in which rode Gen. de Gaulle.

One of the youths became speechless. At last he had seen the man for whom he had been fighting. He stared kissing everyone in sight. Then he threw back his head and cried like a child.

Paris is full of refugees now from the countryside, hundreds of them Jews, who had been hiding in the woods. Then the word got out that the Germans had been gassed, hanged, shot, burned, drugged or starved to death in the camps. Now the Nazi-Fascist barbed-wire-enclosed encampment in a rolling moorland at the edge of Lublin. Russians and Poles have established that it received more than 500,000 persons doomed to extermination.

Majdanek is a ghastly fantasy. It was established for murder on a vast but methodical scale. Until a group of British and American correspondents visited it, together with its air of concrete vaults for execution by cyanide or carbon monoxide and its huge concrete storium surrounded with skeletons, its mounds of human ashes mixed with manure for fertilizing cabbage patches and its oven-carpeted ground in a place where carpeted with decaying bodies—most of these correspondents could not even begin to imagine the proportions of its frightfulness.

Clothes Rack of Dead.

That night, our clothes still reeking of the dead, we sat in a stuffy Lublin courtroom while three German officials in the service of Himmler and one German civilian renegade spoke indifferently of Majdanek's account of slaughter and blamed all on "orders from above."

The witnesses were N. A. Stalh, Theodore Scholten, Anton Ternes and Hermann Graebe. The last testified:

"I have seen a tractor haul as many as 400 corpses at one time from the bath and disinfection house to the burning pits.

"One day I saw the bodies of 137 Polish children, who had been gassed. Another time I saw a group of Polish women smothered in a hill to which I came with the trouble of gassing them. They were ordered to undress. One hundred and fifty were 26 to 28. Two men tied her hands and legs to her and on a steel stretcher and thrust her alive into the white hot oven."

FRIGHTFUL STORY OF NAZI CRUELTY TOLD TO NEWSMEN

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Lublin, Poland, Aug. 30—(AP)— Poor German prisoners of war stood with a bored air in front of a Russian-Polish atrocities commission here and told their stories of Majdanek, perhaps the greatest horror in Nazi Europe.

In curt phrases they said that men, women and children of 22 nationalities had been gassed, hanged, shot, burned, drugged or starved to death in the camp. Now the operation of the Majdanek barbed-wire-enclosed encampment in a rolling moorland at the edge of Lublin, Russians and Poles have established that it received more than 500,000 persons doomed to extermination.

POLAND GROPING ITS WAY BACK TO FREEDOM, PEACE

Provisional Govt. at Lublin Exercising Wide Authority

THOUSANDS DRILL

By DANIEL DE LUCE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Lublin, Poland, Aug. 30 (AP)—A Poland unbroken in spirit after five years as a Nazi slaughterhouse gropes courageously today for a new life of freedom and peace.

In Lublin, 35 miles behind the Red Army front and 900 miles from Moscow, a provisional government is functioning.

Roman Catholicism continues as the state religion and priests teach in the public schools. Church property and lands are untouched.

Thousands of young Poles, most of them still in civilian clothes, for uniforms are scarce, drill in the cobble-stoned streets under grimly veterans of guerilla warfare—recruits for a Polish army that is expected soon to be 500,000 men and women. Women carry arms and serve in all types of national defence except actual combat.

Political Parties

A few score Jews, all that are left of the pre-war Ghetto population of 40,000, never can efface the memory of the German terror but in this new Poland—whose national committee includes a prominent Zionist—there are no barriers of race or creed against them.

Anti-clericism gets back on the outskirts of Lublin and high-flying German observation planes are a daily sight. The stench from the infamous Majdanek prison camp where it is estimated 800,000 persons' victims of Nazi sadism were sent to death within view of Lublin's cathedral spire, becomes a nauseating reminder when the wind is from the east.

Still In Agony of War.

Poland still is in the agony of war. Lublin citizens know there kilofolk have been dying by thousands in the smoldering ruins of Warsaw, but here, where the front is the government offices. Polish lodges and police conduct the administration of justice and Polish newspapers forecast an era of prosperity democracy. Polish pride and hope are reborn.

Standing in busy Krakow street beside the big bomb-wrecked clock tower, you meet Poles great and small who speak with unspeakable hatred of past German tortures and with determination of rebuilding a strong independent Poland.

BRITISH, POLISH TROOPS 18 MILES FROM PO VALLEY

Smash Through Veteran Nazi Parastroopers in Opening New Drive

STRIKE AT COAST

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, Aug. 30—(AP)— Smashing through veteran German parachute troops in the 21st full-blown attack on the Italian front in recent week, British and Polish forces are driving the enemy off his last hill positions before the Adriatic and the Gothic Line and are within 18 miles of the Po valley rim.

Heavy fighting was reported as the British 8th Army dislodged the crack Nazi 1st Parachute Division from the Argenta Gap defile, and since crossing the Argilla River.

The Poglia flows into the Adriatic at the heavily-fortified town of Pesaro which would be threatened if, with being outflanked if the advance further inland were continued.

On the coast British forces operating with the Poles advanced more than two miles beyond Fano.

Capture of the ridge overlooking the Poglia River put 8th Army elements in Monte Cicgardo, eight miles southwest of Pesaro. Further to the southwest other units reached Colbordolo, 18 miles south southwest of Pesaro, and were on heights within 1,000 yards of Poglia.

Destroyer Supports Attack.

Urbino, 19 miles southeast of Pesaro, fell to another column driving toward the Gothic Line through the mountains, headquarters announced.

The Naval Command in Italy said that a British destroyer had supported the advance by bombarding the fortified Pesaro area.

In the centre of the Italian front the Germans continued stubbly pugnacious fight from strong defences in the Northern Appenines.

Fighting continued nearly five miles north from Pontassieve in the big bend of the Arno River, east of Florence. British patrols found the enemy gone from Collignano, three thousand feet west of Pontassieve.

Florence itself was reported quiet with the Germans evidently giving whale operations on the Allied 8th Army front were limited to patrolling.

Allied aircraft supported the attack in the Adriatic sector, bombing and strafing enemy positions.

GERMANS LEAVE STRONGHOLDS ON THE BLACK SEA

Russians Appeal To Bulgars for Support In Quick Liberation Of the Balkans

NEW HUNGARIAN GOVT.

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press War Correspondent

Moscow, Aug. 30 —(AP)—The Soviet German fled today from their last strongholds on the Black Sea at Russia, with troops within 30 miles of Bulgaria, appealed to the Bulgars for support in quick liberation of the Balkans.

The capture of Constanta, Roumania's largest port, appeared likely to be followed within a few days by the capture or routing of scattered German forces in the Bucharest-Ploesti area by swiftly moving Red Army columns last reported 37 miles to the northeast.

The Nazi rout in-Wallachia Province was so disorderly that retreating columns were without communication, little sabotage was reported in the Ploesti oil fields.

"The German communique said Russian attacks were smashed in the central area of Roumania and that Soviet troops invading Transylvania, part of Hungary since 1940, were thrown back in counter-attacks.

New Govt. in Hungary.

With Hungary in the hands of a new government of generals and the Germans hastily increasing their garrisons in the area of Slovakia, central Europe continued to be stirred by reports as well as mistakenly by the power blows of Red Army troops under Generals Rodion, Y. Malinovsky and Fedor I. Tolbukhin.

The Russians are in a position to capitalize immediately upon new defection by Nazi Satellites on the eastern fringe of the Reich.

Bulgaria was warned that passive neutrality by the Sofia regime constituted defeat of Hungary, too, was predicted officially by the Soviet press. Turkey, too, was under Russian front.

An hour after the attack upon Stettin, the Air Ministry said, reconnaissance revealed that from very large fires rising to a great height.

Bombs presented clear observation of the results at Konigsberg, which was attacked for the second time in two nights.

Both Berlin and Hamburg were also hit by speedy Mosquitos, which carry a bomb load of 4,000 pounds.

The Air Ministry said the night operations many mines were laid in enemy waters.

The Local Front Italy.

Up to 730 heavy U. S. bombers from Italy also struck yesterday in tactical support of the Russian drive pushing through Roumania by bombing Hungarian rail bridges and routes at Szolnok, 60 miles east of enemy barracks and trains moving through that threatened Balkan area.

Some of these planes flew into Czechoslovakia and bombed steel works at Moravska Ostrava, the largest plate-rolling mill in Europe. The Mediterranean Allied air forces struck transport targets in Austria, Italy, Yugoslavia and Southern France as well as destroying 12

Greatest Masses Of Heavy Bombers Ever Dispatched

Mosquitos Stab Berlin, Hamburg; 41 Bombers Lost in Night Raids

London, Aug. 30 (CP)—Large formations of American bombers battered the continent today, bombing the German ports of Kiel and Stettin through clouds and the robot platforms in northern France.

Very heavy forces of British bombers before dawn supported the American armies of the north with attacks on the Nazi Baltic ports of Kiel and Konigsberg, and Mosquitoes hurled many two-ton blockbusters on battered Berlin and Hamburg.

Weather Bad.

Weather was bad today and bombers cast their explosives by instruments through clouds. One communique said one bomber returned over the robot bomb sites and that all fighters returned. No mention was made of bases of Kiel and Konigsberg.

Up to 500 heavy bombers with fighter escort assembled at the Pas De Calais targets. More than 200 heavy bombers and 200 fighters went over the German ports.

The flying-bomb targets are just in front of advancing Allied armies in northern France.

Since dawn 1,000 heavy bombers participated in the overnight and all-day pounding of communications. Over 300 tons of high explosives and incendiaries were dropped on Stettin and other great cargo of destruction upon Konigsberg. Forty-one aircraft, including one Canadian failed to return. Canadian participation in these operations was announced in Ottawa.

Robot Launching-Site Located In Apple Orchard Near Rouen

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Holaney, France, Aug. 30 —(CP) —Hidden in an apple orchard near this tiny village about 25 miles southwest of Rouen we have located the largest launching-site for flying bombs yet discovered, and the first German "V" weapon.

R. A. F. officers who have examined the emplacement, with its carefully-camouflaged 150-foot ramp also believe it is the launching site or one "secret weapons."

In the past few weeks a various kinds of concrete constructions and excavations have been mistaken for such sites, so when we set out yesterday morning in the rain, following a clue given by a Canadian officer, we weren't certain that our search wouldn't lead only to a German pill-box or an installation for an ammunition or oil dump.

The construction was built by the Germans on a piece of farm property requisitioned from the French owner. The work started last June 9, and heavy labor ended D-Day, June 6, when a group of German specialists was due to arrive. Evidently hostilities put an end and install technical equipment.

The area, which consists of and concrete-laying was carried on in such secrecy that only the farmer and his family knew about it, is about 200 feet from the site—suspected what was going on.

Other persons in the sprawling village knew only that a number of 25 conscripted laborers was pouring concrete under directions of German supervisors in civilian clothes.

Czech Underground Now Fighting Unit

London, Aug. 30. (CP)— The Czechoslovak underground army came into the open today as a fighting unit. In its first communique, delivered to London by underground Russian armies of the north with the town and fierce fighting against the Germans in many areas.

The communique issued by the Czechoslovak Press Bureau said:

"German fury has increased has since Aug. 26 been occupying Slovakia. Czechoslovak troops in Slovakia, together with guerilla detachments have offered resistance to the Germans.

"According to reports so far received, the town of Cadaca, on the frontier between Slovakia and Moravia, has been taken by the insurgents."

Heavy fighting has been reported from the regions of Zilina, Povazska, Bystric and Trencin".

May Soon Repeal Order-in-Council

Ottawa, Aug. 30. (CP)— Hon. Leslie Blackwell, Ontario Attorney-General said today that the Federal Government is considering proving Liquor sales to 10 per cent of the pre-war figure. The order-in-council ended Oct. 31, 1943, "no doubt soon will be repealed."

His remark came in an address of welcome to the Canadian Bar Association annual meeting after an expression of regret that Ontario appeared to be discriminated against as much as might be desirable because of the Federal restriction.

German planes at the cost of 31.

Russian armies formed a German map supply convoy off the Lithuanian port of Libau shelling a 12-mile-ten ship and two submarines. Moscow's communique listed 37 towns captured in the Baltic east.

The importance of Konigsberg and Stettin to the German army facing Russia cannot be overestimated. Stettin, in connection with waterway with Berlin and provides an alternate route to rail-road itself is more supplied and to tunnel refuges out of the Baltic Sea. Stettin also is probably more important presently to Germany than the Reich itself as the last British attack.

Press Report Large Fires.

Mosquitos in two groups dropped two-ton bombs in concentrated pattern on battered Berlin and Hamburg and the crews reported large fires were exploded.

Operations over the western Czechoslovak and Polish Ploesti fields were curtailed drastically by the weather, but despite fighters and cloud the clouds to smash rail traffic in France as far south as Lyon, in the Low Countries and western Germany.

Flying Fortresses destroyed or damaged 90 locomotives, 310 railcars, more than 300 motor vehicles, two roundhouses and two tunnels. They destroyed 30 German planes on an airborne mission.

English coastal residents heard a strong force of Lancaster bombers roaring through rain and low clouds over the Channel today in the direction of the French coast.

British Beaufighters attacked with rockets a five-vessel convoy in Halgoland Bight and left two flaming wrecks, a military ship and a merchant vessel wreathed in flames. Two attackers were lost.

Coming Events

Col. G. Peacock Of Salvation Army Addresses Kiwanis

Chief Secretary for the Salvation Army in the Canada, Newfoundland and Bermuda area, Col. G. W. Peacock of Toronto was the principal speaker at Kiwanis Luncheon on Tuesday, delivering an inspiring message emphasizing the power of spirit over material things.

"Filling His Own Stirrups That Matter," the chief secretary who has spent a lifetime in the Salvation Army work, quoted the words of Napoleon Bonaparte when he stated there were only two powers in the world, the sword and the spirit. Although in conflict with Napoleon had recognized the power of the spirit and stated that the sword had always been vanquished by the spirit. "Physical power can be broken by violence, but the spirit, never," said Col. Peacock. "Material worlds can be destroyed but the spirit lives on forever."

Giving as illustration the indomitable spirits of the British people which withstood the terrific aerial bombing by the German Luftwaffe, the speaker urged that in the new world to come spirit be the guiding things of the spirit if reptiles of confusion and chaos are to be escaped.

Himself a Kiwanian of long standing the speaker paid tribute to the service motto of service clubs, claiming that the Salvation Army duty to the world they must have vision. Organizations must have vision. Organizations must be supported if the motto is to be permanent and remain.

Col. Peacock was introduced by Kiwanian Cecil Fowler and club appreciation expressed by Norm Edwards.

In a brief business part of the meeting Taylor Preskins announced the club had already approximately $2,300 from the sale of tickets sold on the $1,000 Savings Bond which was drawn for at the recent carnival. The report on the complete returns of the carnival were not given as several bills are still outstanding. President Lt. Col. McVeigh presided over the meeting, while Phil Huddleston was introduced for Leo Riggs at the piano with Harold Carruthers acting as song leader.

A MODERN "JOAN" IN PARIS

Armed with a sub-machine-gun, this girl member of the French resistance movement is working with a patrol engaged in routing sniper nests from liberated Paris. Many of the laughter-loving French women fought with the gains of hate and zest with the Gestapo, flirting with death for the four years that Paris was under the Nazi heel.

Smart Young Bull Gets Fill Of Garden Produce Despite All Efforts To Keep Him Out

This is the story of the Wise Young Bovine. During his early childhood he showed signs of being a real prodigy. Intelligence gleamed in his soft brown eyes. He was immune to the comeand-play looks gentle young calves direct at their mothers. He had a future.

He grew to young bullhood. Sturdy, strong, he gave promise of becoming the best beef producer for brigadier-generals' messes. Free, untrammelled, he roamed at large over the 160 acres of range in Prince Edward County. He browsed at the lush shady side of a flock of pasture-land "Elsies" and did not forget to consort with bellowing to his audience of bovril bullocks.

Came the war. Land was needed for food production. So the young bull, now a yearling, was sent with his haystack baron, to the communal pasture on the Marshall Road.

For a while he was happy. Well-fed, well-watered, he basked in the attentions of his bovine playmates.

Finally this began to pall. One bright June morning, with hand-some neck across the pointed bars of the fenced garden, his eyes glimpsed the fresh greenness of a large garden owned by Mr. Thomas Peacock. He slipped gently down to the first stomach. Then his eyes turned wistfully in all directions. He walked away.

The next morning, he noticed his guards in close conversation. Eyes turned toward him at intervals. Quietly grazing, he watched them slowly walk toward him. In their hands they held a strange wooden contraption shaped like a horseshoe.

A few minutes later he hobbled away with the strange yoke about his neck. He tossed his head. He pawed the ground. He snarled his disgust of protest.

Then a look of intelligence gleamed in his soft brown eyes. Now had they known he had dined on delicious young lush grass the night previous? But in his right hoof, he still held his secret. He decided to himself.

The next morning bewildered humans passed at the damage done by a roaming animal. Gardens were trampled. Vegetables foliage. In the pasture Perdinand, the poke-neck grazed innocently. They did not see the smirk of wisdom on the intelligent face. They searched the fence. This bull, they decided, was a stepping-stone to the purple.

But Perdinand's secret was kept to himself. When nightfall came and his fears were beside down for the night, he quietly walked to a deep indenture in the ground, bent down and wriggled his body through the hole beneath the fence. Rising his fill, he quietly as returned by the same route.

For weeks this went on. Now, it is feared, poor Perdinand, is headed for beef and ultimately the steak factory. But he has had his day. He stained all of his bovine intelligence and got away with it for a while. He fooled the public for a while, and his reward—to fill it.

Impressive Memorial Service Held For 3 Tweed Boys Killed in Action

Tweed, Aug. 30. — On Sunday morning, August 27, Tweed United Church filled to the last pew with relatives and friends who came to Belleville for the memorial to the three young soldiers who gave their lives during the month of July for their King and Country. They are Flying Officer Kenneth Ross, Gunner "Bert" Reynolds and Capt. Don McCrae.

Rev. H. Merritt Price conducted the service in the absence of the pastor, Rev. C. C. McQuade.

The pulpit was draped with the Union Jack and flowers were placed on the altar by the members of the Official Board of the Church and other relatives and friends.

Choosing as his text, "My heart is disquieted within me, I cannot hold my peace, because thou hast heard O my soul, the sound of the trumpet, the alarm of war", Jeremiah 4:19, Rev. Price said, "The trumpet or bugle has been associated from the earliest history of mankind with great days and great deeds. Hosts of Israel marshalled by trumpets to cross the Red Sea, march through the wilderness, cross Jordan, and at Jericho took their first walled city and entered promised land. Trumpets also called the people to the great day of atonement, when men faced their failures, numbered their sins, and prepared their spirit in penitence to go forth onto the battlefields of life.

"So, for immemorial ages the trumpet speaks of the great days of life—marshals the army to the battle, and sounds the triumph of Victory,—and in the quiet of evening the 'Last Post' is sounding into the vast blue of Eternity, reminds us that it is through sacrifice that the day is won. It has ever been thus and will always be so till "The Trumpet of the Lord shall sound and time shall be no more".

"Man was born for a struggle", said the speaker. "Life is an uphill path to climb. Days of greatest hardships have produced earth's greatest men. Through intervals of time have been born Faith's greatest hours'.

"Periods of a few great days. But let us be mindful that plan of life is not finished great victories may open a door to a new and better day, but the feet of men may never enter the portals. So one day of triumph does not once and for all complete the task of building a world according to the mes-sage of Eternal God.

"Fruits of victory may fall upon the earth, and lie there, ungathered. The struggle must not be surrendered by a succeeding generation of men. The battle must be won over again by a future age. We are in just such a situation now," commented Mr. Price.

"Last war won—victory was ours, and deceived by peace we have passed our enemy—terms of peace signed at Versailles. But today—we can see many that these fruits of suffering and hardships and patience and hope—four long years of sacrifice and victory and sacrifice have fallen by the wayside, and the poppy fields of Flanders.

IN FLANDERS FIELDS

Take up our quarrel with the foe To you from falling hands we throw

The Torch. Be yours to hold it high.

If ye break faith with us who die We shall not sleep, though poppies grow

In Flanders fields.

"We are not in a struggle for our very life and for all the future of the world. We have passed through dark days but the very darkest of those days, when the British Empire stood alone, has become 'Our finest hour.' Never in history of human conflict has so much been owed by so many to so few.' On the set of that night in late stood men, who though ill equipped for the struggle were determined to fight on from the beach and among the hills on the landing grounds, we shall fight in the fields and in the streets, 'we shall never surrender,' through Normandy today sounded the rumble of a new army, sons of the warriors of a former crusade. Even this morning over the plains of Picardy and valley of the Somme, there is waving the 'Metzor Flag of England,' the "Stars and Stripes" of this great land, new Western World and joined by the tricolor of a new born France, and the standard of the Russian marching feet will again be heard. "In Flanders Fields" there will be

MARMORA

First War Bride Reaches Marmora

Marmora, Aug. 30—First war bride to arrive in Marmora and district here on Saturday in the person of Mrs. Dan Vesterfelt with her seven-months old daughter Sandra, to rejoin her husband, who returned repatried from the war some some months ago. Mrs. Vesterfelt stated she found the voyage pleasant and uneventful. There were about five hundred war brides on the ship which brought her to this country. Only seven contracted sea sickness during the trip. She was a native of Reigate, Surrey County, she testified that she had undergone the severest bombing experiences with the robot bombs. Her first home was totally damaged by the destructive weapon of war. The young mother stated that she became her second home. While none of her family were killed she was injured by the fallen debris, her step-father died from shock, sustained in one of the bombings. Describing the flight of a robot she likened it to a bicycle with a flame coming through the sky with a light which went out when the engine stopped. Then the robot would strike, she said, houses folded up like a pack of cards. Many had passed over the district she was in causing devastation further inland. She had great praise for the administrations of the Canadian Red Cross for the brides on their arrival in this country. Her little daughter is already winning the hearts of neighbors and friends.

Pravda asserted German diplomatic, military, aviation and commercial attaches still were in Ankara, long after their recalled departure.

This action carried the dateline of Batum, nearest Russian Black Sea port to Turkey, and was made over two columns on Pravda's foreign news page. Its significance could not be immediately appraised.

The United States Federal Communication reported a Moscow broadcast appealed to Spaniards to overthrow Franco regime and break with Germany "to gain a place for Spain among the democratic and freedom-loving nations."

The broadcast said "willing host for all Fascists who are trying to escape the people's justice."

Dumbarton Oaks

Never having heard of Dumbarton Oaks where the International Security Conference is now being held we were interested in reading something of its history. It is apparently a fine property and is located at Washington, D.C., and was once the centre of Washington's social highjinks.

The magnificent, rambling estate is headquarters for delegates of Great Britain, United States and Russia as they meet to ponder the future government of the world. In its earlier history Dumbarton Oaks was noted for stately musicales where visiting royalty was entertained. The famous and would-be famous fell over themselves with delight at an invitation to attend.

Informal conversations on the general nature of an international organization for the maintenance and security will go on for the next few weeks in the vast brick house which buzzes quietly during the school year with the scholarly historical delving of Harvard research experts. The library under the direction of Longfellow housed by the late-Georgian red brick structure, plus sixteen acres of rolling lawn and formal terraced gardens, were turned over to Harvard University in 1940 by the Honorable and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss.

They bought the estate in 1920, called it the answer to their dream of a country home near the city, and proceeded to spend many years of professional diplomatic life. Mr. Bliss, now special assistant to the Secretary of State, is a former Minister to Sweden and Ambassador to Argentina. Diplomatic posts have taken him to Puerto Rico, Venice, Petrograd, Brussels, Buenos Aires and Paris.

Title to the Dumbarton Oaks property goes back to Col. Ninian Beall, a Scotsman from Dumbarton, who got it by royal grant in 1702. His grandson sold it to William Dorsey, first judge of the orphans' court and up by Georgetown. In 1800 Mr. Dorsey began to build the 12-room house which is now the centre section.

It must have been an impressive project in 1800 for the Georgetown community consisting of 126 persons, moved its meagre archives and effects from Philadelphia and set up shop in the upstart village on the Potomac.

In the early 1800's the property was bought and sold again to James E. Calhoun. He loaned it to his brother, John C. Calhoun, who lived there a year as Secretary of War and two years as Vice-President. Four other owners occupied it before Robert Bliss bought the mansion in 1920, remodelled it, enlarged the gardens and planned the whole Dumbarton Oaks. The new wings were added in 1940 to house the Byzantine collection and research library.

Depending upon the agreements that are reached at the present conference, future generations may gaze with awe at the place where first plans for the new world government were made.

And Now This

There is nothing attractive about shapely limbs, says a Chicago chiropodist in a psychic clinch. Men could have them too, if they wore high heel shoes like the women. "Curvesome calves," he goes on, "are just distorted muscles bulging."

Hmm. Last week. Maybe it's the heat. Maybe it's the effect of unrequited love on the part of the toe-manipulator. Maybe he made that statement at a spinsters' convention with the spouse's forty-four playing "Dixie" on the south side of his midriff.

And listen to this.

The metatarsal maestros, at their annual convention went on record to put "America on its feet; extoll the charms of straight, trim legs, and advise wearing of high heels only for short periods."

Hoo-hum. Sherman was right. They're taken away gasoline; double-breasted coats; restricted the "foam;;" eased the "spirits;" new cars are out; maples are to be used as Christmas trees—and now, this.

No longer will youth and age congregate at street intersections and bus-stops at five p.m. on a windy day for the comely "curvesome calves" that induced long-drawn whistles from wistful wolves with today's age and yesterday's ideas, are to be modelled after the broom-handle type. Occupants of the bald-headed row at night clubs will at last discover the color of the crowning glory of their favorite chorines.

On the boulevard, it will mean the elimination of kinks in masculine necks. On the beaches, lifeguards, nose in air, will be called upon to rescue stilt-legged gals from knee-deep predicaments in the sand. Give them an ostrich feather bathing-suit, and the Wolf Brigade will bury collective heads in the sand with the precision of a platoon of Guards.

But that is not all. Imagine the portly playboys who haven't seen their legs in twenty years, tripping down to the office in high heel shoes in an effort to induce the development of the "bulging distorted muscles" that would do nicely as a hideout for varicose veins.

But we do not think for a minute that the girls themselves will be fooled by the above suggestions. They understand. And their understanding is good enough for us. Putting it on a straight up and down basis is unnecessary.

What! No Whiskey?

(Hamilton Spectator)

Alarm was felt throughout Eire when it was learned that there was a prospect of a scarcity of Irish whiskey. Customers would have had to step in and make an order to conserve supplies.

Speculators tried to make a "corner" in supplies in anticipation. According to the information on which the Government acted, certain persons bought whisky in bond with the intention of leaving it there until after the war, when the reckoned they would be able to cash in on the scarcity, by that time inevitable.

The new order will put a curb on such enterprising people, and preserve for those who must have their "drop of the craytur" sufficient to enable them to carry on.

Russ Test Old Cures

Reports to Moscow from the Soviet Republic of Kirghizia say modern therapeutic tests have proved substantial values have been found in ancient treatments of diseases practiced in Tibet and China. Modern medicine has made some changes in the old technique after exhaustive study. The research was begun in 1943 under direction of the Republic's Health Department. Work on native medicines in Kirghizia was carried on jointly by the chemical-pharmaceutical Scientific Research Institute, Medical Institute and Academy of Sciences Kirghiza Branch Botanical Garden. The Garden furnished some 200 native plants for preparation of remedies. One plant, a conjugate-leaf perennial which grows throughout Kirghizia, was found to be particularly effective in relieving nervous exhaustion and heart weakness.

Too Much

Men of science are bubbling over with ideas for creating a fuller life for all of us after manufacturing for victory has ended to cater to the demands of the consumer market. Some of these ideas are really attractive, and some are quite horrible. In the latter category comes the proposal of William B. Stout, an aircraft and automobile designer, that after the war we will have automobiles that fly. Please, Mr. Stout, don't make them. Motorists drive now it hard enough now, when we only have to keep our eyes roving from side to side, and from front to rear. Just think of having to watch overhead and underneath for them, too!

Someone once likened war to fishing. Be that as it may, it is to be hoped that the "Big Spur" will not be one reason to mention the "big ones that got away," after the final curtain has fallen.

JUST FOLKS

TRAGEDY AND A MORAL

All teachers looked upon as wise
Insist that none should moralize
Or point an inference from an act.
Sufficient to itself is fact
And clearly stated, 'tis the law
All shall their own conclusions draw.

Yet, once a dismal tale I read
Of two men in a cabin, dead;
Brothers, past seventy years! The fact
A sorry, suicidal pact.
The elder—does the method shock—
Brained with the pendulum of a clock!

Done with the furious, horrid blows,
The younger from the floor arose
And by a draught of poison died.
Later when men an entry pried
They found them: two who'd wished to die,
Vial and pendulum near by!

From this what grim conclusion draw?
A thoughtful friend the story saw
And mused: "How foolish! Had they stayed,
That pendulum had swung and swayed,
Ticked off the seconds, as God willed,
And just as surely both had killed!"

Welcome He Got From the Parisians

(By ERNIE PYLE)

Paris—(By Wireless, delayed)— I had thought that for me there could never again be any station in war. But I had reckoned without the liberation of Paris—I had reckoned without the Parisians. That scoring was as follows: A. J. Stewart 97; D. J. Corrigan 96; Arthur Harman 95; R Day 94; H. Holton 94; H. Sneyd 92.

We are in Paris—on the first day news of the great days of all time. This is being written, as other correspondents are writing their pieces, under an enormous tension. A semi-up semi-delirium.

Our approach to Paris was hectic. We had waited for three days in a nearby town while hourly our reports on what was going on in Paris changed and contradicted themselves. Or seeming to change would look as though we were about to break through the German ring around Paris and come to the aid of the brave French Forces of the Interior who were already parts of the city. By afternoon it would seem the city-wide revolt reinforced until another Stalingrad was developing. We could not bear to think of the destruction of Paris, and yet at times it seemed desperately inevitable.

That was the situation this morning when we left Rambouillet and decided to feel our way timidly toward Paris, prepared for a possible fight. And then, when we were within about eight miles, rumors began to circulate that the French Second Armored Division was in the city. We argued for half an hour at a crossroads with a French captain who thought it was a trap, and we finally decided to go on.

For 15 minutes we drove through a flat gardenlike country under a magnificent bright sun and amidst greenery, with distant banks of smoke pillaring the horizon ahead and to our left. And then we came gradually into long avenues, and we came into Paris itself and a pandemonium of surely the greatest mass joy that has ever happened.

★ ★ ★

The streets were lined as by Fourth of July parade crowds at home, only this crowd was almost hysterical. Thousands of Paris are very wide, and they were packed on each side, two rows deep, and were brightly dressed in white or red blouses and many with peasant skirts with flowers in their hair and big flashy earrings. Everybody was throwing flowers and shouting and singing.

As our jeep eased through the crowds, thousands of people crowded up, leaning only a hand on our door, and frantic men, women and children grabbed us and kissed us and shook our hands and beat on our shoulders and slapped our backs and shouted their joy as we passed.

I was in a jeep with Henry Gorrell of the United Press, Capt. Carl Fergison of Washington, D. C., and Corp. Alexander Belon, of Amherst, Mass. We had got kissed until we were literally red in face, and I must say, we liked it.

Once when the jeep was simply swamped in human traffic and had to stop, a girl in a white dress suddenly hugged and kissed and torn all Everybody, even kissed me. I insisted on kissing you on both cheeks. Somehow I got confused. Kissing ladies that were held up by their parents, and for a while it looked like a baby-kissing contest to the folks in the street. The fact that I hadn't shaved for two days and was bearded as well as baldheaded, made no difference. Once when we came to a halt, a young woman told us there were still snipers shooting, so we should not get out and get back on.

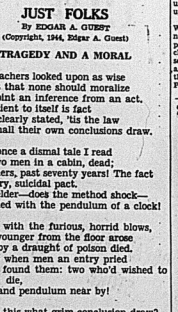
The people certainly looked well and fed and well dressed. The streets were lined with green trees and modern buildings, and the shops were closed in holiday. Bicycles were in use by the thousands, and there have been plenty accidents today with tanks and jeeps overrunning the pedestrians.

We entered Paris via Rue Aristide Briand, which leads to the Seine. We were slightly apprehensive, but we felt it was all right to keep going as long as there were no shots. But finally we were stymied by the people in the street. Everywhere above the din we heard some notes of Marseillaise and we saw a Norwegian trying to destroy bridges across the Seine. And then the rattling of machine guns, and we knew that that old battlefield whine of high-velocity shells. Our correspondents' duty of us veterans ducked, but the people just laughed and continued to cheer.

There came running over to our jeep Lt. Col. Andre Dewavrin in a light brown dress, who spoke perfect American.

She was Mrs. Helen Cardon, who lived in Paris for 21 years and has been married to a Frenchman since 1936. Her husband is an officer in the French Army. She returned to her home now after two and a half years as a German prisoner. He was with her in the Resistance Movement.

Mrs. Cardon has a sister, Mrs. Genevieve Tabouis, in New York City. New York, and I can say here to Genevieve in America that she is well and happy. Incidentally, her two children, Edgar and Peter, are in England. Mrs. Cardon's son, she says, who have been in Paris throughout the entire war.



★ ★ ★

We entered Paris from the south and the Germans were still battling in the heart of the city along the Seine. We were told that they were doomed. There was a sniper in front of the Hotel de Ville in the city, plus American troops entering constantly.

The hottest we got in our first hour in Paris was near the Senate building. There some Germans were holed up and firing desperately. A French cook a hotel room nearby and decided to do the writing that was dictating. Mrs. Cardon and the thousand little things like that never previously had occurred to the master of the house.

Complicating things were the problems of wartime living of which the men had complained but never before had really met head on.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK!

36 Square Miles Of Twp. Staked

Toronto, Aug. 29—(CP)—The Ontario Department of Mines said today that 36 square miles in the area of Midlothian Township, 50 miles northeast of Timmins, Ontario's Big Gold Camp, has been staked solid by gold-seekers, and that the stampede rush now has spread to adjoining townships to the east and north.

"An official of the department" said the staking rush in the area was the largest in Ontario in years, and that many of the larger mining companies are interested.

The Midlothian discovery was made about 16 days ago by Felix Roche and first news of the find was made public Aug. 23.

A Mines Department Official said department geologists will be sent to the area soon. He recalled that in 1909 Cobalt was found by a department geologist, carried out a survey of the Midlothian area and his report expressed the view it might be an extension of the Kirkland-Larder Lake and Porcupine Gold breaks.

GIVE THEM THE PLEDGE

Should a boy of 14½ begin smoking? At what age is it not harmful to learn to smoke? What number of cigarettes can a boy of that age smoke daily without harm? If a boy of 15½ should start smoking, can give scientific reasons why not. I am a teacher. This information will be helpful to me in dealing with my own boys and the boys with whom I must discuss the problem each year. (Signed, Mrs. L. P. M.)

Our youth, our parents our leaders, our clergy and our doctors have come to a sorry pass if it is now necessary to cite scientific reasons why a child should not smoke.

Then, come to think of it, the children in America are subjected to a thorough and already successful educational propaganda which, is so seldom questioned, or even criticized by parents, teachers, clergy or doctors, that the children naturally assume it is sound and true. Even the children in Germany in the past generation knew perfectly well the lives whatever Hitler wanted them to believe. Every particular small contributes to the American propaganda every time he or she buys a package of cigarettes. It is pretty expensive, but then, we Americans want our children to have the most expensive everything—that is the attitude we take.

I believe there is still a reasonable amount of parental and filial love and devotion left in the world, and even if the doctors, the teachers and clergy cannot break down the stifled silence about cigarette smoking, the childhood and youth, if a child isn't deceived by the parent he or she will take a solemn pledge. Don't keep the pledge from the doctor or mother or both will ask the child to do so, as we all know. Now, not later than 12 years, a pledge not to smoke before he or she is old enough to vote and be self-supporting. And with that, a pledge against taking drugs, whether liquor or liquor. This pledge once taken by the child, will be kept as much as a solemn oath as any anniversary reminder of the bond between parent and child.

LONDON LETTER

By FRANK LOWE
(CP Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 30 —(CP)— This afternoon I watched women and children from London because of the flying bomb menace, and also a number of newly-created bachelors, and the poor males are more than a little confused by it all.

Pay many long-married men it was a dream, a chance at freedom to stay out as long as he liked, to sing, congenial hours drinking at the club and to hell with questions asked. But that feeling didn't last long.

Soon the men began to discover there were such things as pots and beds and keeping the apartment clean and remembering to collect the laundry and get the gas bill paid and the thousand little things like that never previously had occurred to the master of the house.

Complicating things were the problems of wartime living of which the men had complained but never before had really met head on.

YOUD BE SURPRISED

By GEORGE W. STIMPSON

DOUGHBOYS

"Doughboy" was first applied to U. S. infantry soldiers shortly after the Civil War.

The earliest recorded use of the term in this sense is dated 1867, in that year U. General George A. Custer, a cavalry officer, wrote that he was "not a doughboy."

There are several theories as to the origin of the name, but all of them lack positive confirmation.

A doughboy is a dumpling or related food. In this sense the word is a corruption of "doughball" and was used in the British Army as early as 1653.

Another is the one theory, "doughboy" was first applied humorously to the Federal infantry by the cavalry during the Civil War, because of the large globular buttons on the uniforms of the foot soldiers, which bore resemblance to doughboys or globs of dough.

Another theory holds that the name originated during the Mexican war and was inspired by the adobe" buts in which the infantry frequently quartered. "Adobe," Spanish meaning sun-dried clay, is often pronounced "DOH-bo."

GIVE THEM THE PLEDGE

Answer—Send stamped self-addressed envelope for pamphlet "Care of the Hair". It includes advice on dandruff, superfluous hair, dyed hair, prematurely graying hair, etc. You must ask for it—a clipping will not suffice.

Takes Some Forgetting

I'm a great believer in what I read in your column some years ago, that the best cure for most ailments is to forget them. (D. L. A.)

Answer—I'm the forgetfullest person in this neck of the woods, and I'd like to forget I ever said that. I can think of plenty of ailments right now that would take some forgetting. Especially ivy poisoning. Man, had you suggested forgetting that when I had that, I'd have to think what would have happened to you. It's still a problem in my house that the present effective treatment is a good scratching. Have developed only after I had itched enough to last a lifetime. Readers may have a more practical way to try Poisoning—inclose stamped self addressed envelope.

Poor Complexion

Please tell the girl who complained of poor complexion the very best remedy to remove it. My wife and family by taking large doses of natural vitamin A, as directed in your pamphlet on Acne. Although my daughter's skin after much treatment by the doctor was getting worse instead of better. Now after using A, D, G, and B vitamins, she has a poor skin could get the same benefits. (Mrs. A. F. P.)

Answer—Any reader who would like a copy of the pamphlet you mention please send self addressed envelope, stamped and ask for pamphlet on Acne—Blackheads and Pimples.

Pocket First Aid Kit

Planning a camping trip, I'd like to know what I should take in a first aid kit. (C. L. H.)

Answer—Send stamped envelope bearing your address for pamphlet instructing how to make up a pocket first aid kit and how to use it. For the trip is to take you into snake country you should carry a package of anti-venom—druggist have it, for rental charge if the package is not opened. Any one can follow directions on package to administer the anti-venom in cases of snakebites.

Fashion Flashes

A NICE FEATURE about the new bodiced furs is their careful detail and fine styling. A high, collarless neckline, deft shoulder manipulation and full sleeves with turnback cuffs are details of a smart coat of grey, Hudson seal.

New versions of old favorites constantly reappear, such as the full taffeta skirt and the slim top for dance dresses. Plaid taffeta in evergreen, red green and navy makes the big, swishing skirt of a girlish dance frock. On the top is a black velveteen with taffeta lacings marking the extended shoulder.

Pashan fly into the new season's moon hats. A checked prolle broton is in black felt with ostrich plumes draped across the lifted side and front, the feathers held here and there with certain bows.

The luxury look is an important feature of this season's fur-trimmed coats. Deep and wooly mohair is used for a topper, fitted and bloused, with broad bands of black caracul outlining the wide revers collar, the deep cuffs and side front closing. Deep caracul hem is finished with a broad caracul band.

There's charm and youth in the frocks made for early teen-agers. Gold wool jersey is used for a smocked dirndl frock with colorful Guatemalan figure - embroidered band around the skirt. The neckline is cuddled and the bracelet length sleeves have string bow cuffs.

Two in one hats offer something new. A wide shallow basket brim of stretched black lace spangled with sequins lifts off to reveal a draped lace kerchief tipped with multicolored fur ostrich plumes which makes the crown of the hat. Nice for the theatre.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Orphanage or Stepmother — Which Is Better for Soldier's Children?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My wife died less than a year ago, leaving me with two children, one four and six. I expect to go overseas shortly, and naturally am much worried over the welfare of my little ones. A friend of my wife's who is six years older than I am, has intimated to me that she would be glad to marry me for the sake of the children. This lady was a good friend of my wife's and always devoted to the children. She convinced me she's sincere in her offer to be a mother to them.

My wife died suddenly, and perhaps I could learn to love her in time but not at present. The other alternative—shall I put the children in a Home which seemed a dismal sort of place to me when I visited it? I would of course, pay for their board and clothes. I've thought this situation over and seem to get only more confused. What would be your suggestion?

P. G. G.

You tell me this is not a friend of your wife's and has always been a friend of yours, and instead of marrying her, why don't you marry for their legal guardian? Put the children in her care, making the necessary allowance for their board and clothes, and under the circumstances you suggest perhaps you'll learn to love her and equally melancholy seems the fate of the children put in a dismal Home or orphanage.

Why not discuss this with this lady and see how she feels about assuming guardianship. Perhaps when you come marching home, you might feel differently about marrying her.

"Everybody Works But Father", as into your household.

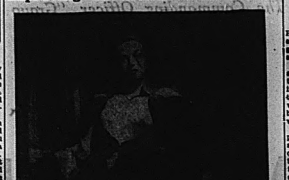
The Old Song Goes

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My father is 64 years of age, very strong, weighs over 200 pounds, and does not work. He sleeps twelve hours and sits around the other hours, getting up only when I call him for meals or to get the evening paper.

We've just bought a six-room house (my husband and I) and there's lots to be done, and do you think my father would raise a hand to do anything? Indeed, no. We have three children, and one takes most of my time to attend to household chores, and I have to do odds and ends that my father could do if he'd only would.

My three brothers won't take him in either, in fact they seldom come to see him. The insurance money my mother left treats my father to tobacco and ice cream, and I take care of his clothes.



My three brothers won't take him out, but you can't do that to your father. He doesn't care about being my eldest child, and is always nagging her . . . I'm getting so nervous over it all that I'm almost ready for some advice from someone. What can I do?

XYZ

The time has come to have what is known as a "straight talk" with father, and tell him, in such a manner of good humor as you can summon, if he expects to enjoy a home under your roof longer, he will have to take some responsibility.

Old people sometimes drift into this type of utter self-absorption, and while enjoying comforts they actually imagine they have much to put up with. Your father is spoiled and in perfect health, should see that it's only reasonable for him to do more comfortable for his daughter.

Improving on Mother Nature

Marguerite Chapman has excellent taste in clothes.

By HELEN FOLLETT

SOUTHERN Nature puts beautiful plumage on birds, flowers, gorgeous colors in sunset skies, creation of those loveliness more than one to tears. It must be that she approves of beauty, sets an example for her children. Therefore, if she has short-changed a lassie by giving her a plain face, a dull complexion that lacks rosy coloring in the cheeks, it is only fair that the girl should see what she can do to make herself fairer to the eye.

We've all known ugly ducklings that transformed themselves into swans, suddenly blossomed out with chic and charm. Sometimes all this change has been accomplished by a clever hairdresser who evolved a becoming and smart arrangement. Sometimes the lady has discovered the right line and color, developed a dress sense that had nothing to do with fashion in the making of a woman.

Too many aids can be had to make appearance more attractive it is senselessness for a woman not to take advantages of them. Overpriced figures can be modelled by dieting and exercise; all one has to have is a morning walk, to the routine until the bath room scales give the cheerful report of pounds evaporated.

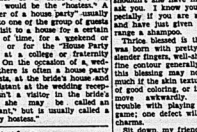
Crooked teeth can be straightened. Sometimes blemishes can be removed are treated by men of high medical skill. There are facial problems. Applying Makeup.

Improve health and nature? Why not? When the factory blush is cleverly applied it can scarcely be told from natural coloring. Lips are prettier when they carry a touch of color. Eyebrows can always say that some of the cuties are a bit too bushy, and need a touch of colored pigment.

Hair is loved inside the head. The smart girl has a better chance to make the grade than the girl who believes she was born what's what, thinks things out. Intelligence is the finishing touch to the appearance more attractive it is countenance; makes it shine.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Hands Like White Butterflies



Mr. Shakespeare tells us that Lady Macbeth had hands like white lilies. Julia never washed a dish in her life, nor did she pull radishes from the garden and prepare them for dinner. No dust cloth soiled her ivory digits. Why shouldn't she have nice hands? I ask you. I know your answer, it's perfectly obvious: we have a girl, and have just given the kitchen range a shampoo.

Thrice blessed is the girl who has been pretty new-born, long, slender fingers, well-shaped thumbs, fine contour generally. Even so, she's handicapped if she hasn't much if the skin texture is not fine, of good color, if the hands are more awkwardly. That's the trouble with playing the hand game; one can't well efface the charms.

Sit down, my friend, and look at your hands. Clasp them together in your lap, fingers extended straight ahead. Notice the lines. Do they form a pretty picture? Don't let the heads of the fingers be too rounded. Keep the palms close together. The pose of the hands will be graceful, they will look slender. Just a thought. But you'll see, it will surprise you.

Hands talk. Let a woman make a fist there, plank them on her hips, and she will have the appearance of a bear or a shrew.

To have graceful movements of nails.

The Marry-Go-Round

Re-Converting Yourself to Peace

Nobody is more anxious and eager for the Victorious end of this war than I am. I pray for Victory every day.

But just because we are all so highly keyed up and living at such a tension, I sometimes wonder what will happen when "it" is over. Not the first thrills and shouting, at the coming of peace.

The first reaction of our industries will be one thing. But how long will it take us to re-convert OUR-SELVES to the sane, gentle Way of Life in peace time?

You know how it is now! You fairly LEAP out of bed in the morning, and rush to turn on the radio, or scurry to the front door without waiting even to put your "mules"—and snatch up the newspaper and look for the headlines.

You never know whether the next picture you see will be Russia in France or Italy—or in all three, as at present writing. Or it keeps you breathless at the RECITED!

One day you read that the Nazis can't hold out more than a few weeks, and the next day you are told that the war may last for months. One day you read that there is a shortage of something—and the next day you read that there ISN'T! One day you read that Hitler has been ousted—and the next day you read that he has a new Girl Friend. And then the postman brings a batch of mail, and you open each envelope nervously; and are shocked or astonished or delighted to learn that a "faithful" friend has been married, that the torch—and married somebody else and joined the Air Corps.

And that the girl who vowed NEVER-TO-MARRY is also bound and has got herself a handsome officer-husband. And that that man you thought never would amount to anything has just been cited for valor, and FIGHT-ING in the Navy Cross.

About then your maid comes in and gives you a touch of shellshock by announcing that she's going to be a munitions worker and wants to "give notice". And before you've had time to catch a breath, the telephone rings and it's somebody you once knew in Kalamazoo and he's in town on furlough. And then the mailman hands you a party girl for him and give him a dinner party and a swell time.

You rush around all day from canteen to bond-rally, from knitting to Red Cross meeting, and in the evening you go out to dinner and FORGET for a while the general campaign all over again. And then you go to bed and fall tired out and mentally hanging up your stocking in readiness for the next day's shocks and surprises and excitements.

Gradually you must have inoculated nerves and an ironclad digestion, because you stand it to be out getting "war-nerves". But sometimes you wonder if beautiful, quiet, restful PEACE will seem a little prosaic—just at first.

The Experts Say

By The Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Aug. 30 — (CP) — PEPPY PICKLING: Here's how to spice spring lamb. Simmered in shortening, which makes a grand addition to a meal:

See that tomatoes, for pickling are fresh, and watch the brine. If the brine is too strong, fruit and skin is either because the brine was too weak, because the cucumbers were not kept covered with it, or because an inferior quality of vinegar was used.

If the brine is too strong the pickles will shrivel. Standard brine allows one-half cup salt to one quart boiling water, used to room temperature before pouring over the cucumbers and left for six to eight weeks to deepen the color and translucency and develop tender crispness.

DENT TIP: Protein are essential for rebuilding tissue and for good blood, and there's a danger that they may be skimped when meat, garden-fresh fruits and vegetables are so tempting, say the nutrition experts here.

Make sure that the protein side of the daily diet is not neglected. The experts say that two cooked eggs, or cheese is a daily "must."

STOCK UP: The munitions department says that increasing transportation difficulties make it essential for those who burn wood to their home supply for next winter's supply as soon as possible. Because of the transport situation and labor shortages it will be difficult to maintain wood deliveries in the latter part of the year, Timber Controller A. H. Williams urges the public to lay in an adequate supply of wood fuel immediately.

Roll of Honor Is Unveiled At Melrose Church

Melrose. — On Sunday morning, Aug. 27, Melrose United Church was transformed with baskets of flowers and potted plants on the occasion of the unveiling of the Honor Roll of the boys and girls who are wearing the King's uniform.

A large congregation was in attendance to pay tribute to the boys who are cheerfully giving so much in sacrifice of time and energy for the freedom of those at home.

Designed by Prominent Artist

The Honor Roll was designed by one of Canada's prominent artists, A. J. Casson, R.C.A. It symbolizes the historic majesty of the British Empire and the might of the Empire's fighting services. The central design motif is based on the "Canadian Coat of Arms" with flanking shields reproducing the Maple Leaf of Canada, the Indian rock of Ireland, the Thistle of Scotland, the Rose of England and the Fleur-de-lis of French Canada. Shown in the design of the Roll are also the heraldic flags of the navy, the army and the air force.

The panel of Honor Roll, Longhead inscribed the names on the roll. Mr. John Wilmot, representing the Honor Roll and in a few words, paid tribute to the boys and girls in service, after which he read the names inscribed on the Honor Roll. List of Names

They are as follows:

Alexander Aitken, Malcolm Mc-Laren, Frank Dawson, William Dawson, Levis Milligan, Stuart Milligan, William Leitch, James Coutts, John McLaren, Bertha Smith, Lloyd Embury, Charlie Scott, Ernest King.

Mrs. Dawson unveiled the Honor Roll, also installing a small white cross with a spray of flowers at the foot of it, in memory of Private Dawson, who paid the supreme sacrifice in the Dieppe landing.

Mrs. Charles Bates presided at the piano and the choir of young men and women rendered an anthem. Rev. F. Taylor, Picton, contributed a vocal solo "God of Our Fathers".

Padre Ernest Spooner.

Rev. Mr. Payton, a padre at the Trenton Air Station, was the guest speaker. His address will long be remembered by those who were privileged to be present. His text was "For whose the world was not given Authority." He said: "This inscription would be appropriate to put on all the Honor Rolls and monuments we dedicated after the last war. Our youth made great sacrifices to open a door unto a waiters world and we did nothing about it. Like a day we thought "nothing matter-ed but victory". So, when it was won, we went back to our selfish, sinful way of life and the door closed again. We thought it was enough to outlaw war, so we didn't attempt to outlive it.

"Now again, our youth is at great cost, trying to pry open the door allowed to slam shut. We are again dedicating Honor Rolls, but this time we dedicate our lives to the cause for which great sacrifice is made, which is a world of justice and brotherhood, their sacrifices are in vain.

"I have no doubt about our ability to win the war, but I doubt we have the ability to win the peace. We haven't the moral power to bring about peace and good will. But that power is available in Jesus Christ. He is the key of life and resources for creating such a world.

"The world needs more people", the speaker said in conclusion, "who will accept Him and exemplify His Spirit. If the majority of people and Nations were Christ-thoughtless men, we cannot expect anything but strife and evil. Anything can happen in a world where the spirit of people die and cannot and find no room in their lives for Him".

Coal Shortage In Australia, N.Z.

Canberra, Aug. 29 —(CP)— The shortage of coal is so much greater in Australia and New Zealand than it is in Canada and the United States that a further reduction in civilian railroad transport has become necessary, it was learned today.

The coal consumption of all railroad systems in Australia is fb be reduced by 7,000 tons weekly, or 10 per cent.

Since war started, traffic on Australian railroads increased more by 50 per cent due to the transport of troops, munitions, food and other war goods.

To cope with the wartime traffic civilian transport was reduced between 50 and 80 per cent. Since June, 1941, a permit system for interstate and country traffic has been in operation and since the end of 1942 the transport of unessential goods has been prohibited.

In New Zealand a travel permit system also has been in effect, but government officials hope it will not be necessary to continue it after September 30.

The officials said present railway coal stocks in the north island of New Zealand were sufficient for only nine days requirements for essential services, and in the south island for 10 days running.

1944 Fur Crop Richer Than '43

By JAMES MCCOOK

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Aug. 30—(CP)—Natural officials looked for the August noon-day sun to the cold stars of winter and see there fur prosperity.

If all goes well, they expect 1944 to be a richer year than 1943, when the value of Canadian raw fur production, from the take sold from fur farms and those caught by trapping, reached a record of $11 per cent and 11 per cent above the value in 1941.

Nine per cent of the total represented the catch taken by fox-lynx, fisher and marten, trapped in Canadian outlands.

Two years ago, hunters in unusual regions have provided the unusual combination of good fur prices and substantial catches. Now they suspect they are getting close to the end of a fur cycle and fur-bearing animals soon may be scarce; but if the cycle holds to form, the worrying will be able to put something away for a rainy day.

Six Men Directed Patriots in Revolt Against Germans

By EDWARD B. BALL

Associated Press War Correspondent

Paris, Aug. 30.—(AP)— Six men, members of the all-powerful committee directing the French Liberation movement, direct hundreds of thousands of Parisians in the revolt against the Nazis. They gathering in a secret meeting on Aug. 19, and then the order from which flared the final, vengeful revolt of a city four years under the German yoke.

Those men were known to each other only by fictitious names, but their organization kept German nerves on edge for four years.

By word of mouth and by posters raised by daring Parisians, the word spread. Trusted members of the committee had rendezvous in the streets where they would assume past each other and drop Gaboodle-wording phrases, such as "the French beans are cooking," or "the French are in the streets," and don't know themselves just what was meant.

But hundreds of thousands of Parisians in the underground developed these impressions.

This story was unfolded by a Paris lawyer, a slightly built, dark-Parisian who looked more like a professor than the leader of a revolution. He was Georges Bidault, Gaullist, his secretary and one of the chief organizers of the resistance movement, an attractive blond of more than 30 who weighs more than 100 pounds.

These two joined 400 other patriots in occupying the city-block square Hotel de Ville, remaining in it through the Germans' fifty-hour call automatic until the Allies arrived.

Kingston Ordnance Eliminates Saco Marines From Playdowns In Intermediate OASA Series

Chalk Up 15 Hits Off the Offerings of Anderson and Hunter

SCORE IS 13-6

Pounding the offerings of the two SACO "Marine" pitchers for a total of 15 base knocks, of which eight were of the extra base nature, the Kingston Ordnance knocked the Marines out of the Intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns in the first round by beating the locals 13 to 6 in a third and deciding game, at the Pair Grounds Tuesday night.

Actually the only time the Marines were in the game was in the top half of the initial frame, when they scored two runs on hits by Loft and Hess, completed a double steal and seemed headed to victory. However, the Ordnance "Shillers" bounced back with the equalizing runs in their half of the frame with Malak's single and Atanas' double.

The Soldiers added two more in the second and cinched the piece with a five-run splurge in the third. The winners put runners aboard the runways in every inning, except the sixth.

Attended Strong Support.

It was behind Jack Holowchuk, five-hit pitching ace, that the Ordnance thrived mostly as the Soldiers' moundsman scattered four singles and Murney Green's eighth inning circuit blow in a masterful manner to be afforded strong support in the field. While all of this was going on the winners knocked Bill Anderson from the local hilltop early in the third inning and then continued to pound Jim Hunter for a total of ten hits, while racking up 15 in all.

Atanas, with a home run, a double and two singles lead the attackers on the attack as Szabo helped himself to a triple and two singles with Holowchuk taking no chances to help his own cause with a pair of solid two-base blows. St. Pierre also hit well to drive in four runs on two hits.

Jim Burbage accounted for two of the Marines' five hits while Murney Green's 8th inning circuit smash was the only resemblance of an extra base hit chalked up by the locals.

BROWNIES' LEAD NOW FOUR GAMES IN AMERICAN LOOP

Three Contenders for Top Having Tough Time Among Selves

TIGERS MAIN PROBLEM

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

There was a suspicion today that the St. Louis Browns, rather, as the Brownies went into the final test of their last long road trip with a four-game lead.

Adding to Luke Sewell's peace of mind was the second place situation which had seen Boston, New York and Detroit in the runners' up spot in the last three days. The three contenders were having a tough time trying to decide which one was going to bear down on the Brownies who have been staggering along the road losing 12 of 21 away games since July 4.

Detroit appeared to present the main problem at the moment as Hal Newhouser and Paul (Dizzy) Trout shut out Chicago, 7-0, while Boston and New York split. Tex Hughson ran his string of scoreless innings to 19, hung up his 22nd win and clouted a three-run homer with bases loaded in the "crossfoul" series in the Brownies' back yard this afternoon.

The Tigers took over the runners-up spot yesterday as Paul (Dizzy) Trout shut out Chicago, 7-0, while Boston and New York split. Trout

LESSON NO. 488

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

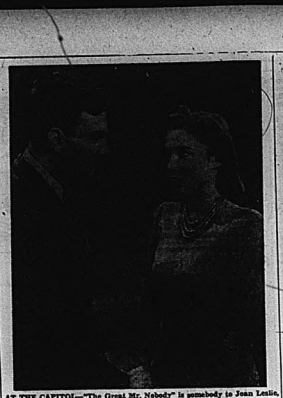
A bid with a natural meaning usually needs a desired. But when bid works as a signal, its natural meaning be fixed. You have often heard me say the high such a hand would get a re- spondering bid from partner with two high and a short card.

Therefore, an opening of two no-trump involves itself to this rule: Any eight high cards with or with- out a biddable suit, or seven high cards with four sure tricks without a biddable suit.

Hand yourself this hand:

♠A K Q
♥K Q 7
♦K Q 4 3
♣Q 10 4

This hand contains eight high cards; an ace, three kings, and four queens. It also has a biddable suit. But in spite of having a suit that is biddable, open it with two no- trump.



If it turns out bad, you can always commit hara kiri.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Forest Rangers"

Paramount's latest adventure movie of the great outdoors "The Forest Rangers," opened today at the McCarthy Theatre, and is a love story, forest fire, hit tunes and Technicolor.

Based on the novel by Thelma Strabel, author of the Cecil B. De- Mille epic, "Unto This Wild Wind," the present picture is a powerful love and adventure story with plentiful touches of comedy and exciting performances by its title- of stars, Paulette Goddard, Fred MacMurray and Susan Hay- ward. George Marshall directed.

Set amid the spectacular scenery of the high Cascades and the Pacific Coast, "The Forest Rangers" set into its swell story swiftly when Paulette, as a society girl from the cities East, is pitched off a horse at a ranger's celebration and lands right on top of the handsome hero, Fred MacMurray. Fred, it seems, is a forest ranger in search of a sub- stitute who has been setting giant redwood slabs on fire since child- hood.

"Men On Her Mind"

Faced with the choice of mar- riage or a career, Mary Beth Hughes in her romantic drama, "Men On Her Mind," chooses to pursue her vocal ambitions, but runs into a series of obstacles be- fore she finally learns what she has decreed.

There are three men in her life, all desirable, and all eager to marry her. There is Alan Edwards, a business executive, who is able to offer her social position and all that goes with it. The second suitor is Edward Norris, a banker, with playboy inclinations, but a splendid chap, and Russell North, a humble professor of music at a girls' boarding school.

Coming from humbler beginnings herself, she has found life a pretty tough school, but struggles only make her the more determined to achieve her dream of becoming a great singer. Even when she finds the struggle for a living a little easier, Mary and Alan are ready and willing to provide the comforts of life for her without further struggle on her part, she still has one main objective—her sing- ing career.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Great Mr. Nobody"

Everyone will get a kick out of "The Great Mr. Nobody" the new Warner Bros. comedy starring Eddie Albert and Joan Leslie, which opens today at the Capitol.

The story shows that the qualities that make heroes are not possessed only by aviators, soldiers and G- Men, but that the average clerk, storekeeper, accountant or sales- man is a potential hero.

"Dynamite" Smith, played by Eddie Albert, is a classified ad salesman who dreams of buying a boat and taking a trip around the world with his friend, "Skipper" Martin, played by Alan Hale. "Dynamite" also looks forward to the day when he will be able to marry Mary Glover, por- trayed by lovely Joan Leslie.

Things go wrong with "Dynamy." It takes an accident to bring to light his quiet courage, and he be- comes a different kind of hero.

"Partners of the Trail"

Raymond Hatton, veteran com- edian who is featured with Johnny Mack Brown at the Capitol theatre next in the Monogram adventure- packed western, "Partners of the Trail," is rated one of the best pistol shots in Hollywood, and fre- quently tests fellow workers during impromptu contests in marksman- ship. He does okay in scheduled matches, too, and has a shelf filled with ribbons and cups to prove it.

A color cartoon and the serial "Captain America" complete the big bill.

AT THE BELLE

"Passage to Marseille".

"Passage to Marseille," the new Warner Bros. picture starring Humphrey Bogart in a timely story of daring and courage, comes to the Belle Theatre today. As a fighting French journalist who has been railroaded to Devil's Island, Humphrey Bogart leads four of his fellow-prisoners to freedom and the chance to give their lives in their country's struggle against Hitler.

Michael Curtiz, director of re- cent smashing "Casablanca," again lends directorial guidance to a brilliant supporting cast including Claude Rains, Michele Morgan, Philip Dorn, Sydney Greenstreet, Helmut Dantine, Peter Lorre and George Tobias.

"Bermuda Mystery," Thriller

When a madcap heiress and a hu- man detective set out to solve a murder mystery that involves two continents with no other clues but a half-cracked coconut and some dollar-mark doodlers, there's sure to be excitement—and thrills.

That's the background for 20th Century-Fox's "Bermuda Mystery," featuring Preston Foster, Ann Ru- therford and Charles Butterworth which is the second small feature attraction now on the Belle Thea- tre screen. The comedy-thriller was directed by Benjamin Stoloff and produced by William Girard. Others in the cast are Helen Reynolds, Jean Howard and Richard Lane.

"Hare Force" is the title of a Bugs Bunny colorfun cartoon to be ex- hibited on the same program.

Senior Football Out at Trenton R.C.A.F. Station

Any chances the Trenton R.C.A.F. "Flyers" had of com- peting in the proposed Ontario Service League Senior Football League were dispelled this morn- ing, when Group Captain Bell- Irving, officer commanding at the Trenton R.C.A.F. station, definitely announced that following a con- ference with his sports officers the project had been rejected.

"We are not likely to start in the proposed Service League foot- ball group. We feel we are too far away from Toronto to assume the responsibilities of a full schedule. We have a schedule of work to complete at the station here, which naturally comes first. The distances involved to fulfill such a schedule are too great in the face of present-day transporta- tion facilities," Group Captain Bell-Irving framed the Ontario intelligencer today.

"I am an old footballer myself and naturally regret such a move, but we have a large intra-mural sports program, as well as inter- station competition throughout the Quinte district. These pro- grams will take care of the neces- sities of our sports program for the benefit of a larger number of our personnel," added Group Captain Bell-Irving.

It was also announced from the Trenton R.C.A.F. base that their football team is now en- gaged in the baseball semi-finals in the R.C.A.F. Command championships.

NICKEL STRIKE ENDS

Huntington, W.Va., Aug. 30.—(AP) —Production of vital war materials was resumed by some 2,000 workers at the International Nickel Co. today after the United States War Labor Board signed the strike-bound plant under a presidential order.

Moving with unprecedented speed in a labor dispute, a group of seven officers headed by Lt.-Col. George D. Woods took possession at 10 o'clock Tuesday night.

Two hours later, a stream of em- ployees coursed through the gates in the jaws of floodlights to re- sume operation on the midnight shift, and the strike had ended.

ROBOT

Proprietor's Mother Shot.

One Frenchman was shot dead in ride away on his bicycle after we had questioned him, then returned to the side of our jeep and said: "You couldn't mean the block-house on the farm by the crossroads?"

The proprietor of the farm- house mother had been shot in cold blood by a German sentry for mere- ly stepping out of the farmyard and peering toward the orchard—led us to the ramp.

It was painstakingly concealed and is still covered with sod lifted from a nearby field and placed over every section of the concrete spins of the ramp which points in a gen- erally northern direction.

The launching installations con- sist of the camouflaged storehouse, two sheds alongside the 35-foot re- inforced platform which have eight inch thick walls of concrete, another platform 50 feet to the right de- signed to take a semi-circular track for traversing purposes, and eight- foot-by-eight concrete dugout and two other smaller concrete dugouts intended for storage.

At the right side of the launch- ing-platforms is a concrete reservoir now filled with water, the result of rain-water. It was not possible to learn its purpose.

The ramp, which rises at an angle of only three or four degrees, was built with such an eye for camou- flage from the air that every wheel- barrow of earth carted by con- scripted Italian laborers was sprayed with green liquid as soon as it was dumped in and around the farm building half-concealed by the orchard.

The tunnel is under the impres- sion that this site is one of a series of at least seven well-hidden in- stallations west of the Seine.

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

CHAPTER 7

Sandra paused, frightfully shaken and tired, and put her hands over her face. A few tears make their way unchecked between her fingers. I stood for a moment, uncertain, horrified, not knowing what to say.

Finally I asked, "Did — Vic tell you his version of the story?" said Sandra?

Her hands stayed over her face and she mumbled an almost inaudible "No."

Then why condemn the boy darling?"

Sandra looked up at last. Scorn of her fury and hurt was spent, and when she spoke her tone was almost quiet. "Vic admitted," she told me, "that he was on his way to see Mother. Said that he just had to know if she'd ever consented to our marriage. Said he wanted to do the right thing but, if she refused again, he'd decided to make me elope with him. He says he didn't see her—alive. When he saw her, she was lying there on the ground, dead. Honestly, that's his story. I—don't believe it. Vic murdered her."

My heart forked.

"But how on earth did he happen to be there?" I asked. "If Vic was going to see Pamela, why didn't he go right to the house door? Did he telephone her around ten o'clock and ask her to meet him out there?" I questioned, forced Sandra's information and suddenly I was certain. Mother had not telephoned Pamela at ten o'clock had asked her, cut, side and had murdered her when she'd come to keep the rendezvous.

"Vic didn't say he telephoned Mother, though he may have," Sandra said, tiredly. Then he stopped at the hotel first, had a cock-tail to steady his nerves, then went out back of the hotel and down by the swimming pool to see You know, Letty. You use it at the time." She paused swallowing hard. "And he saw Pamela lying Murdered."

That meant, of course, Victor Carlisa was the one who had really discovered Pamela's Keith's body, and not I. My brain reeled. Why, Victor my prowler! Was he the one who had telephoned at ten and asked Pamela to meet outside? Perhaps he didn't. hadn't intended to murder Pamela when he took as it did. Had been a premeditated murder. The note proved that. That took him evidently when picked up and used in a sudden rage.

"Look," I said, "don't judge Vic yet. He may be telling you the truth, Sandra."

"He—did it," Sandra's voice was dull with despair. "He did. Vic loathed Mother. He told me once he'd—like to kill her. And besides, He's changed a lot lately. Been drinking other things that—I—don't want to talk about."

The other girl, I thought. The other girl, Victor had said, that he had gone out with one night. I said, "You think Vic did this horrible thing and yet you gave him an alibi. You told the Sergeant that Vic had been with you all evening at the Club."

"That was before—I knew," Sandra told me, winking her long black lashes nervously. "It wasn't after I knew Mother was dead and all the others left that Vic—told me what he'd been. He wanted to tell me. He knew that I knew he'd been going to the club for over an hour and a half, I—"

There was a sharp rap at the door. I went into the hall, opened it said, "Mr. Cramer is downstairs and would like to see Miss Sandra."

Sandra's voice lightened. "I'm coming! I'm so glad, Letty! Reginald, pull-Mr. Cramer in the south bedroom. Come on and Letty, will you go down and talk with him until I get dressed?"

"Sure," I said, and hurried out of the room.

I found Lake in the library. He was staring blankly out of the long French window. He was a friendly, carefully good-looking man, erect of shoulder and built of body. He was not ill though—desperately ill. I had been startled at him a full quarter of a minute before he turned and saw me, and I knew his face passed into grey as he had a fever and a high one.

"Lake!" I protested. "You shouldn't have come! Didn't you tell Sandra you were sick when you telephoned this morning?"

"Yes," he answered. "I couldn't stay away, Letty. What a thing to happen! I can't believe it. I can't get it through my head that it has—"

He wouldn't go on with that, and I said, "I'm going to put you right to bed, Lake Graeme. This minute. Last night Pamela told me that you had the flu."

My voice broke off. For that one brief second I'd forgotten the mutilated figure behind the bookcase, forgotten that Pam was dead. . . . It was hard to believe that less than twenty-four hours ago, Pamela had been worrying about Lake being sick and that now. . . .

"I'm — all right," Lake declared. But he wasn't. I saw him lean back against a chair for support as he took a cigarette out of a silver case. His hands shook helplessly as he tried to light it.

"What is there for me to do, Letty?" he began. "And don't look at me like that. I was awfully sick Yesterday, but I'm all right now," I said, "and you're going to bed this minute. Sandra's down with cigarette and—march!"

My rang for Reginald who took charge of Lake and his luggage. I went to the satin-tufted telephone booth at the head of the stairs and began paving through the phone book until I found the section for telephone book. I don't know when we've had any illness in our family, and I was completely lost when it came to doctors. Suddenly I thought of Wayne Cordway.

Wayne was staying at the Charlton Arms, just minutes away, and I gave him a ring. He answered on the telephone himself and, at once, by things: "I'd rather not attend Mr. Cramer, Letty. Call the hotel doctor for her. I think his name is John Redmond."

So I called Doctor Redmond and he said he'd be right over. I went back to my room, closed out on the chaise and tried to think. But I couldn't think; my mind was a seamless void. I remembered, very definitely decide to try and solve this mystery by all the means in my power. I read, heard of, or could invent.

This was Sunday night, the seventh night could all be off duty from seven until midnight and he would afford a perfect opportunity to search Pamela's apartment. Maybe I could find out what was behind Pamela's blackmail threats and Reginald, and why they were suddenly spying each other so appreciatively.

Sandra had her one o'clock dinner on a tray in her room. Doctor Redmond had come and gone, had instructed Lake to eat little, drink plenty of fruit juices, rest and sleep, and take aspirins to reduce his fever. His temperature was nearly 104.

I ate my dinner in the long dining room in company with Countess Pamela Castigena, who had arrived just before noon, and the Marvin Eustaces who were also established in the pink room. We all sat there making desultory conversation, while I found myself wondering if one of them was Pamela's murderer.

It didn't make for an hilarious party. And it made for an especially brain one when Marvin Eustace's face turned suddenly grey as my name and he said: "Well, Letty, have you arrived at any conclusions yet? Did you do it; do you know who killed Pamela?"

"Why, Marvin!" I gasped.

"You've a mobile face, Letty. You'd make a rotten poker player."

Pamela's fork was lifted and her lower lip was hanging open. "Why, Letty," she exclaimed, "I couldn't murder anyone!" She put her fork down and rose. "I'm quite exciting, you know she's feeling pretty sick Redmond."

Miss Eustace said waspishly, "Letty fancies herself a sleuth. Pamela She's very likely studied scientific and fictional detection."

"I do," I admitted. But I could hardly meet the outraged eyes of the others.

After dinner I called a taxi and hurried out. When I returned I was Countess Skerjoki, complete with a small pencil flashlight and three hairpins. I spent the rest of the afternoon in a cold sweat, waiting for night to fall and the little with Lake Cramer who was sleeping when I left. I peeped in two after all, I helped Pamela Castigena unpack. Countess Pamela seemed to be digging in for the winter for she'd brought along three trunks and a packing case loaded with tins of anchovy paste, herring, frankfurters in brine and, of all things — rattlesnake paste!

Sergeant Hornblower arrived at four, asked a few questions of me till and departed. At four-thirty the first floor of the house was deserted and I crept into the library. I began taking books off the shelves on the wall which partitions the library from the drawing-room. I tapped the wall carefully, listening for some strange sound that would explain why I had heard those things. Last night. I found one spot that gave off a hollow echo and I kept quickly into the drawing-room. I went on the wall there, located the same sound, and saw that that the wall there a place right behind the Sheraton chair which I'd been sitting. I scrutinized my head thoughtfully.

Next I'd seen behind-out-for a jewel-safe that had never been installed? I sat down on the Sheraton chair, and suddenly things were running up my spine and my teeth were clacking together.

"Are you looking for something, Miss Letty?" Reginald had come upon me so silently, that I just sat there shivering. "I'm n-n-n-not looking for anything!"

"The—books, Miss Letty?" Reginald began.

"Please put them back, will you, Reginald." I asked as I got up and went out of the room with as much dignity as I could muster, leaving Reginald to wonder why I'd emptied the library shelves.

Back in my room I lay on the chaise again, thinking about the murder, rolling ideas around and around in my head, I noticed finally that I was nearly asleep, rolled and got up and took a stand at my window. Presently I saw Reginald and three maids come up out of the basement door. They piled into a dilapidated car that had drawn up at the rear door, and departed.

I grabbed my pencil flash, my shaken hose, and started on my way as agile as a cat going down a fire-escape. Each door when I finally reached that labyrinth of corridors and closed doors, swung open standing out on a set of tall walls on my temples. There is no shoulder, way [illegible] I didn't shoulder.

Then could I shake off the odd sensation that someone, somewhere, was watching everything I did. I decided objection to taking the army of the dead, and determined to avoid the lights of the stairs, hop into bed and pull the covers over my head. I crept stockstill though, fighting that impulse and finally I began to move quickly down the unlighted hall, feeling my way by the concrete wall. Presently I did not dare turn on my tiny flash.

Passing Reginald's door open, I went in his room. During a ten minute search I found nothing important. I was ready to call it quits when I noticed that in my coat-pocket Reginald had hanging a social card album off the desk. I was looking the album over when I ran across a Happy Birthday card. It seemed such an innocent looking thing to be included in such a risque collection that I turned it over and over in my fingers, curiously.

The front was decorated with an exquisite little blond girl carrying a large basket of flowers. The flowers, I noticed, could be drawn out of the basket and on a hole to each bloom was a verse of birthday poo. I examined each flower carefully, finally found the one in the buttercup I held my breath! For on the back someone had written only some printed trips but this in pencil, beside everything:

Please . Please. But $5,000 my limit. G

G? Gladys Newcomb?

Had Gladys Newcomb offered Reginald that money to eliminate Pamela? So she'd had have a free and unhampered run to Lake Cramer? My skin began to crawl, and my hand was shaking as I switched off the light and stepped softly in to the hall. Then I stiffened. I was sometimes not answerwrong so far from me.

Human breathing, beyond all reasonable doubt. I listened intently, my heart thudding. Nobody but a fool, of which I was top at this point, would be prowling stealthily about these eerie black corridors save some person vitally interested in the house.

I stood stock-still in front of Reginald's half-closed door. That was where something was coming near enough to be touched. I could hear it. Then suddenly there was a gasp and panic lashed around me like a whip. I wrenched to run widely down the corridor to safety but a fearful anguish rooted me to the spot. I was to know the worst. . . . My legs were so weak beneath me that I couldn't run even if my life depended on it—which it probably did.

"W-w-w-who's t-t-i-there?" I managed.

And the next instant I felt a hot breath on my face, and the panicky blood that tore through my body was a sharp, torturing flame. A hand had clapped over my mouth. Another hand jerked the birthday card out of my fingers. I was given a violent push which sent me careening backwards against Reginald's door. The door gave way behind me. I sprawled on the floor, conscious of the contorted cries without realizing they were the screams of my own throat.

Lights finally blazed up around me.

And there was Sandra, saying in tight, strained voice: "Letty, what on earth are you doing here? What's happened?"

Behind her Pamela Castigena with a hot dog in one hand, and behind Pamela, the Marvin Eustaces, looking very white-faced and nervous. A second later, another figure ran through the door: Peter Gibson! Peter in a tweed sport-coat and a Harris tweed hat, felt with a little red feather in the band, yellow pig-skin gloves on his hands.

He looked angry but, unlike the others, he didn't just stand gaping. He came straight to me, stripped off one of his gloves and felt my pulse. Then he lifted me to my feet—and let me have it!

"Surely you're not fool enough to think you can help the police catch this murderer, Letty!" he scolded.

"Oh, no," I snorted back, even though my teeth were chattering with shock. "I was just sitting here in. "I was just down here playing I was a terrible! Were you playing Scotland, too?"

Your mother and father told me you were staying over—much against their wishes," Peter said curtly. "I was coming over to see you. I heard you screaming. . . ."

"You certainly are Johnny-on-the-spot everything, I do observed pointedly.

Sandra broke up what might have been a nice free-for-all.

"Letty, what happened?"

Suddenly, inexplicably, I began to cry. To hear like a baby, Peter came over up into his arms with no effort at all, put his face against my hair and comforted me.

But he made it sound like you pretended a scream!

In the drawing-room upstairs I explained about the card. I told them all what had happened. But I did not mention the Happy Birthday card. I couldn't bear to. I felt I'd be a sneak when I was so frightened, so humiliated. I wondered how long you have to live before you're an open book to everyone?

Marvin Eustace said, "Letty, you certainly don't think Reginald murdered Pamela, do you?"

"Oh, not Reginald," wailed Sandra. "He—couldn't."

"Letty, listen. You'd better keep out of this murder," Marvin advised.

"Why?" I asked quickly.

"Think back on those murder mysteries you read, child," he observed very gently. "What happens to people who find out too much?"

I shivered. "This weather me up," I said, and I frowned. It. What does you just what sort of shifty-shallying mind I've got. For which over an hour later I was at it again.

Peter asked me if I wanted to knock around for a while in his galloey and pick up some sandwiches somewhere. I looked at Sandra questioningly, for after all I was supposed to stay with her. She smiled and said, "Please go, Letty. I'll do just as good. And the others are here, you know."

I rose then Peter, my self-appointed chaperon, and that crack he'd made about, being psychic was the inspiration for what I did next.

Anyway, Peter and I drove around a while, until we discovered we're hungry. He suggested a Bar-B-cue and finally we were seated in a little orange-colored cubicle with menus before us. Peter studied his thoughtfully, then shut it down, I sighed and said: "I'll take the same, Peter."

TO BE CONTINUED.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop went to sleep in his private chair after supper, and ma said, Oh dear now look at that man. He'll ruin his night's rest and he'll toss and turn like a hot fish in his bed when he ought to be resting time for him to go to sleep. But if I wake him up he'll only be in a bad mood and he'll carry on as if I was the chief ringleader in a plot against his health.

But jimminy, ma, if he thought he woke up just by accident he couldn't be in a bad mood, and ma said, Well of course that's true, but I don't see how I can arrange that.

Sure you can, ma, easy, I mean I'll arrange it, I said. I already know how to do a perfect imitation of a bee buzzing, so that's what I'll do, and I'll buzz around and he's going stung by a bee, and if it dosn't bite, why, I'll get him a little stick with a pin at the same time, and then I'll be sure to work. Shall I, ma? I said.

Certainly not, such an idea, ma said, and I can tell well then why dont you skreech all your night? That'll make him sit up all right, and may be asks you what's a matter you can just tell him you're thinking of taking singing- lessons and you were trying to see how high you could make your voice go even without lessons. How about that, ma? I said.

Ma claiming it was even worse, and pop woke up and ma up without help, saying to me, My, I just had the nicest dream. I dreamed I was a great philanthropist and thousands of people were spending their lives being grateful to me. And after all, why shouldn't I practice what I dream? I've heard that's the secret of success of life. So how would you like me to take you to a movie, my dear? he said.

Why William you couldn't have a better idea, ma said. Well, I must say it's an ill wind that doesn't blow somebody else said, and pop said, How's that again.

Ma quick hurrying up and getting ready without explaining.

Conditions Under Nazis Liveable Says Frenchman

By HAL BOYLE
(AP War Correspondent)

Paris, Aug. 30. (AP)—The average Frenchman didn't do so badly under the Nazis if the ruble-counters who lamented for a living.

For those who played ball with the Germans or who had a big bankroll to draw on, Paris became one of the world's gaudier spots—a free-living land of bounteous plenty where you could buy anything you wanted.

"But you had to have the price," said Alec Jean Grecett, who had married comfortably about 1926 and made a profit from 20 years of service as a floor waiter in the Grand Hotel.

He told me about life in Paris while we shared ready-made coffee from army rations.

"This is the first cup of real coffee I have had in four years", he said.

Conditions were bad but liveable in my country for the last four years, but they have been hell in other parts of the occupied area particularly the last six weeks, since the trains stopped bringing food from the country and we have had no food.

"We were told many months ago by the British radio, however, to prepare for the days of shortages—and many Frenchmen have been quietly saving up things against just what food they could find and my family has had some macaroni, chocolate, marmalade and potatoes".

"No wine?" I asked sympathetically.

"But, of course, a few bottles of wine also", said Alec with a shrug and smile.

He said that families who had only skilled workmen generally were fortunate to escape starvation, because City Hall was short of meats, vegetables and other foods, due to the breakdown in transportation.

"There was practically no bread. There was no milk—since the invasion there has been no milk for babies.

"Before that a baby got only a half pint of milk a day after reaching nine months and at 3 years the milk ration ceased entirely. There has been practically no milk for the old people and the sick in hospitals".

Roosevelt Will Not Make Nation-Wide Tour in Campaign

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Aug. 30. (CP) — President Roosevelt, in his old-time forceful manner, spent an afternoon at his desk yesterday, joking and talking with newspapermen, and then went down with a lot to think about, including:

1.—He will make his first political speech of the election campaign at a dinner to be given by Daniel Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters (A.F.L.) in Washington, Sept. 23, but will not make a nation-wide tour.

2.—His forthcoming meeting with Prime Minister Churchill is still in the "soon" stage and details of time and place cannot be discussed.

3.—The American scheme for a world peace organization now being studied at the Dumbarton Oaks Conference envisions a league of Nations stronger than the former league, with power to enforce peace.

4.—Director of the budget Harold Smith has been instructed to take a census of business, industrial and economic statistics covering 1944 to gain information necessary for conversion to peacetime operations, and to provide records useful for future military preparedness. The census cost to be charged-able to war appropriations.

Asked whether he would make a speaking tour of the nation the President said no and added that he had too much to do, and had other speaking dates in the interment.

He would not discuss the time and place of his forthcoming meeting with Mr. Churchill and would not even say whether the time and place had been fixed.

Recalling his directions to the budget director for a business census the President said this should not be interpreted as indicating his belief the war would end soon but that he wishes to be ready when it does end.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 30.—(AP)—Stock prices stiffened generally in today's market with pace-setters issues continuing to attract the best bidding.

Some short covering and new buying appeared on hints that the dwindling of liquidation to a mere trickle might mean that a quiet Allied invasion of France could touch off a sizeable rally despite impatience of investors over delay.

The recent reaction, it was suggested, had put the list in a much better technical position.

In front most of the session were South Puerto Rico sugar and International Paper, at tops for the year; U. S. Rubber, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Goodyear, Mack, Montgomery Ward, Kennecott, Westinghouse, Phelps Dodge, American Can and Certain-teed.

Canadian stocks were quiet. Only Lake Shore registered a change, gaining ½.

American Forces Locked in Battle Near Drome River

By GEORGE TUCKER
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, Aug. 30.—(AP)—American forces of the 7th Army and German troops fleeing up the Rhone valley from Southern France were locked in heavy battle today near the drome river a dozen miles north of captured Montelimar.

The Americans struck Tuesday night while the enemy was making a desperate effort to cross the Drome, which runs into the Rhone below the east, military boundary between Montelimar and Valence.

The heaviest fighting centered around Loriol, south of the Drome along Highway 7. The Germans have positions across the stream, but whether they succeeded in getting any sizeable group across was unknown.

Meanwhile, due east near the Italian frontier, American troops were forced back to the outskirts of Briancon by fierce counter-attacks. Briancon in the Hautes-Alpes 90 miles north of Ice, by an enemy force was reported to have by-passed into French territory from Italy.

BRITISH CAPTURE AMIENS, CROSS THE SOMME

Red Army Believed To Have Entered Bucharest

Smashing Drive Endangers Robot Coastal Ground

Canadians Plunge Within Thirty Miles of Dieppe

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Aug. 31.—(CP)—British tanks captured Amiens and smashed across the Somme river today in a lightning drive that threatens that ground the Germans in full flight back to the Reich borders for consolidation.

The battle zones—fighting on territory hallowed by the blood of their fathers in the First Great War—today were 30 miles from Dieppe, which overran Laon and slashed on north more than 100 miles to within 33 miles of Belgium, which means that they overwhelmed three trainloads of German soldiers trying to escape.

Troops of the 1st Canadian Army, meanwhile, mopped up the big river port of Rouen, 60 miles north-east from Dieppe where the gallant Canadian raid of Aug. 19, 1942, was made, and cut out Rouen-Dieppe road nine miles north of Rouen.

30 Miles In Two Days.

The British armored advance, which scarred 60 miles in two days and rivalled the American lightning thrusts, was spearheaded by one of Britain's greatest tank experts, Maj.-Gen. R. N. O'Connor, who was captured by the Germans in the Middle East and later escaped.

Those astounding British columns drove along the two main roads from Amiens—one to the north-east, Grande - Villiers — and on the east through Corbie to Albert.

The British and Canadians were veering directly toward a line of the Calais coast of France.

The Indian infantry pushed into historic Rouen where cleanup fighting was in progress. Despite German reports that Rouen had been evacuated enough snipers remained to demand considerable mopping-up before its capture could be claimed.

North to the sea 1st Canadian army troops swept along the Seine to the estuary and Havre, still but a small pocket of Germans across the river.

In an eight-mile flanking sweep northeast of Rouen the Canadians captured Grand Couronne, 5½ miles south of Elbeuf, and neared Cleuy, 10 miles south of Elbeuf. These elements were closing on Duclair, on the Seine, 10 miles above Rouen, and the Allied advance northward swept into a solid assault front aimed at the enemy's Somme line.

The Americans racing from the Seine past Laon opened the Amiens-Laon road, historic German pathway to Paris, and by the end of the first days the full width of bloody battlegrounds over which the Allies fought in four years of the First Great War.

REMNANTS OF NAZI 19th ARMY RACING TOWARD LYON

American Units Move Through Nice Toward Italian Frontier 12 Miles Ahead

HARBOR DAMAGED

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, Aug. 31 (AP)—Remnants of the German 19th army raced desperately north toward Lyon today, fighting costly rear-guard actions with pursuing Americans only 12 miles behind them on the Italian Riviera highway to Nice and the French Riviera metropolis of Nice, near the Italian frontier, some 13 miles ahead.

Nice, with a population of 200,000 and the largest of the Riviera's famed playgrounds, was taken without any opposition. Damage was confined chiefly to the harbor area, front headquarters said.

The total of prisoners captured by the 7th army since it swarmed ashore on the beaches of southern France passed the 80,000 mark, with additional thousands rounded up from Nazi units intercepted and cut to pieces in the Rhone Valley pockets south of the junction of the Rhone and Saone rivers.

Equally impressive were the material losses of the enemy.

In a pocket of slightly more than 11 miles south of Montelimar, there is flicked by ground forces included 2,000 motor vehicles, 1,000 wagons, 57 tanks and self-propelled guns, 13 armored half-track gun carriers, 12 armored cars, 10 self-propelled guns, 40 50-mm. anti-aircraft weapons, eight 88-mm. guns and even a trailer with a printing press," Lt.-Gen. Alexander W. Bradley, headquarters 5th Armies Liaison Chief, said.

Additional hundreds of vehicles and guns knocked out by Allied planes littered the road throughout the valley and 200 enemy dead were found in the same area.

The wreckage of Germans locked in sharp battle with an American column in the vicinity of Livron on the north banks of the Drome River, 11 miles south of Valence. After its rear guard had been broken off contact and fled north when the Americans reached Montelimar, another Allied column that punched into Chabeuil, six miles southeast of Valence.

"By accepting heavy losses of the enemy's rear guard, the main body of the German army has succeeded in withdrawing its forces in good order from the Rhone valley," Lt.-Gen. Alexander said in a communique.

Fresh battle gains were chalked up in sharp battle with the enemy's rear guard in the vicinity of Livron to the north banks of the Drome River, 11 miles south of Valence. ROUEN REACTS LIKE PARIS WHEN CANADIANS ENTER

Populace Toss Flowers In Soldiers'. Path and Hail Canucks With Wild Abandon BRIGHTON MAN THERE

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent.

With the 1st Canadian Army in Rouen, Aug. 31 (CP Cable)—Canadian infantry from Ontario and the Maritimes entered historic Rouen today in driving rain and the city reacted like a little Paris.

French Maquis were all over the city, guiding the Canadians through the streets of this ancient Norman port. Civilians poured into the streets in hundreds, waving the tricolors and the Allied flags and cheering wildly.

Women, men and children proudly paraded with red, white and blue ribbons which, apparently, they had held ready for this day. They gave the rasping to the Canadians, tossed flowers in their path, and hailed their muddy, sodden liberators with wild abandon.

I went into Rouen yesterday on the heels of an eastern Ontario infantry battalion which had pierced the defences of Rouen. There was all the usual uncertainty and excitement of the front line, but in itself, disclosed that the Germans did everything possible to destroy facilities, civilian and military, and equipment.

Heroes of Gen. Fedor I. Tolbukhin were pushing through level country today with three of seven Radios Y. Malinovsky and were believed already to have joined.

Another arm of Malinovsky's big command turned directly north through a pass leading to Brasov (pop. 67,800) on the trunk line railroad from Bucharest to Budapest and Vienna. Large groups of Germans and Hungarians are known to be massed in Hungary-held Transylvania in the path of this force.

Even after the Romanian army's withdrawal on the Russian steppes in the Jassy-Kishenev area, Red Star said it still had 30 to 35 divisions which had been pledged these to the Allies.

Division Destroyed.

"German divisions in Romania are doomed," the usually conservative Soviet army daily added. Red Star said five to six German divisions had been cut off from the main German army and that Marshal Tito's divisions had handed the Germans and Hungarians a severe defeat in Yugoslavia. In Ploesti itself, dispatches said, the fate of the fleeing Germans raged through the streets battered with the bombers. The German left dozens of barbed wire barricades in the path of the Red Army.

Fast, mobile Soviet squads making up the spear head around were strengthened by infantry and tanks that swept the rich Ploesti oil fields into the bulging bag of Russian victories, then turned south toward the Romanian capital.

"A Russian War Bulletin said Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky's and Ukrainian Army captured more than 300 towns yesterday around Ploesti and northeast of Bucharest, including Mariza, only 17 miles away.

(Other forces of Malinovsky's army, which believed developing a major offensive against Hungarian territory at two points and said Hungarian and German troops fought fiercely to plug gaps carved out by the Russians) reported to have won control of our principal lines into Transylvania.

15,000 Prisoners Taken.

The fleeting advance by Gen. Malinovsky's army captured an additional 15,000 Germans Tuesday, including a corps commander, Gen. Heil; a divisional commander, Lt.-Gen. Wilhelm Ullrich, two colonels commanding divisions, the Soviet communique said.

Prisoners taken in the unsuccessful defence of Ploesti were declared "tremendous."

Gen. Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3rd army captured 105 towns in the pocket between the Danube River bends and the Black Sea, and Bucharest, only to the west in the 2nd army.

His army moved rapidly upon the Bulgarian border from positions south of the Danube through Dobruja. His right arm reached deep in the Danube Valley through Valachia, and was reported headed to link up with Marshal Tito's forces in Serbia.

Third of German Petroleum Supply Seized at Ploesti

Fields, Greatest in Europe, Saved From Destruction

By EDDIE GILMORE
(AP War Correspondent)

Moscow, Aug. 31 —(AP)— The Red army was believed today to have entered Bucharest, capital of Romania, Dec. capturing the great Ploesti oil fields and sending perhaps a third of the German petroleum supply.

At midnight, the Russians were 17 miles from the city of 648,000 after an advance of nearly 40 miles a day through the capitulated Balkan kingdom.

Their final announcement was not to be made but Muscovites kept their radios tuned for an order of the day.

"With the fall of Ploesti, the way to Bucharest is open," Red Star said.

Ploesti reported from captured Ploesti that the abrupt Red army drive had prevented destruction of the Ploesti oil fields but added that serious damage had been done Romanian oil refineries. The Russians put out tremendous fires and civilians, directed Soviet troops to a large group of Germans dressed as civilians, applying the torch at right left.

Tried to Destroy Fields.

The dispatch added that a plane trip over the fields, presented in Europe except for those in Russia itself, disclosed that the Germans did everything possible to destroy facilities, civilian and military, and equipment.

Heroes of Gen. Fedor I. Tolbukhin were pushing through level country today with three of seven Radios Y. Malinovsky and were believed already to have joined.

Famous Tapestry Found in Louvre

London, Aug. 31 (CP—Reuters)—The world famous Bayeux tapestry telling the story of the Norman conquest of England has been found in the Louvre, according to the reports reaching Reuter today. As yet the full story has not been unfolded.

When Allied troops liberated Bayeux, the tapestry which consists of 221 feet of delicate embroidery was missing.

For some time, there has been anxiety as to whether the Germans would destroy it or it had been hidden away by Patriots.

Embroidered deep and worked in eight colors, the Bayeux tapestry is the most graphic record of life in England 900 years ago and countless histories and illustrations have been based upon it.

REMNANTS OF NAZI 19th ARMY RACING TOWARD LYON

American Units Move Through Nice Toward Italian Frontier 12 Miles Ahead

HARBOR DAMAGED

By NOLAND NORGAARD
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, Aug. 31 (AP)—Remnants of the German 19th army raced desperately north toward Lyon today, fighting costly rear-guard actions with pursuing Americans only 12 miles behind them on the Italian Riviera highway to Nice and the French Riviera metropolis of Nice, near the Italian frontier, some 13 miles ahead.

Nice, with a population of 200,000 and the largest of the Riviera's famed playgrounds, was taken without any opposition. Damage was confined chiefly to the harbor area, front headquarters said.

The total of prisoners captured by the 7th army since it swarmed ashore on the beaches of southern France passed the 80,000 mark, with additional thousands rounded up from Nazi units intercepted and cut to pieces in the Rhone Valley pockets south of the junction of the Rhone and Saone rivers.

Equally impressive were the material losses of the enemy.

In a pocket of slightly more than 11 miles south of Montelimar, there is flicked by ground forces included 2,000 motor vehicles, 1,000 wagons, 57 tanks and self-propelled guns, 13 armored half-track gun carriers, 12 armored cars, 10 self-propelled guns, 40 50-mm. anti-aircraft weapons, eight 88-mm. guns and even a trailer with a printing press," Lt.-Gen. Alexander W. Bradley, headquarters 5th Armies Liaison Chief, said.

Additional hundreds of vehicles and guns knocked out by Allied planes littered the road throughout the valley and 200 enemy dead were found in the same area.

The wreckage of Germans locked in sharp battle with an American column in the vicinity of Livron on the north banks of the Drome River, 11 miles south of Valence. After its rear guard had been broken off contact and fled north when the Americans reached Montelimar, another Allied column that punched into Chabeuil, six miles southeast of Valence.

"By accepting heavy losses of the enemy's rear guard, the main body of the German army has succeeded in withdrawing its forces in good order from the Rhone valley," Lt.-Gen. Alexander said in a communique.

GEN. STUELPNAGEL DIED FROM SELF-INFLICTED WOUNDS

Paper Says Kesselring, Rommel and He in Plan to Oust Hitler

ROMMEL IN GERMANY

London, Aug. 31, (CP Cable)—The Evening Standard, in a story from its correspondent in Berne, Germany in Paris, today reported the Gen. Otto Von Stuelpnagel, German military governor of France, died from self-inflicted gunshot wounds following the failure of the plot against Hitler.

Grunse said the story came from an informant closely connected with underground work within the man administrative circles in Paris".

The correspondent added that Field Marshal Kesselring, Stuelpnagel and Rommel became involved in the plan to rid Germany of Hitler when they realised that the end had been reached after the failure of the recent success of the Allied invasion.

On July 20, he reported, troops under Stuelpnagel's command fought a fierce battle with the Gestapo at the Paris headquarters, but soon it was learned in Paris that the plot against Hitler had failed.

Stuelpnagel is said to have written a farewell letter to his son, saying he preferred an honorable death on the battlefield to what awaited him. He then turned and ran a drive from Paris to Verdun and himself in the head. He died a few days later.

Rommel, too, knew his fate, said the report, when a special motor car accident was arranged for him, but he did not die and probably now is in Germany".

ENEMY TRANSPORT RAIDED

London, Aug. 31—(AP)— British Mosquito aircraft destroyed another transport and industry in Northern France and Germany last night despite the bandage of poor weather.

While the Mosquitos bombed the industrial centre of Frankfurt without loss, other members of these speedy, all-purpose raiders, operating as fighter-bombers, battered rail targets from the fighting front to the German borders.

ALLIES CAPTURE PART OF PESARO ON ADRIATIC SEA

One of the Eastern Anchors of Gothic Line Falls to Polish Troops

DRIVE ACROSS FOGLIA

Rome, Aug. 31—(AP)—The Adriatic port of Pesaro, one of the eastern anchors of the Germans' Gothic Line, has fallen to Polish troops, and Allied forces now are in contact with strong enemy positions across the Foglia River, front headquarters announced today.

Pesaro fell only after a bitter fight in which both infantry and armor participated. The Germans' counter-attacked fiercely yesterday after the Poles had invaded the city, the dispatch said, but were repulsed with heavy losses.

The Poles announced they had taken a sizeable bag of prisoners in the fighting.

Dispatches from the front said that in some places farther West British 8th Army troops drove across the Foglia so swiftly the Germans did not have time to lay mines.

Headquarters said, however, that the forces already at grips with positions in the Gothic Line — on which the enemy is expected to make his main stand in defence of Northern Italy—were meeting stiff resistance.

No Nazis Left.

Reports from the field said that not a Nazi was left on the south bank of the Foglia in the area 10 of 14 miles inland from the Adriatic.

Other 8th Army forces further inland, headquarters said, were approaching the Foglia after occupying the town of Urbino and pushing nine miles beyond it. They were also through difficult mountain terrain in the Appenines. Urbino is an important art centre and the site of the national gallery of Marche province.

On the central sector of the front further advances in the upper Tiber and Arno valleys also brought Allied troops close to the Gothic Line.

The situation on the Allied 5th army front in the west remained unchanged.

Aluminum Dust Used To Combat Silicosis, Scourge of Miners

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Aug. 31 —(CP)— Silicosis—scourge of miners and quarrymen—may be conquered by silica dust in many industries—is being combatted by a method novel in medical history, Ontario's fight to search into the causes of silicosis is being conducted by engineer, surgeon and a member of the Department of Mines chemist at the University of Toronto, led to the discovery that silica dust could be combatted by aluminum dust—aluminum, basic element of clay, bauxite, aluminum alloy.

For years, silicosis, which attacks the lungs, had been as final as the victims as an amputation. In 1927 the aluminum dust treatment was found to work on guinea pigs and five years of research by the late A. J. Orenstein, University of Toronto, established one thing definitely. Aluminum dust formed a jelly around silica particles in the lungs and stopped progress of the disease.

Results invariably leads to tuberculosis, for the dust forms a tough fibrous material in the lungs. This cuts down breathing area and allows the tuberculosis bacilli to get the upper hand.

But to say aluminum dust will stand as a preventative and cure is premature, according to those working with the dust treatment. However, laboratory work does act as a prophylactic, preventing spread of a disease whose progress can be rapid.

The United States Labor Department estimates there are about 110,000 silicotics in the United States. On the basis of that figure, T. Norman Dean, statistician of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board, figures there are about 11,000 silicotics in Canada.

MARCUS M. WERDEN

Burr's (Special) — Scion of an American revolutionary captain though of English extraction, Marcus Mahanding Werden, member of one of Prince Edward County's oldest pioneer families, died at his home here at the age of ninety-one. The late Mr. Werden had enjoyed good health up to within a week of his demise.

His lineage is traced back to early English forebears who emigrated to Connecticut in the early part of the eighteenth century. They later fought on the side of the colonies in the War of Independence.

The Werden family came to Prince Edward county about 1817 to join a brother Asa Werden, who had settled in that part of Ontario.

Mr. Werden was born at Soup Harbor near Point Petre, his mother dying when he was a child. Later his family moved to Cherry Valley where they conducted a sawmill business. In 1874 they moved to Christian Street where they purchased a farm, and where Mr. Werden resided until the time of his death.

In October, 1881, he married Mary Louretta Herrington, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Herrington. This union lasted for sixty years and to it were born five children, Ralph Werden, B. Sc. (deceased) Bogota, N.J.; Mrs. Earl Atkinson, Belleville; W. Stanley Werden, Christian Street; Albert H. Werden, (deceased) Ohio and Mrs. Rose Burr, of Bancroft.

The late Mr. Werden was a Liberal in politics and a member of the Disciple Church on the fifth confession of Hillier where he taught a Bible class for many years. Beside his widow and three children he is survived by nine grandchildren, and three great grandchildren. A sister predeceased him in 1936.

The funeral was held on Sunday, Aug. 27 from the residence of Stanley Hone, Picton, with the Rev. Lorne Burr officiating.

The pall bearers were three grandsons. Ronald Burr, Robert Werden and Allan Werden, Henry Dick, Harmon Montgomery and Kenneth Woods. Interment was made in Cherry Valley cemetery.

Hesitancy in Entering War, Political Expediency Since, Watchword of Liberal Party

Rowe

Former Head of Ontario Conservative Party Was Speaker at P-C Convention Held in City Wednesday

LARGE TURNOUT

"The present Government at Ottawa entered this war with hesitancy and political expediency, has been its watchword ever since," the Hon. Earle Rowe, Federal member for Dufferin-Simcoe stated here last night in City Hall.

Speaking to the delegates to the convention of the South East Hastings Progressive Conservative Association in the Collegiate Auditorium, the former head of the Ontario Conservative party said that "no one knows where Canada stood in early 1939. We had a great nucleus of industry, transportation, manpower and other resources. We were ready in this respect. But what the Liberal party had the opportunity to unite with other groups for the furtherance of the war effort it refused to act. It refused to set politics aside.

"It is a matter of fact," Mr. Rowe declared, "that in 1937 Premier King told Hitler in person that in the event of a war between Britain and Germany, Canada would fight beside the empire. Why tell Hitler that in 1937 when he refused to tell it to the people of Canada in 1940?" Claims King Turned Down Offers.

Premier King turned down offers of a British battalion and exhibition fields in Canada, previous to the war, the speaker declared, and stated that there would be no six fields left in the City of Toronto or Ottawa. It meant, nothing to Canada.

"It meant just this," the speaker asserted. "There would have been more than...a handful of gallant British aviators, those heroes who stood between Empire and destruction in 1940, had this scheme been allowed to proceed in Canada. Something else happened. We would have been ready in those days if Canada had had leaders.

"Again I say, the government entered this war with hesitancy. Of political expediency has been its watchword since," Mr. Rowe declared.

Speaker Asks Question.

"Why did this government tell Hitler it would fight with everything it had beside Britain, when it keeps 150,000 men in Canada at an annual cost of the millions of dollars, and sheps thousands idle in industry," he asked.

Mr. Rowe charged the Prime Minister with "parading nations and peoples" in Canadian people for the past twenty-five years. Never since Confederation," he said, "has this country been so seriously divided as it is at the present time. And nothing in it has been the government policy of preserving protection in the east; there trade in the west; conscription in one part, and not in another."

Declaring that the necessities for the national disunity, Canada must be prepared for its future efforts the greatest remuneration for a reasonable amount of effort of any country in the world.

In the past the old Conservative party did its part in uniting the country, Sir John A. MacDonald and others working for unity, and it will be the responsibility of Mr. John Bracken, another great Canadian, to restore peace.

Quebec Waking Up.

"Even Quebec is waking up," Mr. Rowe declared, "it is beginning to realize that it has been made a political goat and it is catching up with the old type of political jugglers. I predict that Mr. King will not get over twenty seats in that province in the next general election."

Canada is being ruled by a government of commission, the speaker asserted. "A government controlled by orders-in-council. Over 80,000 orders-in-council have already been passed. Twenty-five were passed every day Parliament sat, and which were given assent by a parliament behind closed doors.

"The hour has struck," Mr. Rowe said, "when the people should be informed of some of the burdens of imposed regulations. When this government, the Dominion government will not be able to extricate itself from the web of bureaucracy in which it has enmeshed itself. Apes Third Party Says Speaker.

The speaker charged the King Government with mimicking the C.C.F. policies, has adopted everything this party has suggested. It was the third party in saying, that it will take over public utilities, he said, in order to relieve taxation.

"If do not," Mr. Rowe said, "that the C.C.F. has a chance to form a government. Evidence of recent provincial elections does not give much hope to them. Saskatchewan conservatives are the finest against the Gardner regime."

"The next government," he declared, "will be one of the larger party groups, perhaps a co-operation with some other group. But Canadians are beginning to realize that John Bracken, will convince them that through his policy, he will be able to reunite them."

Can Trust Bracken.

"Canada is in much safer to be entrusted than this man Bracken. A man close to the soil, who knows the individual man and who knows what individual enterprise is," the speaker said.

The proposed program of post-war activities will cost some 1,500 millions of dollars, Mr. Rowe asserted. "This will need a man with goodness—man at the helm. John Bracken has behind him a fine job and record as premier of Manitoba for twenty years will prove that. Based in equality of opportunity, the lifting of governmental restrictions and retaining his interest in giving the young people of this nation, their 'best head' to do as they think best for the future of Canada, whether they be from the humanist, theorist now in power in Ottawa who will tell the people how much they are to be taxed, how they will do, what their job will be and how much they will get for doing it.

Democracy Safe.

Democracy is safe, the speaker said. "It has taken five years to prove to the dictators that united democracies can undo in a short time what freely given by plebiscite has achieved."

Mr. Rowe added, "we must be sure that our democratic way is safe. We must be sure that it is. They demand more rules and regulations. The King Government, cannot answer them. Only a united democratic web in which it has entangled itself. Only a united Canada can live unless it forms a coalition government with the C.C.F."

Quoting Mr. Rowe said, "I would rather put up with three parties than one party which could form a coalition of both."

"Third Force" in Canada is fighting on the field of Normandy and Italy. It is fighting, not to return to the same old order," he added, "on the same conditions that made Canada great. Sharing the sacrifice made by their forefathers.

Should Remember Dead.

The fact that London has ceased to be the financial centre of the world through the war, is no reason why Canada should join a Pan-American group, the speaker declared. Isolationist outfit, Mr. Rowe said. "Thrive never was a nation, that should be more proud to belong to the British Commonwealth of Nations."

He was satisfied, the speaker said in conclusion, that if John Bracken is elected, Canada will have a government of the people which will breathe the spirit of tolerance and national unity. "And if we ed the necessity of co-operation. If the present government were to be defeated.

"Some one had the pure unadulterated guts to mention me for this convention," Col. P. H. Wills smiled. "I live in Prince Edward County and as a resident of that county I am proud to be here. As far as all that," he added, "I am a Irish Tory and am proud of it. I hope we can settle down after the war and have a good old Irish time." The delegates to be all Tory and "not a half-and-a Nonconformist." In the next election, rests upon the electors, whether they want a change, if victory is to be achieved. Canada needs unity and only under a government of that kind can that be gained," he said.

Mr. Rowe pleaded, anxiety and mentality of this distinguished gathered in Trenton that they would not allow any name to be placed," said Mr. W. C. Mikel, who was chairman for the meeting, "the discretion of the importance of having in the City of the everyday man, and the excellent properties of his recently published book "History of the City of Belleville."

WIll Support Candidate.

Pressure of business forced him to change his mind, Mayor Harry Ballard told the delegates. Previous to this he had decided to let his name come before the convention. However, he would support the candidate in the forthcoming Federal and Provincial governments and municipalities is long overdue. We are not, now in the days of the post-war situation here."

Urged Support of Bracken

His urged support of Mr. Bracken but warned that the principals of the party and its leader cannot be upheld by silence. The other parties are working hard and are gaining. "We must do the same, if we are to win," he said, "and I appeal to wait for the vote."

He left no premonition that Mr. Stokes will get the nomination and I wish to say my full support." Mr. Bone quoted incidents at the Winnipeg convention, where French Canadian delegates objected to the word "conscription" being used in a resolution prepared by the Program Committee of which Mr. Bracken was chairman. Each body threw the word out and that was a great mistake. "I am not going to tell you who this Jamieson Bone was," he said, "but you Belleville and Ontario people will soon find out who he is," the speaker smiled.

Mr. Bone concluded, "if I am not selected I can still write articles in the newspaper."

Member Heard Briefly

The present member was equally as brief. Mr. George H. Stokes quipped that Belleville had he had endeavored to serve them during his term of office. "I first met you down there, we were a small group and the consensus was that the Dominion government needed a thing of the past. Now" he added, "the party is on its feet and is facing facts." He paid tribute to the party leader, Mr. Bracken, as a man with good sound logical sense, and not an oratorical spellbinder." He was with the people of this country was faced with a socialistic situation, that was a menace.

The post-war period will be as much a national crisis as the war itself, R. D. Arnott, M.P.P. declared. "If we are to deal with it, there must be accomplished a real nationalism with the banks of which is cooperation between Federal and Provincial governments and municipalities.

"We know that members of the armed services and those now engaged in war industries must have

St. John Ambulance Nursing Division To Hold Tag Day

Although regular summer classes have been suspended since June, members of St. John Ambulance division, nevertheless have been doing their bit throughout the summer. Working in pairs and in rotation, two members of the brigade have been on duty at the local hospital every night, this relieving a critical nursing shortage. This responsibility will be assumed by local hospital auxiliaries.

In addition to hospital assistance rendered, members of the division have also raised thousand service, dressing and caste, while at the brigade headquarters on Pinnacle Street a complete first aid centre is maintained with members ready to act in any emergency.

Organized in March, 1943, several hundred local residents have been trained and have received their first aid certificates. Many of these have been used at Belleville Jail. During the past two years a first aid booth has been maintained and manned at Victoria Park.

But money is required to replenish supplies and to purchase further equipment in order that the local brigade may be kept at its fullest efficiency. Therefore a tag day is being held for this purpose and it is expected that the public will contribute to the work. A generous response is anticipated.

The War Today—
Much Good News Continues To Come From Gen. Eisenhower's Headquarters

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

Good news continues to roll out of Allied Supreme Headquarters and today there have been several announcements of vast and happy significance.

One is that Gen. Patton's racing armored columns has driven northward beyond Laon, not far from the headwaters of the winding river Somme, the valley of which is the main defensive position in the northern tip of France and so much is one of the great battlefields of the ages. This means that an advance of a few more miles will enable U. S. forces to flank this historic valley and render it untenable for the Hitlerites.

Meantime British troops have launched a fresh offensive from their bridgeheads across the lower Seine and have thrust spearheads into Amiens on the Somme, far to the north. The city, the city which has grown gray in the service of wars, is one of the key positions on the Somme.

This British advance, coupled with the American drive on the east, will compel the Germans to abandon their positions on the coast of the English Channel south of the mouth of the Somme. They'll have to move fast, too, or get caught in another disastrous trap.

But one of the most cheering aspects of the British offensive lies in the official statement that "the thrust was cutting off German flying bomb launching sites with every mile gained."

Supreme Commander Eisenhower has capped all this fine news with the statement that the campaign in Northern France is ahead of schedule. He didn't say just how much, but made it clear that it is more than 5 days to the good.

That 5 days means a lot at this critical juncture. Hitler is fighting for time, and we are fighting to deprive him of it. The Nazis declare the Allies are speeding in an effort to win the war before winter comes on a claim which one would scarcely dispute—and 5 days saved now may be worth 100 after the arrival of bad weather.

The whole picture or the fighting in France is that of a wholesale German retirement. The Nazis are offering only such resistance as is necessary to cover their retreat. They are heading for the defences on their own frontier.

He was speaker at the Rotary Club yesterday, giving some details concerning his work with the hygiene section.

Remarkable Prophecies

One of the chief figures in the dream rehearsal for the greatest conflict the world has ever known, Haile Selassie, Lion of Judah, Defender of the Christian Faith and Emperor of the Ancient Kingdom of Ethiopia, has been proved by world events, to be one of the outstanding prognosticators of the century.

The fragile man, with the fluttering hands, dark eyes that glitter, is, legend says, descended from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, and much of the wisdom attributed to that mighty king has come down to those who sit on the Ethiopian throne.

In 1933 in the capital of Addis Ababa, the tiny monarch made his first prophecy. "We shall be attacked by Mussolini in two years."

Twenty-four months later Mussolini's legions swarmed across his Empire.

Later he watched Bruno Mussolini, son of the Italian Dictator, dropping bombs on his unarmed subjects. "The day will come when that vulture of the air will perish by his own cruel blood. He who lives by the sword will perish by the sword," foretold the Emperor. In 1941 Bruno was killed in an air crash.

Perhaps his most amazing prophecy was made before the League of Nations in Geneva in 1936. "I shall return to my capital on the fifth anniversary of its capture," he predicted. Addressing "King of Kings" he recalled Addis Ababa on May 5, 1941, exactly five years to the day after its taking by the Italians.

On the evening of the day of his triumphal entry, his friend finds, "We, the weak, shall see the godless Mussolini perish, devoured by disease, and his family assassinated or in misery. And the curse of the bombed Ethiopian people will be on his soul for all eternity."

His next remarkable prophecy was made in England in 1937. In the presence of his family he foretold "There will be a second World War as a result of what happened to Ethiopia. For the violence of an independent country will only encourage aggression. A terrible conflict lies ahead."

He went on. "As in the case of Ethiopia, the weaker will fall first. The powers of evil will be overthrown and the weakest of them, Mussolini's Italy, will be the first to fall, followed by Hitler."

His last prophecy is one that holds the eager interest of those that believe in prognostication, or who have been drawn to this field by the amazing outcome of Selassie's utterances. It is this: "One year after the fall of Italy the Allies will be victorious in Europe. The victory will take place around Armistice Day, sometime near November 11, 1944."

Whether this last prognostication will come true, remains to be seen, but there are scores of war-weary people who hope and pray that the little Emperor's hitherto infallability about prophecies has not deserted him.

Favors Old-Fashioned Spanking

"Is spanking necessary? Does sparing the rod mean only spoiling the child?" Questions like these can start arguments in any group of parents but most people are very decided in both for and against. However, Channing Pollock, discussing the matter in Coronet magazine, advances the opinion that spanking is certainly necessary.

He thinks the more he comes in contact with modern youth, the more he regrets that nowadays, the paternal hairbrush and the paternal heir are so rarely found bottom side up. He feels that his ultra-progressive friends may be horrified at this old-fashioned view but he asks why the era of "spare the rod and spoil the child" produced such a race of men and women while the fruits of the newer theory appear less dependable.

Mr. Pollock thinks that where the force of example can replace the force of the right arm, so much the better, but he does not advocate flogging under any circumstances. "A slap or two from the rear inflicts no injury, and the threat of it often may do away with the necessity for it.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, upholds this view the author believes. Mr. Hoover has pointed out that failure on the part of parents to punish their children is fairly sure to result in more painful punishment from other sources later in life.

In concluding his views the author says that "we have chosen a very poor time, indeed, in which to abandon the only form of punishment no child can misunderstand which is a well placed smack at the seat of the trouble."

Counting Chickens

(London Daily Mail)

Orders for vast quantities of flags are being given by British business firms, local councils, and private people for the Peace Day which they believe is not far off.

But almost all of the orders have to be refused. The only flags now for sale are from pre-war stocks, which are running low.

First town in Britain to get its flags is Oswestry, Shropshire, which has bought Union Jacks, Dominion and United Nations flags from a local firm.

London's Doctors

(Leeds Yorkshire Post)

London's remaining doctors are having a tough time under the flying bomb attacks.

Hard pressed though they were before the assault began, through the absence of colleagues on war service, they are infinitely more overworked today.

Many general practitioners seem to have adopted the public-spirited procedure of rushing at full speed to every incident occurring near their homes, and there working their hardest, amid indescribable dirt and no little danger, to relieve the immediate suffering of the injured.

This Makes It Clear

(From a Letter in the London Times)

Sir:—In the untameable unicorn of Job xxxix, 9 was beardless. It was the aurochs, or wild bull of Judaea; but it seems that about the third century, A.D., a time of religious syncretism, Christian students of the Septuagint identified it with the fabulous white hirco-cervus, or goat-stag, of the Dionysian mysteries, which was a symbol of immortality. The hirco-cervus or the goat-stag was identified by the Druids who visited Thessaly from Britain and Ireland with their own immortal white hart (originally a hind) lodged in the sacred grove of seven trees under a wild apple tree.

Be Nonchalant

(Detroit Free Press)

You can't get all you want of your favorite brand of cigarettes? No one can.

Civilians are smoking more than ever, a result of war tension and high wages. Soldiers and sailors smoke more than in civil life. Through lend-lease our Allies are dragging heavily on our supply. Shortages of manpower and paper for containers curtail production and distribution.

Add to all that, a prospective tobacco shortage. The Government has been paying farmers more to raise less. While consumption of American cigarettes has increased 58 per cent since 1940, acreage has increased only four per cent.

Well, if you can smoke corn silk, we can.

Sforza On The Job

(Montreal Star)

One of Italy's most distinguished refugees from the Fascist dictatorship was Count Carlo Sforza, one-time Italian Foreign Minister, who returned to his native land from New York behind victorious Allied arms. Now Pietro Bunich, Fascist's last foreign Minister, has been arrested for "Fascist crimes" under a warrant signed by "Carlo Sforza, High Commissioner." Revenge is sweet!

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1944, Edgar A. Guest)

PURPOSE

No way to know our purpose here!
No orders on a piece of paper,
In phrase clear and severe:
Be priest or poet, smith or draper.

No plain directive as we start!
No briefing of our earthly mission!
Sent here, from science, trade or art
To find and serve our own ambition.

We come our labor here to choose,
Drawn to it by some strange attraction,
The joys of Heaven to win or lose,
And worldly pride and satisfaction.

God leaves us free through life to go,
Do what seems right, and sometimes blunder.
Our service! Was it destined so?
Ah, that is what we often wonder!

Newsmen in Paris Were Kissed And Mauled Almost Into a Daze

(By ERNIE PYLE)

Paris, Aug. 29 (Delayed)—The other correspondents have written so thoroughly and so well about the fantastic eruption of mass joy when Paris was liberated that I shall not dwell on it much longer.

But there are some little things I have to get out of my system, or we'll have at least this one more column on it.

Actually the thing has floored most of us. I know that I have felt totally incapable of reporting it to you. It was so big I felt inadequate to cope with it. I didn't know where to start or what to say. The whole thing overran about a thousand feeble in the point of saintity.

I'm not alone in this feeling, for I had a dozen other correspondents say the same thing. A good many of us feel we have failed in properly presenting the loveliest, brightest story of our time. It may could be that this is because we have been so unused, for so long, to anything bright.

At any rate let's go back to the beginning.

demonstration. From two o'clock in the afternoon until darkness set around ten, we few Americans in Paris were like corks in a mad torrent and hauled and mauled by friendly mobs until we hardly knew where we were.

Everybody kissed you—little children, old women, grown-up men, beautiful girls. They jumped and squealed and pushed in a literal frenzy.

They pinned bright little flags and badges all over you. Amateur cameramen took pictures. They tossed flowers endlessly. Inmates into your jeep. One little girl threw three bottles of cider into ours.

As you drove along gigantic masses of waving and screaming humanity clapped their hands and though applauding a fine performance in a theatre. We in the jeep smiled back until we had set grins on our faces. We waved until our arms gave out, and then we just waggled our fingers. We shook hands until our hands were bruised and scratched. If the jeep stopped for anything, instantly we were lost. We couldn't reach you three kisses at you, and we threw kisses back.

They said we were the most wonderful French songs we had never heard, and then they sang the "Marseillaise" and "Madelon" and "Over There" and the British national anthem.

French policemen saluted formally but smilingly as we passed. French traffic cops that were in a hurry stopped all pulled over to the sidewalk and saluted formally as we passed over.

And then some weird cell in the mystic human makeup caused everybody suddenly to remember that we correspondents were Americans. It began the first evening, and by the next day had grown to unbelievable proportions. Everywhere we wanted every soldier's autograph.

The Germans had machine guns in cars at you to sign. It was just the same. We signed some last night, and one day, had a stack of neat little 3 x 5 slips, surely 300 of them, to sign before we left.

That first afternoon only the main city streets were open and used, and they were packed with humanity. Side streets were roped off and deserted, because the Germans were still making explosions and some snipers there.

The weather was marvelous for liberation day, and for the next day also. For two days previously it had been cold and rainy. Then early on the big day the sky was pure blue and the air fresh and warm—a perfect day for a perfect occasion.

Paris seems to have all the beautiful girls we have always heard it had. Even the ugly ones had a lot of getting themselves up fascinating-ly. Perhaps it was because their clothes are worn imaginatively. Hats are small and perched on the lovely warm season, and when the flag-draped holiday streets are packed with females the color makes everything else in the world look drab.

As one soldier remarked, the biggest thrill was probably to see people in bright summer clothes again.

Like any city, Paris has its quota of dirty and ugly people. But dirty and ugly people were conspicuous by their absence. Even the cabbies and Rank Gorrell got roundly kissed. Paris was all dressed up and looking wonderful. I have ever seen. I must add that the girls in the underground service he also got more than his share of embraces from the beautiful French women.

There was one funny little old woman, not more than four feet high, up to kiss men in military vehicles. She approached us accordingly, and carrying a stepladder. Whenever a jeep stopped she would unfold her stepladder and let the boys have it with hugs, laughs and kisses.

Paris seems to have a little different from the first. You could sense that difference in the faces of hours liberation the people were almost animated by it. There was joy and relief and gratitude. They were actually grateful to us for having come and screamed, "Thank you, oh thank you, for coming!"

But to us the whole day it was a deliberate holiday. It was a festival prepared for us by the people to the purpose. You could tell that the women had prettied up in our honor. The old men had on their gold medals, and the Frenchmen had combed and Sunday-dressed until they hurt.

And then everybody came downtown. By ten in the morning the kissing and shouting and autographing and applauding were almost deafening. The pandemonium of a free as lovable Paris reigned again. It was wonderful to be here.

EMPLOYMENT UP

London (CP)—British, which not too many years ago had 2,000,000 unemployed, had 61,000 on July 17. That was 11,000 fewer than on April 17.

German Planes Avoid Battles Over Normandy

By ALAN RANDAL

Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the R.A.F. in Normandy, Aug. 21 (CP)—In this fighter wing commanded by Wing Commander Johnny Harries, D.S.O., D.F.C. and two bars (he flies) are world, impatient and annoyed at the Hun.

The reason? The Hun has shown so little inclination to fight that Harries' men are spoiling for a really good tangle with the Luftwaffe.

They made names for themselves in the Battle of Britain, in the desert, North Africa, in Sicily and in Italy. Now the Hun is giving them little chance to enhance their reputations in Normandy skies.

Harries, who threw up his studies in medicine and joined the R. A. F. as an ACI when the war started, flies with his wing whenever he can. Any excuse is good. All is of good enough for him.

His wing includes Spitfire squadrons, including the famous No. 33 Squadron which carried Britain's banner into the Messerschmitt 109 days when the Hurricane was hot stuff.

Of all the squadrons under Harries' leadership, probably the "Double Three" would want it that with the Germans now than any other because their early record? It is one of proud achievement and overwhelming German odds. Now the odds are in favor of the "Double Three."

Fighters

Their roster has included such greats as Pat Pattle, Lance Wade, Dicta Dean, Jamie Rankin and Bob Howell. Few people probably even remember Howell. Yet Group Capt. Pattle was one of the greatest fighter pilots of the war who died in the Battle of Athens when he led a handful of Hurricanes in an almost hopeless fight.

But at least, they tell you on his squadron, he died in combat against something the Germans won't do today.

Fighting Germans and the Hun at the same time, flying with a temperature of more than 100, Pattle had 34 enemy aircraft destroyed and confirmed when he died early in April, 1941. Only now has Wing Cmdr. Johnny Johnson topped that figure with 35 to become the top-ranking ace on operations with the R. A. F.

After Pattle died Bill Howell flew to Crete to take over the remnants of the "Double Three". He left behind a legend of efficiency, but with the departure

Oddfellows And Rebekahs Attend Divine Service

Rev. F. C. Beazor, the rector, preached an appropriate sermon for the occasion, the church being well filled with lodge members and the congregation.

The lodges paraded from their rooms to the church and following the service they paraded to the village cemetery where the ceremony of decorating the graves was conducted.

The graves of the following departed members of the Order were decorated:—R. T. WEDDINGS

DILLS—HITCHON

Baskets of gladioli and ferns formed a lovely floral background in Holloway St. United Church on Wednesday afternoon, August 30, at three-thirty o'clock, when the Rev. J. A. Dills united in marriage Marjorie Leola Hitchon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Hitchon, to Sgt. Arnold John Dills of Nanaimo, B.C., son of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Dills.

Mr. William Connor presided at the console of the organ and played softly throughout the ceremony and at the signing of the register. Mrs. F. E. Houston, as soloist, rendered delightfully "The Lord's Prayer" before the marriage ceremony and "I Love You Truly" at the signing of the register.

Entering the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin, the bride was a pretty picture in her long gown of white satin, accentuated with lace trim and fashioned with sweetheart neckline, long sleeves ending in points over her wrists and tight fitting bodice falling gracefully into a full sweeping skirt. Her veil of bridal tulle illusion and with slight train was caught in her hair with a half hat misted with dainty white hyacinths. She carried an arm bouquet of Better Time roses.

Miss Marjorie Hitchon, her sister's only attendant, was wearing a charming dress of pink shot taffeta, made with high square neckline, short ruffled sleeves, fitted waistline and full skirt. Sitting elegantly atop her head was a Watteau Hat of similar color to her dress. A nosegay of Briarcliff roses and scabiosa completed her ensemble.

Acting as groomsman for the occasion was Mr. Dwight Dills, brother of the groom, and ushers were Wallace Woodley, of Waterford, Ont., and Garnet Hitchon.

For the wedding reception at the home of the bride's parents, the bride's mother chose an effective ensemble in heavy blue crepe and black accessories. The groom's mother selected turquoise blue complimented with black accessories. Both wore corsages of Briarcliff roses and sweetheart.

For travelling to Vancouver, B.C., the bride donned a navy blue wool suit and black accessories.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. A. Carter, Mrs. A. Dills, Mr. and Mrs. J. Carter, all of Dunnville; Mr. Wallace Woodley, Waterford; Rev. and Mrs. J. A. O'Neill, David and Margaret Jean, of Havelock.

W.M.S. School For Leaders Meets at Whitby

By CORA HILL

Whitby, (Special).—To historic Trafalgar Castle known now as Ontario Ladies' College, have come upwards of 150 delegates from the Bay of Quinte branch to study the missionary program of the church.

This is the 10th anniversary of the School for Leaders, and this is the Branch that pioneered in organizing these schools. Due to the branches initial effort in 1934 and later success in the venture, other schools have been organized.

The Monday night session was marked by an impressive candle-light service symbolizing the consecration and growth of the school. It was written and directed by Miss C. Wagar of Peterborough, and conducted by Mrs. E. K. Harris also of Peterborough.

Mrs. W. Griffiths presides again as the Dean of the School, Dr. and Mrs. Carscallen are the hosts and the dining room for the boy women and girls from all parts of the Bay, from Picketing to Arnprior, from the Ottawa River to Lake Ontario.

Wednesday Session.

Mr. C. G. Park of Whitby, in a series of three lectures spoke on Wednesday morning on "The Attitude of Peace." Dealing with this lecture based on Matt. 5:9 (Wrench Version) "Blessed are the Architects of peace, for they shall be called the children of God" presented a vivid picture of the part the artisans—the common toilers—of the world will play in the making of the face of peace. Mr. Park quoted Sir Alfred Zimmern, professor of International Relations at Oxford University, who said, the greatest obstacle to the establishment of enduring world peace is the small scale individual, the person with selfish parochial outlook and no passion to achieve a Christian solution to the world's problems."

The church, said Mr. Park, must transcend the outlook of the small scale individual. His opinioned the solution may not be found, but it be that of an uncompromising Christian idealism.

Not, expediency, but, what ought to be, is the Christian approach, and, quoting from Dr. Paul Hutchison's "From Victory to Peace," he went on, "The church believes there must be achieved a world community of action, owing pregiance to a true international law, defined and administered by international agencies, established by the necessary surrender of national sovereignty on the part of individual nations. Because this is distant goal beyond statesmen at the present time, hence we must be political realists and support the immediate practical steps possible at the present time.

The purely voluntary but effective collaboration of the free peoples comprising the British Commonwealth of Nations suggests the pattern of the post war world.

Walter Lippman said, we may expect the International Order of tomorrow to be built around the strengthening the international framework that we have already forged in war, quoted Mr. Park, concluding his lecture with two revealing facts, First—Hunger means war. The post war world must be provisioned. Second—The world must be revived and wise domestic policies established within it.

Second—The peril that nations will fall apart when the war is over. Our Christian task is to keep alive sufficient vision and enthusiasm to make international peace a reality. "Blessed are the Artisans of Peace."

On Thursday Rev. Carscallen's lecture will deal with the Clash of Race.

BUSINESSLIKE WORMS

Darwin discovered that most of the earth's vegetable mould was made by earthworms.

ALUMINUM

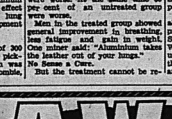
Research work on aluminum was first undertaken in the Banting Institute in Toronto but little was accomplished until 1903 when Dr. Robson started to work on the disease. Four years later, Dr. Denny and Dr. Robson discovered that aluminum dust might be the answer to their problem. A small amount of the powder had prevented silica from dissolving in water and forming the silicia, acid it forms in the lungs.

They visited the Aluminum Company of America plant at Pittsburgh where aluminum powder is manufactured for paints and inks. Thorough examination of workers there showed aluminum dust in the lungs had no effect whatsoever. It caused no lung damage nor favored development of tuberculosis.

366 Workers Examined.

After examining a group of 300 workers at McIntyre, 34 were picked for the experiment which was conducted by Dr. D. W. Crombie, Dr. J. L. Blaisdell and G. Macpherson, of the Queen Alexandra Sanatorium, London, Ont. They had the miners breathe aluminum dust for half an hour, six days a week. After 300 to 500 treatments, 56 per cent were improved, none were worse. At the same time 65 per cent of an untreated group were worse.

Men in the treated group showed improvement in breathing, loss of fatigue and gain in weight. One miner exclaimed: "Aluminum takes the leather out of your lungs."



No Sense a Cure.

But the treatment cannot be regarded in any sense as a "cure" for silicosis however as restoring normal lung tissue which has already undergone fibrotic change. The lung is shortly to add to easing symptoms and increasing work capacity. However, the researchers state that it will offer the prospect of preventing silicosis.

McIntyre, is at present treating about 6,000 hard-rock miners throughout Canada and the United States. Dr. J. W. G. Hanson, of Washington, D.C., pioneer in the use of the dust, is treating more than 1,000 cases prophylactically and reports excellent results.

Total Demand for Dairy Products Now Exceeds Total Supply Says Board

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

OTTAWA, Aug. 31.—(CP)—Canada's cows are doing the best they can but it isn't enough.

Federal government charts and figures today pointed the problem of meeting the rising demand for dairy products. Already steps have been taken which officials hope will meet the situation but they said that public co-operation in saving milk supplies has become of urgent importance.

Dr. G. S. H. Barton, chairman of the Agricultural Food Board has appealed to Canadians to avoid possible waste and over-purchase of milk so that the urgent needs of the United Kingdom for Canadian cheese and the requirements of the Canadian armed forces may be met.

A second step was an order by the Prices Board effective Sept. 1 which required that distributors in about 80 of the principal Canadian markets sell no more fluid cream in any month than was sold by them during June.

Stocks on Hand Down.

J. H. Grant, Board Administrator of Dairy Products, said that total demand for dairy products now exceeds total supply. Recent reports had indicated that butterfat sold as cream in 1944 had increased by more than 20 per cent over the first seven months of 1943, while butter production and stocks on hand were down.

Officials said the last straw in upsetting the delicate balance between milk production and consumption of dairy products was a drought situation in many parts of Eastern Canada and consequent declines in milk output.

Even in June, the dairy herds in Quebec and Ontario showed a falling off in average production. Production per cow per day in Ontario was 22.5 pounds against 31.1 in the same month last year, and in Quebec 31.8 pounds against 22.2.

Drop in Some Products.

The limited milk supplies already have been reflected in a drop in the output of some products. In July, for instance, the gallonage of ice cream produced dropped 7.3 per cent compared with July last year. But for the seven months of 1944, production drew up 3.3 per cent as 11,287,728 gallons, a major increase over pre-war years.

The combined output of factory products in July amounted to slightly less than 1,400,000,000 pounds of milk, a decrease of about 53,500,000 pounds compared with the combined make in terms of milk for the corresponding month a year ago.

Of the total milk available to the factories last month, creamery butter took 69.4 per cent Cheddar cheese 22.5; ice cream 3.2 and concentrated whole milk 4.9.

Officials said that during the summer months of peak production butter has to be moved into storage for winter requirements. Total stocks in storage Aug. 1 were down 9,000,000 compared with last year and, significantly, the "into-storage" movement in July was nearly 18,500,000 pounds compared with 20,800,000 pounds for July, 1943.

NORTHERN FRANCE DRIVE FIVE DAYS AHEAD SCHEDULE

Eisenhower Says Division of Campaign Envisioned From Start

PRAISES MONTGOMERY

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Aug. 31 —(CP)— Gen. Eisenhower announced today that Lt.-Gen. Bradley had taken his place as a full field commander of American armies in Northern France in equal status to Gen. Montgomery and declared confidently his forces would carry the fight into Germany, inevitably and decisively.

Bradley, an infantry specialist, hitherto has been officially subservient to Montgomery who commands all ground troops in Northern France under Eisenhower. Bradley, however, has assumed field status by directing his 1st and 3rd American armies in the break-through from St. Lo across the Brest peninsula, beyond Paris and to the approaches of Belgium and Germany.

In announcing the new setup of field command, Eisenhower paid high tribute to Montgomery, describing him as a close personal friend and one of greatest soldiers of this war or any other. He commanded the British 21st army group the slightest reflection upon "Monty" nor a demotion for him.

The exact time when the division of responsibility was reached was not specified. But Eisenhower said it was not effective at the time the report of the division first came out a fortnight ago.

Fire Days Ahead.

Eisenhower, smiling and bronzed, said operations were five days ahead of schedule.

In a specific reference to the fighting at Caen, key German strongpoint bitterly-fought for by Canadian and British troops before the sweep through to the Seine, he said that writers who had tended to be spokesmen about the long fight there should instead have bragged. It was the strongest line of defences the Germans had on that front.

Eisenhower said the crushing defeat administered to Field Marshal Von Kluge was partly to the credit of land-greedy Nazi strategy of inflexible defence—a rigid stake-all stand on a flank south of the Seine.

Of the fighting at Caen, German strongpoint bitterly-fought for by Canadian and British troops, Eisenhower said that when he saw British writers starting to be apologetic about it he felt they ought to be bragging. It was the strongest line of defences the Germans had on the front.

No Diesel Questions.

Eisenhower did not permit direct quotations from his talk—his first to his main press headquarters since D-Day—observing with a wry smile that generals got into trouble whenever they talk.

His eyes twinkling, Eisenhower stood before a large battle map of Northern France streaked with red arrows of the second sitting between Belgium and the Rhine and spoke with a firm note of confidence in the victories won and others yet ahead.

In making the announcement, Eisenhower described Montgomery as not only his close and warm friend but one of the greatest masters of this or any other war.

The Supreme Commander said the division of command when the French campaign reached the present stage had been envisioned from the start and that the present setting early last June effected what had been regarded all along as the final stage of the Allied command system.

Montgomery's position heretofore has been as commander of the 21st British-Canadian army group and he was directly responsible under Eisenhower for co-ordination of American forces in the over-all plan.

No Sharp Differences.

Eisenhower, emphasized again the unity of thought and co-operation at his headquarters and among his commanders, and declared that in this day there never had been any sharp differences in thought among those who constitute his command team.

Commenting on a Washington report that the whole French operation—northern and southern invasions—soon would be brought under his command, the Supreme Commander said this was a matter for the decision of the combined chiefs of staff.

He disclosed that the campaign of northern France was five days ahead of schedule. He said the line that it had been hoped to reach by D-Day plus 90 was well passed by D-Day plus 35.

German Strategy Feveesen.

From the first five days after the Normandy landings the Allied command has been able to force the whole German strategy, city of rigid defences in which the enemy staked all and lost all, he said.

The Supreme Commander added that before the invasion the Allied chiefs had thought it would be more likely—and better strategy—for the Germans to withdraw when they saw they were unable to hurl the invaders into the sea, fighting a delaying action back to some belter defence system with more direct lines of supply and reinforcements.

Instead the Nazis fought in and out at Caen on a plan of strength which made every foot there more important than 10 miles anywhere else along the line. Every piece of dust there had the value of a diamond, so bitter was the enemy determination to hold on well south of the Seine.

Eisenhower praised efforts of the French forces of the interior as more effective than most had thought they could be.

He declined comment on the German flying bombs because he said he did not want to tell the enemy what the Allies plan to do.

German People Kept Informed Of Allied Gains

London, Aug. 31 —(CP)— An analysis of Nazi High Command communiques indicates the German people are being kept informed of allied advances in the east and west apparently as a means of rallying them in a maximum effort for defence of the homeland.

The High Command acknowledges the Allied gulch, then Nazi propaganda stresses the need for harder work in the factories, from which recruits will come secret weapons that will mean a German victory.

Frequently the German communiques are ahead of Allied reports. Romania's defection from the axis and retreats are admitted before the Russians announce advances.

When 1Lt.-Gen. Kurt Dittmar, German Military Analyst, said recently that the gravity of the German situation in the west could not be disguised, he slipped in the soothing assertion that the Nazis are landing space for time—time to bridge the gap caused by shortcomings and weaknesss in the military field.

Allied superiority, especially in the air, is stressed constantly as the main reason for the Germans undoing.

Dittmar confessed the last two months had cost Germany Apollo in the east and west which took years to gain. But he offered the Germans hope that a tooth-and-claw fight, night, make the Allies stop to consider if their sacrifices are worth the victories achieved.

Through all this "unvarnished truth," as Dittmar calls it, Propaganda Minister Goebbels drums his desperation theme—it is now a question of either self-preservation or annihilation for the German people.

Leaders Likely To Meet Within Month's Time

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Aug. 31 —(AP)— It now seems certain that before another month passes President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill will meet to formalize plans for control of Germany and immediate post-war security of the Western World.

Also expected to come up for discussion are arrangements for Britain's full participation in the final phases of the war against Japan once Germany is out of the way. This British help was promised by the Prime Minister when the President and he got together at Quebec a year ago this month.

Little remained to be announced of the forthcoming session except the time and place. President Roosevelt has answered every recent press conference inquiry with the comment he would meet Mr. Churchill soon. London reports said today Mr. Churchill would not remain long in England following his trip to Italy and his conference with Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia.

This will be the 11th session of the British and American leaders with their political and military advisers. They last had three sessions in the Middle East, meeting at Cairo with General Chiang Kai-Shek, Premier Stalin at Teheran and again at Cairo with President Inonu of Turkey, Short-Range Security

It is recognized in official circles that one of Allied most urgent immediate problems is that of short-range security in Europe, calling for powerful political co-operation of the Allied Powers after the enemy has been decisive military efforts has vanished.

This calls initially for demobilization and expansion of the European Advisory Commission—the war agency created by Britain, United States and Russian foreign ministers in their meeting at Moscow last fall. But that highlights another problem which the President and Prime Minister will encounter: What about Mr. Stalin?

How the Anglo-American armies are within possibly a few weeks of meeting the Russian armies in crumbling Germany, and Anglo-American diplomacy must meet Russian diplomacy in every corner of Europe.

Some observers here are privately expressing surprise, therefore, that none of the numerous reports from Washington and London on the next conference have spoken of Russian representation. In the absence of such indications it is assumed Russia, at least, has kept closely informed of developments, and that no conclusive actions will be taken which are not fully approved by Moscow.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

(By The Canadian Press)

With R.C.A.F. Bomber Group in England, Aug. 31. (CP)—To a man whose early stages of his operational tour were almost too full of excitement, a spell of comparative peace and quiet such as Sedn. Ldr. Bob Deegan, Smiths Falls, Ont., is getting now is sometimes welcome.

On his first operation Deegan, now Snowy Owl Squadron flight commander, flew Nuremberg always a hot spot; as his objective. Flak hit his aircraft over the city and he lost his port outer engine. Then a twin-engines enemy fighter attacked the bomber, but after a somewhat hectic period rear gunner P/O. Phil Dubois, Arcola, Sask., shot it down.

A safe landing on what amounted to an engine and a half terminated another "do" on which Berlin was the objective.

Deegan began his tour of "ops" with the Lion Squadron as a sergeant.

From sergeant to squadron leader in little more than a year is the achievement of Sedn. Ldr. Gerard Dupuis, Ottawa (210 Blackburn St.), whose appointment to that rank, and as a flight commander in the French-Canadian Alouette Squadron, have just been announced.

The 26-year-old officer arrived overseas a sergeant, became warrant officer during his operational training, joined the Alouettes in North Africa in the summer of 1942, and was commissioned a pilot officer soon after starting operations. He was promoted to flight lieutenant, skipping the intermediate flying officer rank. He then went to R.A.F. college for a junior commanders' course, and on his return was made acting flight commander.

In Dupuis' 23 bombing flights he has never been attacked by fighters, aided by searchlights or hit by flak. Credit for this he gives to his navigator, Flt. Lt. C. D. Shrewsbury, another Ottawan, (130 Creighton Street).

An immediate D.F.C. has been awarded P/O. Bob Kelle, Windsor, Ont., (1023 Bruce Street), for outstanding heroism and coolness under fire. Bob pilots a bomber with the Snowy Owl Squadron, and recently over Belgium his aircraft was set on fire by a Focke Wulf 190 while en route to the target. The starboard inner engine was hit, the hydraulics and electrical appliances smashed. Planes ripped rapidly, raging furiously by the mid-upper turret. Kelle ordered his crew to bale out.

Meanwhile he dived steeply, feathering the damaged engine. Sgt. G. D. Burton, who won the D.F.M., fought the flames with his hands and an extinguisher. The rear-gunner, Flt. Sgt. Laurie McCalls, Vancouver, B.C. (3223 West 33rd St.) shot down the FW 190 and saw it explode on the ground.

Kelle continued to fly his wrecked aircraft to the target, bombed it, and reached home safely, crash-landing at an emergency air field.

Whitehall Notebook

(By DOUGLAS AMARON)
Canadian Staff Writer).

London, Aug. 31. (CP)—Plans are being considered in government circles which may lead to the permanent establishment of the Ministry of Information after the war as a centre for the issue of government news.

Brendan Bracken, present minister, has expressed hope that the Ministry will close down at the end of hostilities, but the final decision is a cabinet matter and members of the Ministry staff will also have some say about their future.

The staff is being consulted now. No definite plans have yet been made, but some form of "publicity issuing organization" may be set up. If this materialities there is about to be a major parliamentary "brush up" because many M.P.'s have come out time and time again for a post-war M.O.I.

While members consider the Ministry a necessary wartime evil they object to an enormous machine turning out propaganda in favor of policies of the government of the day, contending that is is contrary to the tradition of freedom of speech and of the press.

Britain's plans to increase the school-leaving age from 14 to 15, is provided in the recently approved Education Bill, have been suspended because of a shortage of teachers. Originally, the new age was to come into effect April 1, 1945, but Education Minister Butler says now the earliest date will be one year later.

Here and There: Maj. Basil Nield, Conservative M.P. for Chester, is a member of Gen. Montgomery's staff at 21st Army Group. . . Three Labor members in Durham County, Joshua Ritson (Durham East), T. M. Sexton (Barnard Castle), and W. J. Stewart (Houghton-le-Spring), announced they will not contest the next general election.

NATIONAL SELECTIVE SERVICE

NOTICE TO EMPLOYERS AND THEIR MALE EMPLOYEES

By an order signed on August 15th, 1944, by the undersigned Minister of Labour under authority of National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations:

1. Commencing August 22nd, 1944, every employer is required to check the documents held by each newly engaged male employee, within 7 days of the employee's engagement, to determine if such employee possess documents to show that he is in good standing under National Selective Service Mobilization Regulations (that is, in relation to the Military Call-up);

2. Every employer must report on Schedule 9 to the Registrar for his Mobilization Division, concerning any employee found not to possess documents as referred to;

3. Every employer is required similarly to check the documents held by each male employee newly engaged between May 1st, 1944, and August 22nd, 1944, and to report to the Registrar for his Mobilization Division by August 29th, 1944, on any such employee found not to possess documents as referred to;

4. Any male employee here referred to, is required by the Regulations to present his documents to his employer for purposes of inspection;

5. Penalties are provided for any employer or male employee who fails to comply with these Regulations.

By an earlier order, employers were required to check the documents held by their male employees, and to report by May 1st, 1944, on doubtful cases as well as cases where employees did not possess documents. The procedure for these has proved satisfactory although being notified to employers in "Notice to Employers and their Male Employees", which is now being mailed, is identical with that set forth in "Employers' Guide", which covered the check made before May 1st, 1944.

Employers are asked to remember that they do not report on men who do possess the necessary documents—only on those who fail to produce documents for examination, or where there is doubt that the document presented actually proves good standing.

The employers of Canada co-operated very satisfactorily on the first check, made up to May 1st last. This co-operation was decidedly helpful, and is very much appreciated. Further co-operation is now earnestly requested.

Schedule 9 and details as to documents which prove good standing, are available through the Employment and Selective Service Offices.

Hollywood Falls Far Behind The Army's Rumor Factories In Vividness of Imagination

(By Cpl. Ron Poulton, in the "Maple Leaf")

If some whimsical philanthropist were to set up a fund for the protection of a free house of opium, the Canadian army couldn't have more pipe dreams than it does when a rest from battle airs the virile imaginations of some of its men.

Secret Source.

Dame rumor flits a capricious skirt these days. And to attempt to discover the source of these rumors is impossible. You might just as well try to lasso a butterfly with a mooring cable.

Airy visitations to idle brains spread like wildfire, are believed by some, half-believed by most, and often come back to their originator so changed that he ends up by wondering if maybe they're not true after all!

One unimaginative dictionary defines a rumor as a "report." It should have added: "A report usually without foundation and without sense, a wishful thought in rapid motion. Sometimes, however, it has a direct carpenter, a rumor is bound to hit the nail on the head.

Time-Passers.

They have value in that they pass the time and brighten a staid program by providing a cheap bargain in the future. That they are usually bearing is proven by the fact that they invariably offer something nice for tomorrow, seldom is a rumor of grim portent. According to a cynic, that proves they are so much hogwash.

For instance, according to the word, there is always somebody coming to the Canadian army from whom the Canadian army would clearly have no wish. Again, there were two giant chunks of ship in a certain harbor awaiting only for a certain army before setting sail for a certain lovely land.

A Rumor Bureau never lasts long before he is dethroned. The playful crew is flabbered the last that the First Division was bound for Hollywood when they had been ousted from the top spot in the fiction parade by the bloke who broadcast that a new school of expert sign painters was being formed. There was a trip to Canada in it. It seems that the section was going to set up its headquarters in Toronto. "Toronto The Good, and dispatch its personnel throughout the land to paint 'Out of Bounds' signs at the outskirts of every town and village and on the doors of every Dominion liquor board store.

Perverted Curiosity.

Rumors are begun by people who like to see what happens to them. They possess a perverted curiosity to watch the results from afar. They take pride in their growth like a doting father over a clever son. There is no union card needed to set up in the business. Just phone Yehudi, the only figure to attain fame by remaining a complete nonentity. He, and his British cousin, Reginald Jaintze, live in batman's housewives, under ash trays in officers' clubs, around the cook shacks and in DR's tool kits.

Those in the employ of Yehudi call themselves "They." It was "They" who were reported to have remarked, in a fit of mild hysteria one day, that continuous offenders against army law were going to be issued with jungle equipment. It seems that they were going to be sent in search for Redfern, longlost pilot thought to be in the wilds of Central America, who was said to be in possession of a secret formula for stretching the lire note.

Rumors carry the soldier along on wings of fantasy from even more romantic places than Italy. It is estimated that "They" have provided more free transportation to men in khaki than the American railways have to the United States Hoboes of America. What the journeys lacked in fragility they made up for in color.

"On the Road to . . . ."

No troops' transport was ever complete without its amateur mariner who foretold by the position of the North Star that the ship was headed for Murmansk via the Panama Canal. Or who pointed out, with a shake of all embracing wave of the hand that "There's flying fish, so we must be off Mandalay."

There was once a French-Canadian officer whose limited knowledge of English often produced surprising results on the parade square. He reached sublime heights when he became flustered by the sudden appearance of a brigadier one day and ordered his squad to "Quick March . . . but don't go no place."

All of which is by way of an illustration that travel by order of Rumour Incorporated is tantamount to marking time. For instance, this writer has made billions dollars by all accounts and a couple of oceans to boot. And all because of the "latest word."

Been Around

He has washed his socks in the muddy waters of the Yellow River. He has hacked his way through burmese jungles. (That was the time he answered the advertisement for experienced truck drivers needed on the Burma Road). He has basked on the beach at Sydney and trapped platypuses in New Zealand. He has shivered the acrid smoke from the ghats along the Ganges blistered, barren wastes of the trackless Gobi. He worked in an orderly room in the Kremlin and ran despatches between Raula Leda and Jassy. He caught rheumatic fever in the peat bogs of Ireland and pneumonia in windswept Iceland. The change of a plan that never existed in the first place deprived him of the privilege of having flowers thrown at him at the gates of Tripoli. A ship that was never built, never took him to Norway's icy fjords or Jamaica's silver sands.

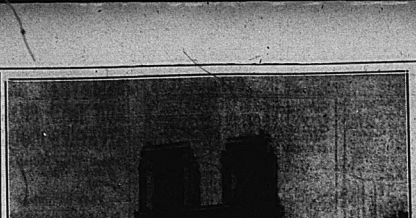
Pipe Line Experts

"They" were advertising for pipe line experts to go to Persia (it was somebody never got there first. It was you for home defence but home was never like this! And then there was the time they were going to gather up all the authors and send them overseas. That was cancelled because it was feared that the authors might kick up such a fuss that the government would have to raise the Army's pay.

The clarion call went out for volunteers to work on the Alaan Highway but the Americans got there first. Some mysterious thrower was stealing all the food that Malta didn't have, and the guys that applied for the trip were sent to the kitchen to change the mouse-traps twice a day.

Then "They" were going to scrap all the tanks in the Canadian Army and form a helicopter regiments. When the idea failed, because of the lack of experienced propeller makers, 1,500 horses were bought to replace the tanks instead. Or so the story went. The whole schemz was eventually abandoned when it was discovered that all Canadian army grown hay was being shipped to Russia to supply the Don Cossacks' regiments.



Leather Shortage

A lot of men might have gone to the parachute corps down Georgia if it hadn't been for the fact that manufacturers ran out of brown leather and were unable to make enough high boots. So the boys said "to hell with it" and went on a mule skinners' course.

Remember the time qualified machine-gunners were a glut in the Army? So they packed their bags for the Air Force—but they never got there.

No. They never got there. But it was whispered that underaged men with bowed legs could get into infantry suburbine work "just like that." (A snap of the fingers denoted the simplicity of such a transfer).

Nothing was sacred to the fibbers who defiled all those stories. They weren't even content to leave uniforms alone. Remember that torrid summer when,sleep was needlessly lost as you pictured yourself being forced to go on leave to

When the idea failed, because of the lack of experienced propeller makers, 1,500 horses were bought to replace the tanks instead. Or so the story went. The whole schemz was eventually abandoned when it was discovered that all Canadian army grown hay was being shipped to Russia to supply the Don Cossacks' regiments.

But what the hell? A rumor a day keeps boredom away. Only an idiot believes one, anyhow. But it's fun being an idiot. Has anybody heard any good ones lately?

Monahan Disqualified After Winning the First Fall With 'Whipper' Watson at Arena

"Neck Whip" Holds, by Former "Masked Marvel" Failed to Work

GOOD PRELIMS

Jerry Monahan's heralded "neck whip" hold failed subdue "Whipper Billie" Watson before nearly 2,000 surprised wrestling fans at the Hume Arena Wednesday.

As a matter of fact when "Irish Jerry's" neck whip failed to lay Watson box de combat he resorted to those old "Masked Marvel" ruffian attacks on Watson and that is where Referee Maxwell stepped in and with the usual flowery waving of hands disqualified the lighter villian, who by now you know was Mister Monahan.

However, "Irish Jerry" didn't bow out to the public's choice, Whipper Watson—before there was more than the usual concern. And it didn't have any sense of humor there's always concern in a wrestling bout —that is if you look hard enough. But who does?

Monahan Wins First Fall

From the outset of the main hasling it appeared as though "Rough-house" Monahan was out to clean "Adonis" Watson's clock, which didn't get very well, when Monahan all but reefed Watson's left shoulder from its joint and finally made the "people" choice conceds the first round, as Watson cried "quits" to the referee for Monahan's

Somewhat of an opportunist Monahan started the second round by attempting to actually break Watson's injured arm off and beat him good measure for good measure, but "Whipper Billie" wasn't for losing his touch of such physical jerks and "quick like a bunny" satisfied his loving fans by applying a series of his favorite "whiskanche" holds and within nine minutes flung Mister Monahan in the position, which he had intended Watson to be in and all was even.

Come the third round, which started with a very marathon between Referee Maxwell, Watson and Monahan until the latter just weren't just so sure who was who or maybe I'll wrestle you in the ring type affair.

However, after some difficulty Monahan tried to scalp Watson by snatching him by the hair and hurling the latter "goodie" bodily from the ring. Apparently Referee Maxwell didn't like this procedure of muscle bending and tossed a warning finger, "remember, Irish Jerry" By now you appreciate Jerry cares little for warnings and naturally, disqualified Monahan.

Monahan Floors Referee

Here things began to happen. Monahan floored Maxwell, who surely was in agony, when Monahan hurled Watson atop the writher. "That's not fair screamed a front row fan," so Monahan climbed aboard and there squirmed three. Just about now Arbiter Maxwell decided 400 pounds of human flesh was too much to with-stand and promptly signalled to the referee Watson's arms hither and yon, which indicated that Monahan was disqualified and then the patrons let loose with a mighty verbal exclamation of joy and relief. And why now—hadn't the villian been disqualified? Yes, we met week, ouch the wrestlers.

Although Mr. Watson appreciated the defeat of Monahan, they more than gave vent to their feelings when Monahan climbed through the ropes to bounce back into the ring and fallen Referee Maxwell, that mad Mexican!, in the semi-final go of the night. Then in the final round Mr. Monahan, Irish Jerry Hall slugged, hit and tossed the "Masked Marvel" to and fro for a thirty-minute bell hallet as good an opener as Hume Arena ever enjoy since Marze Tunney hauled the curtain up on modern wrestling at the Hume Arena.

Belleville Jrs. Beat Alemites By Odd Run

In an abbreviated four inning baseball game the Belleville Juniors pushed over the odd run to be set down 5-4 by the Alemites when the game was called on account of darkness at Victory Park Field last night. The largest crowd of the season was present, estimated at 1,500 in Belleville. The balls used in the game were donated by J. A. Irwin, who has offered to give a substantial prize for the winner of a district baseball league.

E. Rush scored for the Juniors in the initial frame when Rush Juniors went wall to the fore when Stolle and Kelleher crossed the plate in the second inning to give the "kids" a three run lead. Martin and Hammett scored for the Alemites in the third frame, as the game ended in the fourth inning on account of darkness.

Ernie Smith was on the mound for the Alemites while Al Kelleher pitched for the Juniors. The game did not make the required five innings , these two baseball teams will meet again in a third and deciding game. Don Lee and Red Meens acitified all as umpires.

Hamilton Baseball Club Agrees To Re-play Game With O.B.A.

By The Canadian Press

Hamilton Baseball Club is back in the good graces of the Ontario Baseball Association, Sterling Clubs reconciled to the ruling of the provincial body that disturbed Sunday's semi-final game with St. Catharines-Merrittton Combines in the Niagara Senior League would have to be replayed. The O. B. A. order came when Hamilton used Pitcher Paul Wargo as a replacement for ex-Lea-f Bob Dillinger who had been barred from further play by Army regulations. Decision to meet the Combines again came, Hamilton Club officials said last night, when the Combines agreed to take only one-sixth of the gate receipts for the tilt.

Sidney B. Wood of New York, winner of the British championship at Wimbledon in 1931 and top player for more than a decade, bowed to Charley Oliver of Perth Amboy, N. J., in a first-round upset of the U. S. National Tennis championships at Forest Hills, N. Y., yesterday. Oliver was the 1943 National Intercollegiate champion. Winner of the Women's singles for two years, Pauline Betz of Los Angeles Rodney, defeated Mrs. E. P. Cushingham of Florida in two sets.

The Lockport, N. Y., team has clinched the Posy Baseball League pennant and the organization's officials yesterday decided to start the semi-final play-offs next Wednesday between four of the clubs.

Widely known as a harness driver and trainer, John D. Dickerson, 81, died yesterday at a hospital in Greensburg, Ind. He had managed many large stables.

Manager Joe Cronin of Boston Red Sox and Manager Bob Coleman of the Boston Braves were both re-signed by their respective clubs yesterday, Cronin getting a three-year contract and Coleman securing a renewal for two years.

Farmer Gratian, owned by Len City of Seaforth, yesterday made a clean sweep of three heats of the 2:38 class in the Wallaceburg Harness card. Argos Dillon, from the Smith and Miller Stable, Dutton, won all three starts in the 2:34 trot. The free-for-all went to Frisky Lee, owned by Kerr and Todghem of Rodney.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

Toronto, Aug. 31.—(CP)— There's an interesting sign of the times in Winnipeg, where it's rumored the services may organize an 8-man football to make the best of the straitened manpower situation. The league has drawn its membership from the R. C. A. F., Canadian Army and Navy units, and United States Army representatives.

Six-man football was dreamed-up by Nebraska-born Stephen Epler, originally as an easier game High School and Junior College football. It is played on a field 80 yards by 40 yards, and features lateral and forward passing, rather than the bone-and-muscle contact of the regulation game. With fewer players on the field there is less bodily contact and more attention to the finer details of organized team-play and combination with consequent higher scoring.

Winnipeg high schools have tried to game before, but if the proposed league is formed it will be the first on such an ambitious scale.

His Outstanding Game:

Ralph (Buddy) Bay, Nugget: Adams recalls what he thinks is the high point in Phil Marchildon's baseball career. Phil, now reported missing overseas with the R. C. A. F., was a coming star with Philadelphia Athletics before he donned the uniform, and hurled some fine games in the big league. But Adams still prefers Marchildon's 12-inning battle with Pennsylvania's ageing North Bay in the 1934 intermediate Ontario' Baseball finals.

Incidentally:

There's big doings in West Coast dogdom. A monster program of field dog trials is slated for Sept. 22-24, with outstanding canines invading from the United States. Among those entered is Queen of Arden, smooth labrador winner of the U. S. National Open the last two years. Another is Skoramarine,

TORONTO LEAFS SOLIDIFY HOLD ON FOURTH PLACE

Defeat Montreal Royals With Crowson Scattering Five Hits

BISONS DEFEATED

By the Associated Press

The International League pennant race, close all season, should be decided in the opening of the five-game Baltimore-Newark series today.

The Orioles, in first place by 2 1/2 games, were dumped by a 5-3 count last night at their ace, Red Embree, went down to defeat at the hands of Jersey City Giants. Should the Bears win three or four times, the race will be thrown into a last-itch fight between the two clubs.

The Baltimore can make a decisive showing, they will stretch their margin to the point where only a sustained drive to the end of the season, Sept. 10, by the Bears can turn the trick.

Toronto solidified its hold on fourth place by defeating Montreal 6-2. Woody Crowson scattered five Royal hits for his 11th victory. Wading into John Gabbard and Wayne Collins for 15 hits, each Leaf got a safe blow. The defeat just about eliminated Montreal's hopes of gaining a play-off berth.

Rochester took an up and down ball game from Buffalo 7-5, as Mike Ryba's attack racked up his first International League triumph in nine starts.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, Aug. 31—(AP)—A letter from Major John L. Griffith, War Ten Commissioner, concerning a proposed intercollegiate baseball tournament that has received frequent mention in this corner, asks: "Do you suppose that the organized baseball men would agree not to sign up our youngsters before they graduate from school or college? If they would not, I am sure that some of the educationists would have no enthusiasm for a project that would result in taking the attention of the pros, who in turn signed these lads to boost their finished their education."

The Other Side.

Best answer we can find is the reply given by Pie Traynor to a similar query from scribe Dick Pierce during the recent Kansas coaching school at Lawrence. The majors are looking for a supply source. Obviously, they have to have this or that existence. When they see a good-looking kid, naturally they go after him. If the high schools and colleges would develop a sharp program of baseball, the majors would lay off signing kid ball players. They would allow the boys to develop in a good system and then endeavor to sign them."

Not so Simple.

Perhaps Pie was simplifying the matter a bit, for the colleges can't, or won't, subsidize a lot of time or money developing good ball players only to see them snatched up before their "payoff" seasons and the pros won't stop snatching until they're offered some guarantee they will safely have them that the kids they now sign out of the schools will get a good baseball education if they stay in school and that when they spot a good prospect someone else won't snatch him first.

1941 U. S. National Derby winner, and Stillrovin superspeed, golden retriever which came second to sired of Arden in the 1943 trials. Fame of the Niagara Falls District's Baseball League has spread far afield, with Dan Parker giving it mention in his New York Daily Mirror column. . . Baseball is becoming big-time in Calgary. Attendance at the 1,000 fans have been turning out recently for amateur contests . . .

BELLEVILLE GALS RUN INTO SNAG AT PETERBOROUGH

Softball Team Defeated by Westclox Nine by 21-1 Count

PLAY SATURDAY

In their initial entrance into the Provincial Ladies' Softball playdowns the Belleville gals ran into a rather unfortunate snag to lose 21 to 1 at the hands of the Peterborough Westclox team on Saturday City. That old bug-bear of stage fright took its usual toll as the Belleville players were all on their worst from the time the "Westclox" garnered in five runs in the initial frame until the unfortunate end. However, even, that the Belleville ladies have shaken their load of initial provincial competition of a much different story is expected when the Peterborough team returns for the second game, that will be played at the Fair Grounds here on Saturday afternoon.

Just to show how nervous the Belleville team was in their first provincial playdown came in the initial two innings, when the Peterborough girls batted ten runs, all of which were chalked up on total of seven hits and four shaky Belleville errors. From there on it was pretty much all Hits Hingerton driving out a three-run homer and Miss Wilhan getting a three triple for the Lit'lock base hits of the night.

Lineup That Started for the Lit'lock City nine to strike out ten of the Belleville batters, while with the big nine of the Peterborough the route for Belleville whiffing one and walking two. The Belleville girls were shaky to kick in with seven costly errors, while the Peterborough play added seven runs to the Peterborough final score in the eight innings that they batted. Lineup for the Belleville nine that will travel to Peterborough here Saturday and with the addition of a few players are unable to make the Peterboro' trip, the Belleville nine hope to force the series into a third and final game.

WATERLOO TIGERS ARE ELIMINATED

By The Canadian Press

Stratford Nationals eliminated Waterloo Tigers with a 9-7 victory in the third and deciding game of the Intermediate "A" playoffs in the Inter County loop last night at Stratford and qualified to meet the Niagara District champions in the O. B. A. playdowns. It was completed after the game the Tiger might withdraw from competition for an undisclosed reason.

In an O. B. A. exhibition baseball fixture at Niagara Falls, St. Catharines defeated Niagara Falls 7-5, with Watson responsible for a home run in the ninth inning.

A Bantan playdown engagement at Oakes Stadium resulted in a 7-3 win for Welland over the Niagara North Ends.

The opening game of the O. B. A. Juvenile playdowns at Welland last night between Niagara Falls and Welland colleagues brought a 7-5 victory for the home team. Catcher Jim Brown fanned 10 for the Welland run.

Oakes Stadium outed Peterborough 2-1 at the Motor City in the Initial tussle of the second round of the Ontario Senior Baseball playdowns. The Petes scored both runs in the first inning and Bantam Bob McGarry tied the count with a two-run homer.

FORMER TORONTO HURLER A HERO

Wichita, Kans., Aug. 31 (AP) — Herman Besse, whose talented left arm once made him a valuable asset to the Philadelphia Athletics of the International League, is the hero of the Wichita baseball tournament.

Besse, who pitches for the Shberman Field Fliers of Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, struck out 13 men last night, singled and then scored the winning run as his team defeated the Enidairs from the Enid, Okla., army air field 5-4 for the National championship. Besse is the first Canadian-born player in series, to be played in London, Ont., starting Sept. 15.

CASUAL COMMENT

By K.J.C.

The Sunday school lesson had been upon the parable of the prodigal son. The teacher wished to impress upon the children the mean disposition of the elder brother who "would not go in."

"Now," she said, "in the midst of all this rejoicing at the return of the prodigal, there was one who was unhappy. Who the others were bright and glad, he was sad, and who was he?"

"The fatted calf?" called out a small boy.

Flyers Are Out.

Tuesday Group Captain Bell-Irving, of the Trenton R.C.A.F. main station, officially announced that the Trenton Flyers would be represented in the proposed Ontario Senior Baseball League. Purpose of was to include Camp Borden, Toronto Navy, R.C.A.F. and Trenton R.C.A.F. units. Reasons given by Group Captain Bell-Irving were such as inadequate—transportation and the fact that Trenton players enjoy a better-than-average run Intra-mural sports program. The Trenton Commanding Officer told the press that Flight Engineer in an exclusive interview that distances were too great to transport a football team under the present restricted transportation. The "Flyers" will continue to compete in the No. 1 Command sports program, as well as the Bay of Quinte district. However, the final big nut came when it was announced unmit it had been suggested maybe all of the Senior League football games would be played at Varsity Stadium. (Lew Hayman please note.)

Bamberettes Out.

Due to circumstances beyond their control the Mountain View "Bomberettes" declared their official withdrawal from the Belleville Ladies' Softball League, which means the Universal girls move into the league semi-finals versus the SWACO. Hamilton, Capt. Bagnato coach of the Bomberettes, assured Secretary Manager Ackerman that his decision was regretted, but as the majority of the Bomberettes have volunteered for, essential farm labor duty and left to take on the agricultural work, it was impossible the Mountain View team could not be expected to continue under such circumstances.

As the SWACO girls are on vacation the Universal-SWACO series will not get under way until next Tuesday when the Belleville Ladies' Softball playdowns will get underway without further interruption as all plant employees will by then have completed their vacation periods. The league-leading Bellaire gals will meet the winners of the SWACO-Universal series for the league title.

Remember When.

Rookie Rudy York, hitting his 30th and 90th runs batted in of the season for Detroit Tigers, topped Babe Ruth's record for a single month seven years ago today. He batted his 30th home run for the month of August at Detroit, beating Babe Ruth's previous mark of 17 set in September, 1927.

Wait and See.

With the SACO. "Marines" out of the O.A.R.A. running for 1944 campaign, the City League finals, between the Marines and Pabst Juniors, resume at the Fair Grounds Friday night. Usually the fans abandoned baseball once the provincial play-offs are concluded, but this year a better-than-average series should result, but no doubt the fans will remain hard to convince. That is unless the series goes to a fifth and deciding issue.

Who Cares!

One of the gags in the Sporting News—new in this corner, at any rate—is about Zeke Bonura who, in the course of his baseball ramblings, played a stumbling first base for several American League clubs.

"Former catcher of Zeke Bonura were glad to hear he was stationed at a supply base in Italy instead of being assigned to track down Gen. Rommel," it said. "It wouldn't be certain whether the sergeant would wind up in Tunisia or Russia. Besides, it would be a shame if that Zeke rolled into the spring training camp of the Chicago White Sox with a compass attached to the steering wheel of his car and headed in any town what the padel was for.

"So I won't get lost." Zeke said. "Besides, I'm too fat. I'd be a good pretty complicated to him.

"How do you like that darn thing!" he asked Bill.

Zeke scratched his head.

"Search me," he said.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 469

By SAM GORDON
The Bridgeway

It takes all kinds of persons to make up the world of bridge. Included are those who get a hang out of knowing and using the most correct rules. They get the most fun out of the game.

One of the tricks hits too seldom discovered is the opening of three no-trump. Experts go calmly about their business without worrying much concerning that bid.

As a matter of fact, there is not much to know about that bid. Nine tricks are needed for a game at no-trump. Three no-trump is a game contract. So, that bid promises nine high cards.

An opening of two no-trump promises eight high cards or their equivalent. One high card in partner's hand will make the ninth trick. If partner has it, he shows it by raising to three no-trump.

Along that line of reasoning, suppose you have nine high cards in your own hand. You need no help from partner. You have enough in your own hand for a bid need no defence.

Now, come to this rule: An opening bid of three no-trump shows a hand containing nine high cards or eight high cards with four aces and no kings.

Nothing need be added to make that rule understood. I believe, it is apparent in its simple directness. It can stand up under its own figures without further explanation.

Pick up this hand:

♠ A K 7
♥ A Q 9
♦ A K Q
♣ Q 9 8 3

That's a hand with nine tricks; three aces, three kings, three queens. You have every reason to believe it can make three no-trump.

A rule that makes sense will help your partner.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Great Mr. Nobody" (A 857, rollicking comedy that nevertheless has a very pertinent theme, Warner Bros.' "The Great Mr. Nobody," is the current bill at the Capitol theatre. The film stars Eddie Albert and a lovely newcomer to the screen, Joan Leslie.

Eddie plays the role of an idealistic guy in a practical world, whose life ambition is to take a trip on a boat with his friend "Shipper" Martin, played by Alan Hale. For obvious reasons Eddie is nick-named "Dreamer." He is very much in love with Mary Glover. Joan Leslie's role — and the very high hopes for their future. But everything goes wrong with poor "Dreamy." He doesn't get his boat. He acquires a very heavy debt and to top it all he becomes negligent in his work and his boss, John Wade, played by John Litel, fires him.

His bravely attempts to recruit Wade who has fallen into the river, even though he can't swim. As a result, Wade gives him a promotion.

"Partners of the Trail."

Johnny Mack Brown, one of the screen's most popular western stars, has come to the Capitol theatre tonight in "Partners of the Trail," a Monogram adventure-packed film in which he stars. Raymond Hatton also appears with Brown as the story's partner on the side of law and order. Attractive Christine MacIntyre plays the leading feminine role. The supporting cast includes Craig Woods, Robert Fraser, Harry P. Price, Jack Ingram and Lyston Brent. Lambert Hillyer directed for Monogram.

A colored cartoon and the serial "Captain America" complete the double bill.

AT THE BELLE

"Passage to Marseille"

The same inspired combination of directorial and acting talent that made "Casablanca" such a memorable success has turned out another stirring and timely film for Warner Bros., in "Passage to Marseille," which opened yesterday at the Belle Theatre. With this story of a dangerous espionage undertaken in the name of faith, sustained by courage and concluded only by sheer determination, Warner Bros. adds another title to its long list of current successes.

With Humphrey Bogart again starred in the cast whose name reads like a roll-call from "Casablanca," Claude Rains, Sydney Greenstreet, Helmut Dantine and Peter Lorre to mention but a few, and with Michael Curtiz at the helm, Philip Dorn and George Tobias added for good measure, Michael Curtiz directs this new picture with the same vigor and artistry he used to such good advantage in "Casablanca."

"Bermuda Mystery" Screened

"Bermuda Mystery," 20th Century-Fox has again shown its shrewd showmanship in bringing to movie audiences an exciting comedy-thriller which is the 2nd feature attraction on the same program. This fast-paced comedy-mystery had the audience on the edge of their seats trying to anticipate the solution of the murder that shocked two continents.

With a top-notch cast including Preston Foster, Ann Rutherford, Charles Butterworth, Helene Reynolds, Jan Howard and Richard Lane, and with the film directed by Benjamin Stoloff and produced by William Girard, "Bermuda Mystery" rates as the second 'screen thriller packed with light touches that make it real movie entertainment.

A Funny Bugs Bunny cartoon will be exhibited on the same program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Weird Woman"

Universal Studio have done it again and have come up in the psychological drama, "Weird Woman," latest in the film-series of inner sanctum mystery thrillers, which opened yesterday at the Belle Theatre. With this story of a dangerous voyage undertaken in the name of faith, sustained by courage and concluded only by sheer determination, Warner Bros. adds another title to its long list of current successes.

With Humphrey Bogart again starred in the cast whose name reads like a roll-call from "Casablanca," Claude Rains, Sydney Greenstreet, Helmut Dantine and Peter Lorre to mention but a few, and with Michael Curtiz at the helm, Philip Dorn and George Tobias added for good measure, Michael Curtiz directs this new picture with the same vigor and artistry he used to such good advantage in "Casablanca."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Weird Woman"

Universal Studio have done it again and have come up in the psychological drama, "Weird Woman," latest in the film-series of inner sanctum mystery thrillers, which opens next on the screen of the McCarthy Theatre.

Even more ingeniously plotted than "Calling Dr. Death", his most fanciful predecessor, the current Chaney vehicle acquires added force by the performance of a highly skilled cast, whose members make the very most of their unusually bizarre though always plausible situations.

Sharing starring honors with "the man of many characters" is Lon's lovely wife of the loveliest from Universal's roster of feminine stars, Hitchcock discovered and blonde Evelyn Ankers.

Miss Gwynne Gwarns the romantic role opposite Chaney while Miss Ankers for whom her studio claims the title "Queen of Horror Films" delivers an altogether interesting portrayal in the ominous menace in the suspenseful drama.

"Weird Woman" is a psychological deals with disturbing psychological conflicts between the student and academic life of Chaney, a studious-minded sociology professor, after he returns to his college from a research expedition to a tropic island ruled by him as the result of his exotic beauty of mysterious origin.

A seemingly inexplicable series of tragedies ensues, solved only when Chaney explores the field of primitive superstition by which the malefactor has trapped his victims. The denouement is handled at once adroitly.

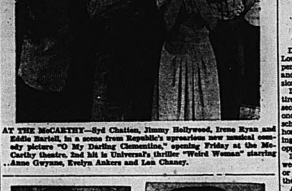
O My Darling Clementine

"O My Darling Clementine" which opens next at the Belle Theatre is definitely another Western picture. Here's the latest interest fling in the gay story of a travelling trooper who comes to a small town, gets stranded with his company of singing actors and proceeds to fall in love with the Mayor's beautiful daughter.

He runs into complications when the outdated blue laws of the village prevent the actors from putting on his show, and thereby putting food into the stomachs of his long-suffering actors. Denied an opportunity of putting on a show openly, her accordion the city councilmen to view a sample of his offering, but although the latter refuse to approve their wives are still adamant.

Dan's next move is to buy a piece of city property so that he can't, on any technicality be chased from town, and by a queer fluke, he buys the not just a vacant lot back of the city hall, but the city hall itself.

From here things move rapidly to a hilarious funny conclusion.



Lorna Gray plays the mayor's daughter in an appealing and winsome manner. Frank Albertson has the role of the romantic juvenile. Other players are Roy Acuff and his Smoky Mountain Boys and Girls, Isabel Randolph, the Sunshine Ramblers and the Radio Rogues.

AT THE CAPITOL—That's "Skippy" Alan Hale and Eddie Albert hanging up their sleeping the seven seas, though it doesn't come with the Warner Bros.' gay new comedy "The Great Mr. Nobody," starting tonight at the Capitol theatre with Johnny Mack Brown in "Partners of the Trail."

AT THE McCARTHY—Syd Chaplin, Jimmy Hollywood, Irene Ryan and Eddie Bartell, in a scene from Republic's uproarious new musical comedy picture "O My Darling Clementine," opening Friday at the McCarthy theatre. 2nd bit is Universal's thriller "Weird Woman" starring Lon Chaney, Evelyn Ankers and Lon Chaney.

AT THE BELLE—Humphrey Bogart and Michele Morgan are a new romantic team in Warner Bros.' action-filled picture "Passage to Marseille." 20th Century-Fox's "Bermuda Mystery", co-starring Preston Foster and Ann Rutherford, is the 2nd worthy feature.

TRENTON FLYERS DEFEAT 6 R. D.

Trenton R.C.A.F. "Flyers" captured the first game of the Trenton Town softball League finals last night by soundly beating the No. 6 Repair Depot nine by the score of 13 to 6. It is the best-in-three series.

Grant Derry, former Belleville pitcher, started on the hilltop for the Repair Depot but was replaced by Pyatt in the sixth inning after which the No. 6 team carried on some of that usual practice of stalling for darkness. Schorner hurled strong softball and went the route for Pit-Liest. Charlie Bush Flyers.

Eddie Gerald was the big swatsmith for the winners having a perfect night at bat getting four for four, including a home run and two doubles. Mike Dziura also hit for the circuit and added a brace of singles.

The fact the No. 6 Repair Depot team are No. 1 Commando R.C.A.F. softball champions for 1944 made little difference to the Trenton "Flyers" last night.

ST. LOUIS BROWNS LOSE TO INDIANS BY 12-7 COUNT

Detroit in St Louis for Series That May Decide Pennant

YANKS SECOND

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Detroit ran head-on into St. Louis Browns' pennant series while the pennant series while the Yankees and Red Sox took on second-division opposition.

If the New Yorkers aren't too tired after climbing the steps from second in fourth and back to second in the last three days, the schedule calling for a six-game home set with the last-place Washington Senators offers a golden opportunity.

Detroit needed to repeat last weekend's three out of four success or be practically counted out of the running.

Although the Tigers put the Browns down for a stiff count in their last series, the season's figures give the league-leaders a 13-6 edge with four to go.

The Browns ran into trouble in Cleveland yesterday, blowing a 6-run slantal lead as the Tribe counted eight times in the eighth to grab a 12-7 decision. Reliefer Jim Bagby took the win over George Caster who replaced starter Mark Kramer.

New York hopped back into the place slot 2 1/2 games by way of slugging Boston, 9-7 although Jimmy Outlaw unloaded two homers and Bob Johnson one in a rousing finish that just missed.

Detroit stumbled against Chicago and bowed to Ed Topal, 8-3. Running out of fielders and batters the Tigers started Johnny Gorsica who absorbed his 10th straight beating. Detroit moves into Washington in a 2-4 verdict over Philadelphia's Luke Hamlin in the other American league.

Chicago dealt a body blow at Pittsburgh's second-place hopes by twice trimming the Pirates, 12-3 and 4-3. Lou Novikoff and Claude Passeau were the winners over Rip Sewell and Ray Starr. In a contest that lasted 3 1/2 hours and included homers by Don Lang, Johnny Rabe Hermanski and Vince DiMaggio.

Cincinnati, rained out at St. Louis, moved to with 2 1/2 games of second spot.

Ben Chapman pitched and batted Brooklyn in a 10-2 slaughter of Philadelphia and the Dodgers stayed 7½ games ahead of the Giants. Chapman's pitching was helped by a 4-run circuit smash by Augie Galan and Dixie Walker.

CHAPTER 4

"The same as what Letty'll have," Ma ordered at the barbecue. Glass of frosted coffee and apple pie."

He looked at me in utter amazement.

"Why, that's exactly what I was going to order," he said. "What's that's uncanny, Letty."

It wasn't uncanny; it was simply deduction. On every visit Pete had said he liked the joint where we were going; that they had really good barbecues, the best frosted coffee in the city, and apple-pies like you really make. (Not my mother. I'd thought, remembering one that had been heavy and cloddy enough for anybody's blitz.) Obviously Peter had sampled every other specialties of the place, which I had observed on reading the menu. He was not fussy. Most of the stuff on order was as familiar to Marvin as to me. I knew what Peter would order.

"Why this is uncanny, Letty," he said again, and was staring at me oddly.

"Isn't it, though?" I murmured, sighing again and looking down at my plate as if it were a crystal ball. "It's embarrassing sometimes. Reading people's minds. I mean, I find such shocking things. For instance, Marvin, I know that the old lady behind that potted palm is thinking, 'I'll get up again and stared sadly at the old lady who had finished her meal and was breathing deep in digestion. 'Precious crone!' I whispered. "Pope Pendleton!"

"Good Lord!" exclaimed Peter. "A nice young old lady like that? Then he turned and eyed me sharply while saying, "Who do you think you're reading?"

"Of course you don't believe me, but I'm not reading, Peter. I can tell you exactly why your throat is bandaged. That is, if you concentrate."

Every bit of color went out of Peter Gibson's face.

"Teth," I declared slowly. "A stit—teeth."

Peter's face couldn't have been seen in a more uniform. "This," he said slowly, "is where I came in" and he reached for his cane—"and I'm leaving."

"Look," he said, getting to his feet. "I fell in love with you right off the bat. But I'll be blasted if I'll marry someone who knows every thing I'm thinking. He reached for his wallet. "I'll was nice knowing you, Letty. And here's the money for the bill...."

I reached up and jerked him back to his bench. "Park it," I said, and my voice was like Mother's. Peter sat down, blinking.

"Suppose you tell me," I went on, "just what did happen to your throat."

"What do you think?"

"I don't know what I think," I said, and that was the truth.

"Do you really know what I think?" he snapped.

"Tell me about the teeth, please, Peter," I said. "I can't read minds. I don't have second sight, Really."

"So you can't read minds, eh? Then how'd you know that there was made this?" He looked confused, and he didn't go on. "Lovely night, isn't it?" he finally said. And those were his last words.

We ate our snack in silence, emerged from the Bar-B-Que and still in silence returned to the Keith house. Peter escorted me to the door and rang the bell. When Marvin Keith opened it Peter gave me a little push which sent me staggering against Marvin. "She's yours," he said. "I can't use her after all." Then he stalked across the driveway, his hands jammed down in his pockets—and was gone.

"I'm a little spurred, you and your boy friend!" asked Marvin, grinning.

I wanted to wrap his grin around his bundle, but I only merged past him and went into the house and up the stairs. Ten or three long minutes I hated Peter Gibson as much as I'd ever loved him. Then I hated him and the love was back, and tears were streaming down my cheeks. I'd never see him again. And I wanted to see him. Peter knew I'd been trying to find out if he were involved in Reginald's murder, and that meant I didn't trust him. But I did! I knew he hadn't killed Reginald. Ha, I was certain he hadn't.

Mary Lake Cramer's door I wiped away my tears and knocked gently. When Lake said, "Come in," I stuck only my red head in and asked how he was.

"Better, Letty," he replied, looking like death warmed over. "My temperature's down to 101. I'll be able to get up tomorrow."

"But you mustn't," I said.

"Nonsense. Million things I want to do for Sandra." His voice thinned and died. For Sandra. The funeral arrangements...."

"Others can take care of all that," I said. "Take it easy, Luke."

My eardrums as a few moments then I went to my room and sat down in the chair before the window, looking right over the spot where Pamela had been murdered. Her body was plain silver in the moon's brilliance. The few stars were radiant, pure, insecure and tremulous. I sat there a long time, trying to figure out the meaning behind the birthday card message from Gladys Newcomb (if it had been from Gladys) which I had found in Reginald's room. But nothing came to me.

I wondered, too, who my second attacker had been and why he—or she—ran at the Keith basement. I thought about everyone connected with the case, going over possible motives and alibis.

Only those playing bridge last night seemed to be really innocent of the crime, but I hadn't eliminated the bridge players altogether. After all, when you're intently interested in a game, you don't keep an eye on the person who has put down his dummy and wandered off to get a drink, or telephone, or sharpen a pencil. You all make the game alone.

I sat there thinking until I had a headache. Finally, Little devils with red-hot hammers were swinging away inside my brain and so I resolved to chuck the whole unofficial investigation. Sergeant Hornblower was getting paid to solve this crime; I wasn't. I'd wash my hands of it very rank. And if I didn't get myself murdered I would probably succeed in my pursuit of a super-grade-A-sleep.

When finally I lay in bed, scrounging around trying to get comfortable, trying to think of things other than with the crime and trying to think only of casual, innocuous things, I found my thoughts veering right back to the mystery. When I drifted off to sleep at last, I was wondering if I'd ever see Peter Gibson again.

I awoke early next morning and found Marvin in the twin bed next to mine and knew why she was there. She had probably come in late from her walk with the Countess and, afraid of being alone but not wanting to disturb me, had climbed into the other bed.

I bathed and dressed quickly, ate breakfast alone in the dining room, and slipped off to the office. There, I promptly asked for a week's leave which was granted. I provided I promised to cover any social functions if the society department should be swamped. I promised, then left the Keith house. Peter was not there. He didn't know I was coming, and found the place crawling with police.

Sergeant Hornblower was closeted with Luke in Luke's room, and a plain-clothes man was sprinkling powder all over the mahogany desk in the library.

I stood there in the arched door way of the library, staring at the officer.

"What's up?" I asked. "What's happened now, for heaven's sake?"

He favored me with a sidelong grunt.

"Water-bugs?" I asked, knowing darned well he was sleuthing for finger-prints.

The detective looked at me with disgust. "This desk was torn inside out last night. Look here. Papers all scattered everywhere." The sleuth just came across this mess and me gave us a ring."

He glared at me. "What were you after?" he asked me.

"Me? Why me?" I answered, ungrammatically.

"I think you can answer that better than I, Miss."

"Why, I haven't been near that desk," I said indignantly.

"No? And I suppose you didn't mess up the books yesterday, pile them all up on the floor. You're not looking for a thing are you? I told my boss, Sergeant Hornblower had squealed! Between the butler squealing about the books and gladys squealing about my change of dress last night, the law might assuming me for an electric chair in no time.

Suddenly Reginald and Gladys vanished from my mind, and my eyes bugged out.

There was something that the man hadn't yet noticed. A very tiny bit of something just left of the desk and almost invisible on the gay red and blue pattern of the Aubusson rug. My first impulse was to sweep down on that object—a full little object and pocket it. But I did nothing so rash. Maybe I was the only one who noticed it.

I stuntered over to the detective, trying to fail smiles and interest. Before his shoulder, I asked him to explain just how you went about the business of collecting finger-prints and wasn't he smart to know how to do it. He was breaking some kind of a record in fat talking that I distinctly turned my ankle, stumbled, my arms flailing about desperately as what I hoped looked like genuine panic. Then I landed squarely on my rear license plate, the palm of my right hand over the little object. Father, When I finally struggled to my feet, the feather was secure in the pocket of my sweater coat.

"Hurt yourself?" asked the detective when he was all blasted suspicion, looking swiftly around the room to see if I had disturbed—or detected, his attention from something important.

I hadn't, he went back to his pondering. I watched him a moment—longer, then I turned and went out of the room. The little red feather felt hot under my hand. For I knew where I'd last seen it. Sticking jauntily from the band of Peter Gibson's straw Panama felt!

I couldn't wait to present it to him, and demand explanations. I hurried out of the solarium door, through the grim path where Pamela had met her mysterious death, and ran the rest of the way to the hotel. Peter opened his hotel door to me and without a word I shook the feather under his nose. He drew back scowling.

"I found it last some time last night, didn't you? I queried icily. "Or were you very careless in visiting that desk in the library. All right, let's have it. Where were you last night?"

I broke off, swallowing hard. For there on the bureau was Peter's straw hat—a little red feather flaying jauntily from the band. I went to the bureau, and picked up the hat and examined it carefully.

"Shame on you!" exclaimed Peter, behind me.

I turned around but I couldn't bring my eyes to meet his white mumbling. "I'm sorry."

"You're doing your confounded to pin this crime on me. All that talk about second-sight had myself and now this feather. Why, Letty —what—"

I finally met his eyes.

"Well, what can I say, I think, Letty?" he asked gently.

"I'm sorry," I said again. "Honestly, I am."

"Okay," Peter laughed. "Now run along and powder your nose. This place for a young woman as eleven o'clock is no morning for any other time for that matter."

And he set me out in the hall, bodily, grinned at me and closed the door in my face.

I went down in the elevator to the lobby and headed for the cigarette concession. I was standing there feeling as low and treacherous as a Jap peace envoy, when I saw Dr. Wayne Courtney in reflection in the mirror beyond the glass counter—and my heart leaped (and probably had been for some time) plunging my face in silence. I turned and faced him.

Whereupon Dr. Courtney said without the slightest preamble: "Letty—keep out of this murder mystery. It isn't funny."

His eyes widened. I was stunned. How did he know? I was stunned by his cool, level tone. He'd been the prowler, or the man in the basement last night.

"You're such a kid, Letty," he went on. "You're too young to be—"

"B-b-umped off!" I said. "Something like that, eh?" he answered.

"I just haven't really been sleuthing, except for myself," I explained, and wondered if that squeak was really my voice. "I'm suspect and if I—if I can pick up anything to clear myself, I'm entitled to do that, now—can you?"

This was right in the murderer, I thought! He doesn't want to bump me off because I'm—pretty! He's trying to let know that if I get in his way he'll have to bump me off.

My blood was freezing when he said: "I can't. I'm in the police, Letty. Please."

"Yes. Yes, of course, I will," I replied. Not even as I spoke I knew I was going to check up on Dr. Wayne Courtney and keep special watch on him...I also made mental note to ask my parents if I'd sprung from a long line of congenital idiots.

After I left Dr. Wayne Courtney I went straight to my own apartment, let Mother and Dad the last details on the murder and popped the question about hereditary idiots. Mother was instantly all family and outraged. Our ancestors, she informed me, had been people of the highest intellectual history makers, P.F.W.A. members, governors and what have you. When she finally relinquished her tenacious hold on her pride and subject, she went off to romp at a woman's club and Dad went roaring around the lobby to give the marathon female a run for there a good looks. I piled pillows on the old Virginia sofa and got to work on Peter.

First, I called the Emergency Hospital and learned that Dr. Courtney had no patient there with a brain tumor and surgery and one. Then I found out about why he'd returned to Washington from Europe. I decided darkly about that for a moment—and then I had an idea!

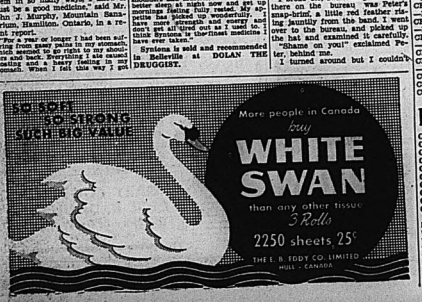
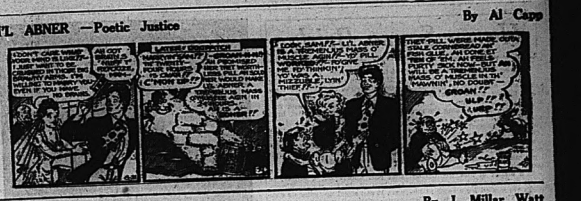
Knew Syntona Must Be Good When So Many People Recommended It



"Now It Has Given Me Grand Relief From Gas in Stomach, Bloat, Dizzy Spells and Sore, Stiff Back and Muscles," Says Grateful Man.

"When I read in the paper what men and women living right here were saying about Syntona helping them in so many ways, I felt it must be a good medicine," said Mr. John J. Murphy, Mountain Sanitorium, Hamilton, Ontario, in a recent report.

"For a year or longer I had been suffering from gas in stomach, bloat, could hardly get to sleep at night because of dizzy spells with sick headaches and my back and muscles would feel stiff and sore. At night when I'd get to bed I'd toss around and couldn't sleep. My appetite was poor and I felt tired and blue. I was troubled with no pep or energy.



"Then one night reading Syntona a short time, I decided that I can't have any worse trouble than I am suffering from, so I sent for a bottle. Indigestion and bloat left, dizzy spells left, and I had that pain and soreness in my back and muscles disappear. I now get a better sleep, eat anything and get up feeling fine and fully rested. My appetite and digestion are splendid. I have more strength and energy and feel just like a new man. I used to think Syntona is the finest medicine I ever took.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Need for Plasma Has Increased State Officials

Despite the vastly increased need of blood plasma resulting from the greater number of casualties being reported from the battle fronts as the invasion gains momentum, the good news of the Allied advance in the war has had a direct effect on the number of donors attending blood donor clinics, it is stated by Red Cross officials.

The need for dried blood serum has increased rather than lessened with the rising tempo of war and clinics are therefore trying to keep donations up to the quota, given them in order that Ontario donations may be maintained at 12,000 weekly.

Belleville and district residents due for donations, as well as those not yet having donated are urged by local blood donor clinic officials to attend the next clinic which will be held Tuesday evening, Sept. 5th, and on Sunday morning, Sept. 10th. Officials were gratified at the turn out of Belleville donors at last Sunday's clinic, namely 56.

Police Interrupt Girls' Feast In Strange Home

Mystery surrounded the repeated entrance into the residence at 180 West Bridge Street, so much so that the occupants reported the matter to police. Constables proved persons were undoubtedly entering the home and after much search found themselves at home by raiding the ice box, taking the choicest morsels of food and generally making themselves at home.

After several such attempts police entered the scene and conducted a little private investigation on their own with the result Inspector F. C. Hayes heard the charges of the suspected culprits yesterday afternoon and red handed. They proved not to be two hen-lesed-aged girls who were making a practice of waiting until the family residing at the above address left home and then the little misses would climb through a small cellar window and after gaining entrance to the house, pretty much helped themselves at home. After being apprehended the two girls were given a stern warning by police and agreed to remain away from the above address in the future.

17 Jap Vessels Including Two Warships Sunk

Washington, Aug. 31 (AP)—Destruction of 17 Japanese vessels, including two warships, by American submarines operating in enemy waters, was announced by the navy yesterday.

Destruction of the two Nipponese destroyers brings to 56 the number of Japanese warships thus far sunk by American submarine action.

The latest bag of the submarines included two tankers from the badly depleted fleet of Japanese fuel-carrying vessels.

The total included also 13 cargo vessels.

The navy also reported American bombers sank one Japanese vessel and damaged three others in raids on the north Pacific Kurile Islands Sunday.

Six Newmen Are Suspended

Allied Supreme Headquarters, Aug. 31 (AP)—Six correspondents accredited to Supreme Headquarters have been suspended in Paris and ordered to return to London for investigation of charges that they evaded censorship in filing dispatches, it was announced yesterday.

Names of the correspondents involved will not be announced until the investigation ends. A high ranking military officer at Supreme Headquarters said none of the Associated Press staff which entered Paris was involved.

Some of the persons figuring in the case are accused of making an uncensored broadcast direct from Paris after having agreed to submit the usual practice in the European theatre of operations, to censorship material for field censorship.

Further comment was declined at headquarters until after the inquiry.

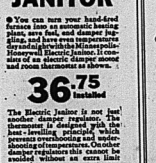
'Buzz' Beurling Applies For U.S. Citizenship

Montreal, Aug. 31. (CP)—Pit.-Lt. George Beurling, Canadian fighter ace, left Montreal today by train for New York with signed and sealed official preliminary papers for U.S. citizenship in his pocket. Beurling, who shot down more than 33 planes while serving with the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F., said he had always wanted to be an American citizen. "and now is my chance".



He said he was going to see a U.S. citizen official who "has something to do with the U.S.—China Ferry Service" to see if he could get into the Chinese air force more quickly.

"Barring that, I will join the U.S. air corps, I would automatically be an American citizen after 90 days. I might do that too, they're a good outfit to be with".

He said he had definitely decided he would re-fight the Axis but was not too sure that he would be with success" in the United States.

"I don't know yet that all this will get me to China any faster", "But I have been out of action for a long time now. The first five days here in Canada were enough to make me itch for action and here I have been running around doing nothing for about a week. I had enough of it and I hope I make it faster with contacts on the other side of the line".
